Bellavance Scholarship Established by Foundation

To recognize the outstanding accomplishments of Dr. Thomas E. Bellavance during his first 10 years as president of Salisbury State, a $100,000 endowment has been established in his honor.

Bellavance was presented the honor at the 11th annual SSU Foundation Gala held Friday, May 30.

"I'm dumbfounded, to be honest with you," Bellavance said about the honor. "I just think it's fantastic that they've seen fit to do it and to do it in a way that enhances the academic potential of the institution."

The endowment will create the Presidential Honors Program. It will be so named until Bellavance retires, after which it will be called the Thomas E. Bellavance Honors Program.

The program will provide tuition scholarship for one freshman scholar each year, with the first scholarship to be awarded this year.

The endowment will also provide financial support for the Honors program with computer hardware and software, allow Honors students the opportunity to attend regional and national conferences, establish a lecture series on scholarly topics, and provide faculty stipends for the development of new Honors courses.

Henry Hanna III, president of the SSU Foundation, said members of the Foundation discussed different ways of recognizing Bellavance's efforts to improve the University, and knew he would never accept a personal gift.

Under Bellavance's tenure the University's SAT scores rose from 848 in 1980 to 1,019 in 1990, while applications increased by more than 3,000 during the same time period.

Salisbury State achieved University status in 1988 and the Foundation's assets rose from $32,261 in 1980 to more than $10 million this year.

"I think if you look at the student body, at the average SAT scores, the academic credentials of the students coming in—they are attracting stronger students from all over the region," Hanna said.

Henson School Adds Environmental Health To Degree Offerings

The first four-year study program at a Maryland university leading to a bachelor's degree in environmental health will be launched in September in the Henson School of Science and Technology.

The new program, which received authorization recently from Maryland's Higher Education Commission, is designed to prepare students for a variety of careers in the expanding environmental health field.

As concern about the environment mounts, job opportunities in the field are opening up in federal, state and local governments, and in the private sector, said Dr. John Molenda, SSU biology professor and coordinator of the new program.

The aim is to prepare students for such specialties as: air, water or soil contamination control; solid or toxic waste management; workplace safety; food inspection; radiation; and many others.

Cyclists Get Scenic Ride in Sea Gull Century

One of the region's most scenic bike rides transversing terrain "as flat and fertile as a slice of Kansas set down in the mid-Atlantic states" affords cyclists the opportunity to enjoy the Eastern Shore's pristine beauty at its loveliest.

The Sea Gull Century and Metric Century, a pair of bike rides, one just over 100 miles and the other a metric century (around 62 miles), will be held on Saturday, October 12. Sponsored by the SSU Cycling Club, both rides promise to be a sublime trek down country roads and past solemn beaches, with outstanding support services if last year's initial Sea Gull Century is any indication.

The inaugural Century attracted 624 cyclists from 10 states and Washington, D.C., on a fall day that began with a hurricane watch and ended with gloriously blue skies.

Typical comments from last year's bikers were: "best organized," "outstanding sag stops," "great food, especially the apple pies" and "excellent route for a first-time century." As the headquarters for the League of American Wheelmen's 1989 National Rally, Salisbury State received an abundance of plaudits for the

Bentley Scholarships For Music Majors

Nettie Bentley

A scholarship created specifically for students pursuing the Bachelor of Arts in music is now being offered here. The Nettie C. Bentley Scholarship will be awarded annually to those who show promise of academic achievement and outstanding musical abilities.

As a result of the $15,000 bequest to the SSU Foundation from the estate of Bentley, former campus librarian, scholarships of $350-$700 will be available to students enrolled or accepted in to the University's Bachelor of Arts in music program.

"I think it is great that Nettie Bentley has helped us by creating a scholarship fund for music students," said Dr. Ray Zeigler, SSU associate professor of music. "Students are chomping at the bit for a chance at the Bentley Scholarships."

Many knew Bentley as the librarian of the campus elementary school, a laboratory for classroom teaching in existence until the mid-1960s. She worked there from 1954-1965 when she transferred to the college library where she worked until her retirement in 1975.

Dr. Jessie Fleming, SSU professor of music, said she wasn't surprised that her friend donated money to the Music Department.

"Nettie was always a strong supporter of our Music Department. She played the piano, but always wanted to play more than one instrument," Fleming said. "She went to all of the recitals and programs held on the University campus. Even though she was an outstanding librarian, her real love was music."

The Nettie C. Bentley Scholarships are a symbol of her perpetual support for the SSU music program.

Applicants for the music scholarship will be judged on their academic achievement which will be assessed through evaluations of their high school or college/university transcripts.

An audition will be required according to the department's requirements for the Bachelor of Arts in music. Applicants also must submit a brief essay (not more than 500 words) which discusses their career goals.

Two sealed letters of recommendation from individuals who are qualified to assess the student's musical abilities also must be submitted.

The deadline for applying for the first Bentley Scholarship is November 15. All materials must be submitted directly to the Department of Music. Scholarships will be awarded annually, but students must reapply every year.

For more information about the Nettie C. Bentley Scholarship, contact the Music Department at 543-6385.

'Something for Everyone' Atrium Gallery Theme

Featuring primarily one-person exhibits and University-related art sales, the upcoming Atrium Gallery season will have "something for everyone," according to Donna Forgash, gallery director.

From September 2-25, an exhibit sponsored by the National Historical Records and Publications Commission and the Maryland State Archives will be one view. Called "A Priceless Legacy: Charles Carroll of Carrollton's Papers and the History of Maryland," the exhibit features the papers and documents of Charles Carrollton, one of the wealthiest families in Maryland. On Tuesday, September 17, at 7:30 p.m., in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center, Sally Mason, assistant editor of the Carroll Papers, will present a slide-lecture on the exhibit.

From September 27-October 3, 17 prints from George Catlin's North American Indian Portfolio will be exhibited. A daily video program will accompany the exhibit. On the weekend of October 4 and 5, Marson Galleries, Ltd. from Baltimore will exhibit and have for sale original American, European and Oriental etchings, woodcuts, lithographs, serigraphs and watercolors.

To commemorate the 50th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor, the SSU Research Center for Delmarva History and Culture will mount an exhibition of military uniforms, photographs, accessories and documents called "Delmarvans Go To War." On display from October 10-31, several lectures will be on schedule to accompany the exhibit.

Following a "Contemporary Poster Sale" on November 4 and 5, James Burgess and Bonnie Brooks will present a display of pottery and paintings from November 8-26. This collaboration of two area artists working in different mediums will demonstrate how a common theme can be expressed in unique and exciting ways.

Finally from December 7-13, the Art Department will hold its annual "Student Scholarship Sale."

The Atrium Gallery is located in the Guerrieri Center next to the bookstore. It is open daily from 11 a.m.-4 p.m. unless otherwise noted. The gallery is open to the public; there is no admission charge.

The SSU Gallery, formerly located in Blackwell Library, is closed for the semester and reopens this spring in the new academic facility, Fulton Hall.

SSU In The USSR

Though it may be cold and snowy, the heart of Russia is warm and friendly. Come, find out for yourself when SSU goes to the Soviet Union, January 17-27.

Following in the footsteps of those intrepid SSU students who have gone before, you'll have the chance to visit the capitals of the old and new Russia. Kiev is where it all began over 1,000 years ago. Today it is the third largest city in the Soviet Union and is the warm-hearted capital of the Ukraine. Leningrad (St. Petersburg) became the capital under Tsar Peter the Great and remained so until after the revolution of 1917. Here, in Russia's second city, you can see magnificent museums and palaces and enjoy the thoroughly Westernized atmosphere of this Venice of the north.

Moscow, the largest city, is the center of a rapidly changing country. Marvelous buildings, an electric atmosphere, here is where perestroika and glasnost are centered in this rapidly changing country. And you don't have to be George Bush to see it.

The study-tour is sponsored by the History Department. The instructor for the course and group leader is Dr. Rober Berry, who teaches Russian history and has led several groups to the Soviet Union in the past. The total cost for the tour is $1,500, an affordable rate with everything included. The study-tour is open to all students, faculty, staff and friends of SSU. For more information attend a meeting on Wednesday, September 11, at 7:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall, room 116 or contact Berry at 543-6251.

German Club Interest Meeting Set

The officers of the German Club invite all faculty and students, both German and non-German speaking, to an interest meeting on Wednesday, September 18, at 7 p.m. in the Pocomoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center.

The topic of discussion will be the club's upcoming "Oktoberfest 1991." This year's event is certain to be the biggest ever.

Kimmel on Art Council

James A. Grazier, president of International Art Galleries' Association (IAGA) of Berlin, recently announced the appointment of Dr. Kent N. Kimmel, SSU art professor, to its advisory council.

Kimmel, who has previously acted as a film script reader/reviewer for the IAGA, has been named to the advisory council to participate in the planning of the "World Arts Triennial" (WATS-96), an arts, cultural and entertainment position, "honoring the spirit of freedom in arts and culture," to be held in Orlando, FL, in 1996. Kimmel will be part of a team of artists, art educators and art administrators who will oversee planning and production of that part of the WATS-96 exposition focusing on two- and three-dimensional (visual) art of the 20th century. In addition to the inclusion of architecture, music, drama, dance, fashion, literature and entertainment, the visual arts component to WATS-96 plans to exhibit and market an estimated 25,000 works of 6,000 artists from 125 countries worldwide.

The IAGA was founded in 1986 to enhance the prestige of member galleries worldwide through creative, active programs; open channels of communication among galleries around the world; develop a network for the exchange of art works and artists; develop, enhance and maintain high standards through a global code of ethics; and encourage art appreciation through research, symposia and international exhibitions.

Henson Reorganization

Effective July 1, departments within the Henson School of Science were reorganized. Computer science and mathematical sciences were merged to form the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science. Dr. Robert M. Tardiff is the chair of the combined department.

The Department of Chemistry and Physics was divided into separate departments. The Department of Chemistry has Dr. Frederick A. Kundell as chair and the Department of Physics has Dr. C. Richard McKenzie as chair.

Regional Tech Council Serves Breakfast Kick-off

If someone offered you a set of valuable business tools that would benefit your company while giving a boost to the economy of the lower Shore, would be you interested?

If you would, and your company manufactures a product or provides technology-related services, the Lower Eastern Shore Regional Technology Council (LESRTC) has a proposal for you.

One of six such councils established across the state by the Office of Technology Development of the Maryland Department of Economic and Employment Development, the LESRTC serves Somerset, Wicomico and Worcester counties. It is designed to improve the economic development climate for technology-related businesses in the region, and provide information and assistance to existing businesses at the same time. Information on state and federal assistance programs, assistance with employee training, establishment of active business networks, and access to the latest technology being developed at the many federal labs and universities will all be on the LESRTC menu.

J. Warren Keller, director of the LESRTC, is preparing an invitation to 400 companies to attend a kick-off breakfast. Keller says that at the LESRTC breakfast meeting in September current plans for the Council will be outlined. Keller adds that while the LESRTC mission is clear, it will take its cue with respect to specific approach from the area businesses.

"The Council has three primary objectives," according to Keller. They are to stimulate the growth and development of technological businesses on the lower Shore; to help all businesses to apply the technology available to them to make improvements in areas like productivity and safety; and to encourage networking among the private sector personnel and those in government in economic development, education and elected positions.

Warren Rosenthal, director of economic development in Worcester County and a member of the LESRTC Advisory Board, is pleased to see these efforts given priority. "This initiative began at the state level," Rosenthal explained. "There has been an on-going discussion over the years—more informal than formal—to identify the present and, more important, the expected needs of industry for the next five years. Five years is really about as far as you want to project.

"You can take that information and begin working backwards," he continued. "What kind of education do we need to provide our workforce with the skills it needs to meet those needs?"

Another Advisory Board member is Nola Arnold, who as dean of community and continuing education at Wor-Wic Tech Community College has been working to answer that question for local businesses since 1976. She is looking forward to seeing the Council expand on the concept of training local people for local jobs.

"Everyone is looking for more trained people," said Arnold. She has been impressed by the bright, talented people here on the Shore.

Keller explained that improved technological training is just the beginning. "We plan to form county round tables and regional forums that will meet on a regular basis.

"At those meetings members can discuss the problems we all share, from waste management and industrial safety to improving productivity," Keller said. "They can share the solutions that they have found to those problems. We will bring in speakers who specialize in issues that local businesses are facing."

And there's more.

The Lower Eastern Shore Regional Technology Council will host seminars for companies in the area on topics of general technological interest, on better management strategies or about matching grants or special loan programs. The Council will conduct surveys to assess existing technology, training and education programs and make the results of those surveys available to members. Members can arrange to have specialists analyze their company's productivity and get advice to make improvements—at no cost.

In his experience in economic development, Rosenthal has seen that there are many valuable resources available to area businesses. He sees part of the LESRTC's role as a clearinghouse of that information. "We need to focus those resources and get the word out," he said. "Accessing the system itself is difficult."

Getting access to the Council will not be difficult. From his office at the Perdue School of Business, Keller will publish a newsletter keeping members informed in the latest technology—from high to low tech—and fill them in on what's available. The quarterly publication will carry news ranging from local advancements to current federal funding opportunities.

Designing its programs to suit local needs, the LESRTC will be many things to many people. However, Keller is quick to define what it is not.

The LESRTC is not restricted to high tech. The technological advancements it hopes to bring to the lower Shore will have applications to businesses employing any level of technical complexity from the most simplistic to the most sophisticated.

Keller adds that the LESRTC is also not limited by geography. He'll keep in contact with members in all three lower Shore counties, sharing news with area businesses and drawing on the considerable resources of educational institutions in the region.

The best place for those invited to learn more about the Lower Eastern Shore Regional Technology Council will be at the kick-off breakfast at 8 a.m. on Thursday, September 26, at the University of Maryland Eastern Shore. Membership applications will be included with the invitations and application for membership can be made any time before or after the breakfast meeting. There will be a nominal fee for memberships.

Attendance at the breakfast is free and does not imply any commitment with respect to Council membership.

The invitation to breakfast opens the door both ways. Businesses will have a chance not only to learn what the Council can do for them today, but to tell the Council what needs to be done in the future.

Further information about the Regional Technology Council may be obtained by calling 548-4419.

Environmental Mathematics In Formative Stages

Termites have infested a stick-built cape cod house. If undetected, how long would it be before the bungalow becomes structually unsound?

All economies including the United States' run on renewable resources (basically the sun), and non-renewable resources (basically fossil fuels). As fossil fuels deplete and become more expensive what will happen to the economy?

Providing a correct answer to these questions may seem impossible without more facts, but Salisbury State professor Ben Fusaro thinks a new field can help answer these questions: environmental mathematics.

"Environmental mathematics is not what the math professor calls "white coat" science which is abstract and detached. It's more akin to engineering, Fusaro said. Just as an engineer is concerned with designing a building which is structurally sound and healthy for occupants, an environmental mathematician must have a commitment to a safe and healthy environment.

Continuing the comparison, "Engineering mathematics is a mathematics that engineers have found useful in application. Books are written on engineering mathematics. So environmental mathematics is a lexicon of mathematics that scientists working with the environment find useful," Fusaro said. And much of it is accessible to college freshmen and even high school students.

The SSU professor recently lectured on environmental mathematics at St. Mary's College in Notre Dame, IN, for high school and college educators from throughout the Midwest. He also has succeeded in having the topic of environmental mathematics placed on the agenda of the Mathematical Association of America, the country's largest professional association of mathematicians. In January they meet in Baltimore. "I feel mathematics has been the slowest field to respond to the problems of the environment," Fusaro said. "Other academic disciplines, even music and psychology, have been more responsive. But I'm hoping what happens at the MAA January meeting will change that."

At the meeting Fusaro will be teaching students methods for examining problems like termites in houses or the money-time-energy relationship, which can be applied to fossil fuels. "We want to get mathematicians interested in topics like these," he said.

Modern Languages Advanced Placement Exams

Students who have previously studied French, German or Spanish are urged to take the advanced placement examination offered by the Department of Modern Languages. Students may be eligible for academic credit if the results of the examination indicate a high level of achievement.

Students may claim the credits awarded on the basis of the examination by completing one semester of language study with a grade C or better, by paying a fee of $20, and by bringing the receipt to the chair of modern languages, Holloway Hall 383.

The Advanced Placement Examination will be given on Wednesday, September 4, and Thursday, September 5, from 4-5 p.m. in the following rooms: French, Potomac Hall 118; German, Potomac Hall 119; and Spanish, Devilbiss Hall 207 on Wednesday, September 4, and Potomac Hall 120 on Thursday, September 5.

Credits acquired through the Advanced Placement exam may be used to fulfill the requirements for a minor in French, Spanish or German.

Native speakers are not eligible for the exam. For details call 543-6341.

Faculty 'Reconnecting With The Natural World'

There are two unusual aspects of Faculty Development Day, "Reconnecting with the Natural World," on Friday, August 30: it was organized by members of a Global Seminar and its goal is to begin a dialogue that has the potential for leading to interesting changes in our curriculum.

The fall 1990 Global Seminar, "The Tragedy of the Commons," was led by Dr. Fran Kane. The synergistic energy was quite high, and there was early consensus that we should develop a course that dealt with some of the key seminar concepts—individual and communal responsibility, our relation with the natural world and values. Later we agreed to ask the Faculty Develpment Committee to let us organize a program based on ideas that emerged from our discussion. Dean DeFino and his committee were very receptive, so we began organizing a program, which came to be called "Reconnecting with the Natural World." Friday's invited speaker, David Orr of Oberlin College, was chosen because he had done faculty workshops that dealt with related themes.

This phrase, "Reconnecting with the Natural World," was the subtitle of a paper written by a member of the seminar. The main title was "Move over, Homo sapiens." (The main title and subtitle have since been interchanged.) The goal of the paper is to induce changes in the curriculum. It is far more radical than the anti-Western-male programs of Stanford University and elsewhere, yet it is less divisive. Moreover, it does not require extensive restructuring or re-labeling of courses. It does ask for a change in outlook from the current highly anthropocentric world view to one that takes account of nature (or Nature, for those with a mystical bent). There is potential for a great deal of creativity to emerge from the humanistic-naturistic tension, and every department can participate.

Department chairs can encourage their faculty to attend the invited speaker and the workshops by example and exhortation. An added non-academic, non-intellectual incentive for you and your faculty to attend is the availability of attractive, low-price (approximately $5), high-grade "Reconnectiing with Nature" T-shirts.

Automatic Teller Machine (ATM)

Early in the fall semester Maryland National Bank will install automatic teller machines (ATMS) on the campus outside the north side of the Guerrieri University Center. The ATM will accept MOST, CIRRUS, PLUS, VISA, MASTERCARD, AMERICAN EXPRESS and DISCOVER cards. With the advent of ATMS on campus, the Book Rack will no longer cash personal checks.

For students with a college account at Maryland National Bank, ATM transactions are free.

For information on how to get a Maryland National Bank ATM card and how to open a college account with unlimited ATM use, contact Patricia Parker at the South Salisbury branch at 742-8672.

Those who bank with a financial institution other than Maryland National Bank may be charged by their institution for using the campus ATMS.

UAS Officers Appointed

Four students were recently appointed officers of the SSU Union of African-American Students for the 1991-92 academic year.

The purpose of the Union of African-American Students is to provide a better understanding and a closer relationship among all racial groups and to attune the University and the community to the needs of black students and other minorities.

Membership is open to all students enrolled at SSU. The organization attempts to instill self-awareness and racial pride in its members through a series of programs and special events.

Sea Gull Sports Roundup

With the start of the 1991 fall sports season approaching, most Sea Gull teams have already begun preparing for their first game. Preseason practice started on August 20 for the football team and shortly thereafter for most of the other fall squads, notably field hockey, soccer, volleyball, cross country and women's tennis. The first event of the new season is on September 6, with the volleyball team participating in the Messiah College Invitational Tournament.

The football team is coming off a 1-8 season with high hopes for a better record in Coach Joe Rotellini's second season. The season begins on September 14 at C.W. Post.

The field hockey team hopes to make its eighth straight trip to the NCAA Tournament in 1991. Coach Dawn Chamberlin's team, which finished 13-4-1 last year, opens its season on September 11 at Catholic University.

Coach Gerry DiBartolo's soccer squad posted a 7-8-1 record last season, but figures to have a successful campaign in 1991 with a number of talented returnees back. SSU plays in the Randolph-Macon Invitational on September 7-8.

The volleyball team won a school-record 35 matches in Ed Hoeck and Bridget Benshetler's initial season as co-head coaches. SSU hopes to claim its fifth straight ESAC championship this season.

The cross country squads feature a number of new runners in addition to a heavy roster of returnees as Coach Jerry Thomas begins his third year. The Gulls race in the Essex Invitational on September 7 to start the year.

Coach Ray Still's women's tennis team moves to an exclusively fall schedule this year. SSU finished 9-4 last year while splitting matches between the fall and spring semesters.

Student Health Insurance

Evidence of health insurance is not required in order to enroll for classes at Salisbury State. Staff in the Health Center recommend that students have health insurance coverage by obtaining the coverage on parent's/family's policy or by contacting an insurance company of choice for information and possible enrollment in a plan.

Welsh Essays

Jim Welsh, associate professor of English, published two essays during the summer.

The first, "An Arduous Journey," appears in a special issue of The Williamette (OR) Journal of the Liberal Arts. The title of the special issue is "Peter Watkins' The Journey: A Film in the Global Interest," concerning a 14 1/2-hour peace film that premiered at the Berlin Film Festival in February 1987. Welsh, who is also the author of "Peter Watkins: A Guide to References and Resources," was on location as an academic observor while the film was being shot. In July he conducted a workshop on "The Journey" at the Institut fur den Wissenschaftlichen Film in Goettingen, Germany.

The second Welsh essay, "Stephen Peet," is published in the July-August issue of Films in Review in New York City. It is focused primarily on "The Talkies Come to Britain," a film Peet made for the British Broadcasting Corporation in 1971 as part of his "Yesterday's Witness" television series. At the Goettingen Film Conference Peet spoke in the same documentary workshop just before Welsh gave his presentation on Watkins.

Peet appeared as a guest lecturer at Salisbury State in 1990 and most recently, last spring. Dr. Kenneth Nollege, who edited The Williamette Journal special issue, spoke on Watkins at the June Conference on Literature and Film sponsored by Literature/Film Quarterly and Salisbury State.

Business Honor Society Recognizes Mabe, Students

Donald W. Mabe, recently retired president and chief executive officer of Perdue Farms Incorporated, was a recent honorary inductee into the Salisbury State chapter of Delta Mu Delta, a national honor society in business administration.

He was invited to become an honorary member of Delta Mu Delta in recognition of his accomplishments and contributions to the business and local communities.

"Mr. Mabe's extraordinary accomplishments as a business executive and his generous and steadfast support for the community and its organizations provide an exemplary role model for this year's inductees," said Dr. Robert C. Winder, former SSU faculty advisor to Delta Mu Delta.

A native of Kernersville, NC, Mabe joined 39 student inductees in ceremonies held on the Salisbury State campus.

After receiving a Bachelor of Science in poultry science from North Carolina State University, Mabe served two years in the U.S. Infantry and was discharged with the rank of captain.

In 1957 Mabe joined Perdue Farms as a broiler supervisor and served in various capacities before becoming president and CEO in 1988.

Mabe's dedication to the poultry industry was acknowledged in 1986 when he received the Distinguished Alumnus Award from the North Carolina State School of Agriculture. In March 1990 the Tri-County District of the Boy Scouts of America also honored Mabe with the Distinguished Citizen Award. In April 1990 Mabe received the Salisbury Rotary Club's Four-Way Test Award.

An active man in diverse areas of the community, Mabe is a member of Perdue's board of directors, the Salisbury State University Foundation and the advisory board of First National Bank of Maryland.

He is also a board member of the National Broiler Council, a member of the board of directors of Delmarva Power, a member of the Greater Salisbury Committee and vice president and board member of the Mid-Delmarva YMCA.

Peninsula General Hospital Medical Center recently elected Mabe as chairman of the board. He also served as this year's fund-drive chairman for the PGHMC Critical Response Campaign.

Mabe and his wife, Flo, the parents of four children, live in the Princess Anne area.

Delta Mu Delta, founded in 1913, recognizes business administration students who have distinguished themselves scholastically and possess the character and leadership abilities to shape the future of society.

There are local chapters at approximately 110 universities and colleges in the United States with over 49,000 alumni of Delta Mu Delta.

Lawler Published

Ellen Lawler, assistant professor of biology, with colleagues at The Raptor Center, University of Minnesota, has two papers published in the most recent issue of Archives of Environmental Contamination and Toxicology.

The papers report on studies regarding the effects of exposure to low levels of lead on production of hemoglobin, immune function and digestive function in hawks.

"In the wild, birds of prey such as bald eagles are exposed to lead shot when they feed on waterfowl which have died of lead poisoning or been shot and not retrieved by hunters," said Lawler. The purpose of the work was to determine possible results of such exposure using hawks as a model for eagles.

"Of the parameters studied," said Lawler, "hemoglobin synthesis was most sensitive to lead exposure and was significantly depressed with exposure to very low lead levels." The study also showed depressed immune function after continued exposure to lead.

"Although lead shot use has dramatically decreased in recent years as a result of federal and state rulings, lead shot remains in the environment and may possibly effect wildlife for years to come," said Lawler.

Affirmative Action Analyzed by NPR

For a full week in September, National Public Radio and WSCL (89.5 F.M.) will air a series of reports on the successes, controversies, backlashes and dilemmas that have accompanied the implementation of affirmative-action programs in the United States during the past few decades.

Titled "The Great Divide: Affirmation Action in America," the series airs the week of September 15-22 on NPR's newsmagazines "All Things Considered," "Morning Edition" and "Weekend Edition." "All Things Considered" is broadcast from 5-6:30 p.m. "Morning Edition" comes on at 6 a.m. weekdays and 8 a.m. on weekends.

This is the third in a series of NPR special projects. The first two projects, focusing on issues effecting youth, aired in September 1990 ("Class of 2000: The Prejudice Puzzle") and in April 1991 ("Family Stories").

"The Great Divide" series will examine the role of affirmative-action programs and their effect on politics, the workplace, education and employment.

Senkbeil Published

The May issue of the Journal of Chemical Education includes an article by Dr. Edward Senkbeil of the Chemistry Department.

The article reports the results of a chemistry safety survey of 18 local high schools (Arcadia, Cambridge North Dorchester, Chincoteague, Crisfield, Delmar, Easton, James M. Bennett Senior, Laurel, Mardela, Nandua, Parkside, Pittsville Middle School, Pocomoke, Snow Hill, Stephen Decatur, St. Michaels, Washington and Wicomico Senior). The survey was conducted to determine the level of need for teacher safety training and the present status of safety in the high school chemistry class.

"The continuing discoveries of more hazardous properties of chemicals, the environmental problems of hazardous chemical storage and disposal, and the increasing possibility for negligence in instructing science safely have made scientists increasingly safety conscious," said Senkbiel. The survey indicated that although the level of teacher safety awareness varied greatly, the chemistry teachers were very much interested in safety training and programs.

To address the need for student safety training, the Chemistry Department at Salisbury State has recently included in its curriculum a laboratory safety course. According to Senkbeil (who teaches the courses), "The students are introduced to the common hazards of chemicals, including their proper storage, handling and disposal. Appropriate safety equipment in the laboratory and federal and state laws governing the management of hazardous chemicals are also discussed."

From comments on written student evaluations, the students have found the course to informative and helpful.

Small at Institute

Dr. Clara L. Small, assistant professor of history, participated in the five-week American Dance Festival's Summer Humanities Institute at Duke University. Small was one of 24 college and university professors selected to participate in the nationwide program.

The American Dance Festival is one of the leading arts and cultural institutions designed for college and university teachers. The title for the 1991 Institute was "Interpreting the African-American Experience Through the Performing Arts: 1890-1990." The Institute's main goal was to illuminate the African-American experience from 1890 to present, through a humanities based examination of African-American contributions to music, theater and dance. The Institute aimed at enriching the teaching of the humanities by exploring the interaction of the performing arts with literary, historical and philosophical inquiries.

It is expected that the Institute's work will assist the teaching of African-American studies for those who participate and for those whom they may influence. The Institute is supported by a major grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

While attending the Institute, performers from 42 countries worked with the participants. Included among the performers were international directors, dancers, lecturers and dance critics. Among the renown performers, playwrights and directors were Dr. Peal Primus, who recently received a Presidential Medal from President Bush; John A. Ross, Joe Nash, Liz Lerman and the Dance Exchange from Washington, D.C.; the Guangdong Modern Dance Company from Guangzhou; the Ballet du Lac Tumba from Zaire; Chuck Davis and the African-American Dance Ensemble; the Paul Taylor Dance Company; Luis Viana from Venezuela; Sukayi Sriman from Indonesia; and Yin Xing from the People's Republic of China.

Small's project was to help devise curriculum so that the performing arts could be better integrated into academia.

Student Handbook Published

The Office of the Dean of Students has published a Student Handbook for the 1991-92 academic year. In addition to replacing separate brochures covering the Code of Conduct and a variety of policies, the handbook includes information on campus programs and services, student organizations and commmunity resources. The handbook also features a 1991-92 calendar which includes intramural sign-up deadlines, athletic events, special events on campus and important academic deadlines.

Handbooks were distributed to resident students through the campus post office. Commuting students may pick up a copy at drop/add. Copies will be also available at the Dean of Students Office during the year.

Ference at Institute

Dr. Greg Ference, assistant professor of history, attended the National Endowment for the Humanities Summer Institute, "Modern Chinese Art and Culture," held June 10-July 19 at the University of Kansas.

The program consisted of lectures on history, art history, literature and film of 20th century China, Taiwan and Hong Kong by experts from the United States, Great Britain, the Peoples Republic of China, the Republic of China and Hong Kong. In addition to demonstrations by various artists, the Ference visited the Nelson-Atkins Museum of Art in Kansas City. This institution prossesses one of the finest collections of Chinese ceramics, bronze vessels, tomb figurines, furniture, sculpture and paintings in the U.S. Ference also viewed several Sung dynasty scroll paintings from the 10th and 11th centuries that have not been viewed by the general public in over 20 years.

Following the NEH Institute, Ference was an associate of the Illinois Summer Research Laboratory on Russia and Eastern Europe. The U.S. Department of State, U.S. Department of Education, the Andrew Mellon Foundation and NEH support the program which allows scholars to pursue research and other scholarly activities organized in conjunction with the Lab. While at the University of Illinois, Ference continued his on-going research concerning the Slovaks and Czechoslovak liberation movement.

Training in CPR

In two or three evening or weekend sessions, you can learn how to save a life in cases of heart attack, choking, drowning, electric shock, injury and other emergencies where the heart and breathing stop and death occurs quickly. Would you be ready if an emergency occurred in your home, class or work area.

Short courses in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) are available every few weeks from August to January through the Continuing Education Office. All University personnel and spouses are welcome. Beginners' and review classes, in American Heart Association or Red Cross teaching format, are scheduled.

Dorchester County Joins DEEP Network

The Dorchester County Public Schools System has joined a nationwide network of school systems committed to economic education.

With the initative and cooperation of the SSU Center for Economic Education, Dorchester County has applied for and received recognition as a participant in the Developmental Economic Education Program (DEEP).

A commitment to DEEP requires infusion of economics at all levels of K-12 education. At the elementary level, basic economic concepts are included in the social studies curriculum. At the secondary level, economic principles and problems are analyzed within the context of civics, history, business and economic courses.

Edward J. Frampton, director of the SSU Center for Economic Education and lecturer of economics in the Perdue School of Business, and Mary Beth Adams, curriculum supervisor for Dorchester County Public Schools, recently signed the documents which commit both to developing and maintaining economic education as an integral part of each child's education.

Dorchester County joins 18 other Maryland school systems in the DEEP network. It is the first school system served by the SSU center to make a formal commitment to economic education.

Adams said, "For a long time, we have recognized the need to incorporate economics in our social studies curriculum. With Mr. Frampton's initative and cooperation, we are now able to make that desire a reality."

Frampton added, "I am delighted to have Dorchester joining the DEEP network. Mrs. Adams has been an enthusiastic supporter of economic education, and her dedication has made this commitment possible."

Attention December Graduates

Commencement exercises will be held on Sunday, December 15, at 3 p.m. in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center. Detailed information will be mailed at a later date.

Maryland offers advanced degrees in environmental health, SSU's program is the first for undergraduates leading to a Bachelor of Science degree in the field, Molenda said.

The program has been eight years in the planning by faculty in SSU's Biology Department with help from their counterparts at the University of Maryland Eastern Shore, which is cooperating in the program.

During students' four years in the program they will not only take courses in chemistry, biology, physics and math but also in a number of specialized studies. Among the latter will be: environmental epidemiology, milk and food sanitation, shelter and institutional environments, public health administration and others.

Two of these courses—water and air pollution—will be given at UMES.

In some states, Maryland included, workers in the environmental health field also must be registered by the state. Known as sanitarians or environmental health specialists, they are involved in a wide range of environmental activities, and after about two years on the job must pass a registration exam.

Graduates of the program will need only a minimum of job experience to have the basic knowledge necessary to become registered, Molenda said.

The need for the program was discussed as far back as 1982 when Molenda attended a conference of Eastern Shore environmental health directors led by the late Wallace G. French. Persons entering the field were required to have degrees and scientific backgrounds but they still needed considerable on-the-job training. "Better specifically educated people" capable of playing an effective role at the start of employment were needed, it was said.

The need in federal and state agencies and local government for career specialists in the environmental field is growing, Molenda said, because of the increased demand on industry and government at all levels to adopt more strict controls over environmental hazards.

quality of the rides and its overall hospitality.

This year's accent is on water with cyclists passing by the ocean, bays, rivers, creeks, lakes and ponds. After a winding journey through the canopy-covered roads of the Pocomoke Forest, riders can make their the initial sag stop at Milburn Landing State Park on the Pocomoke River. This "river without banks" framed with cypress trees and lily pads gets its dark color from the cypress trees' tannic acid. The deepest river for its width in the United States, the Pocomoke has been given "scenic river" status by the state of Maryland.

Next (for 100-milers only) it's Assateague Island and a chance to glimpse Chincoteague ponies and migrating wildfowl against the backdrop of the Assawoman Bay and the Atlantic Ocean. While not a part of the measured ride, only 12 miles separate Assateague from the famed boardwalk of Ocean City, providing a fun-filled side trip for those so inclined. (In October, with most of the tourists gone, Ocean City traffic should be diminished affording riders a safe and scenic excursion.)

Powellville, a quiet, signature Eastern Shore town, is the site of the final sag stop, near the fresh-water Adkins Mill Pond and one of the most northerly stands of cypress trees.

The route itself, a cyclist's dream with its flat, rural, lightly-trafficked roads, much of them shaded as they wind through the dense Pocomoke Forest, is well-marked. A number of rural stores, visitor centers and public facilities are open at locations throughout the ride.

Afterward, cyclists can shower at Maggs Physical Activities Center and swim in the pool. Masseuses will be on hand following the ride (at a slight charge). Also, a chicken barbecue dinner is available at $8.75 each. Advance registration and payment are required for the barbecue.

For early arrivals, there is an early registration and social on Friday, October 11, from 9-10:30 p.m. at Maggs PAC. Ride-day registration begins at 7 a.m. at Maggs. The fee is $10 for SSU students, faculty and staff which includes a map of the route, cue sheets and a long-sleeve T-shirt (if registered prior to September 22). Rides depart at 8 a.m.; helmets are required. The ride is sanctioned by the League of American Wheelmen. Any profits from the ride will be used by the SSU Cycling Club, an LAW member, to foster bicycle education, recreation, racing and touring on the Eastern Shore.

grown tremendously, with more than $44 million in new construction projects completed in the last decade.

Bellavance and his family have also taken an active role in the community outside the University, Hanna said.

For the president, the last 10 years have been a period of tremendous growth, but he looks forward to the years to come.

"I inherited a very good University, and I have had the privilege of making it better, and I know my successor will have a lot of work to do," he said.

His ultimate goal for SSU is to achieve the status and reputation of another public institution across the Chesapeake Bay— William and Mary.

"We're a little bit away, but experience has shown me not too far away."

Caruthers Memorial Service Friday in Social Room

"He was the kind of teacher who strove to make himself unnecessary. He was a mentor... In later years with his family grown ... his home was still open to the young children and new families of the neighborhood. Of course, all of this was shared by his beloved wife...." These words from the 1971 eulogy of Dr. T.J. Caruthers, delivered by his son, James Wade, could well be used to describe Wade and his own wife, Gwynette.

Dr. James Wade and Louise Gwynette Thompson Caruthers

Dr. James Wade Caruthers, who received the University's Alumni Appreciation Award at Commencement in May, the highest alumni award given by the University, and his wife, Louise Gwynette Thompson Caruthers, both members of the class of 1938, were killed Sunday in an automobile accident on Rt. 50 at Mardela Springs.

Wade Caruthers' father was a member of the University's 1925 founding faculty. For three decades T.J. Caruthers served as director of teacher education, the highest administrative position after president. Caruthers Hall, a onetime laboratory school for elementary teaching and innovation, is named in memory of his father.

"Wade and Gwynette Caruthers were the embodiment of everything that is right and honorable at Salisbury and we shall dearly miss the solid love and never faltering support they gave to their University through the better part of its history," said President Thomas E. Bellavance. "The campus is stunned and deeply distressed by this tragic occurrence." The personal and professional lives of the Caruthers have almost been defined by a pioneering spirit in education. During the 1920s and '30s Wade grew up in a house on College Ave. which is now home to the University Honors Program. In a literal sense, the new and bustling Normal School campus, intellectual and cultural hub of the quiet town, was his front yard; the faculty and students were his extended family.

As college students, both he and Gwynette, a Hurlock native, participated in activites which ranged from campus orchestra to sports. Wed in 1940, 50 years later they would celebrate their golden anniversary in the Social Room of

International Leader In Critical Thinking Movement To Give Riall Lecture Sept. 18

"Try this simple test on your child—and yourself. A laundry dryer contains 10 black and eight navy socks. Without looking, how many socks must you take out to be sure you have a matched pair?

"Or explain the meaning of this formula: 36b + 52w = 88k.

"In the first example, the correct answer is three. As for the second, look again: It's a shorthand description of a piano—36 black keys plus 52 white.

"Neither example calls for academic skills," according to education writers Edwin and Sally V. Kiester. "Both demand the ability to think, to stretch the mind beyond the obvious. And thinking is an area where American children need help. Lots of help."

On Wednesday, September 18, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium, Dr. Richard W. Paul, a major leader in the national and international critical thinking movement, will

Elwell To Deliver Convocation Address Sept. 11

Dr. Mary Ellen Elwell, a professor in the Social Work Department, will focus on the "Great Traditions and Little Traditions" of higher education in her fall convocation address. Officially marking the beginning of the academic year, Convocation will be held at 10 a.m., Wednesday, September 11, in Holloway Hall Auditorium. The public is cordially invited.

"I want to give students a sense of what the great traditions, the ideas and philosophies underlying higher education are and show them how Salisbury State University fits into these ideas," said Elwell, who joined the faculty in 1986 after teaching at Western Maryland College, her alma mater, for 17 years.

Elwell hopes this year's convocation will help students see their time at SSU as part of a large tradition. "I want the students to get a sense of the bigness of this experience. Sometimes, students get so overwhelmed with the trivial things of campus life that they forget why there are here."

National surveys show that the majority of all college students believe they attend college to get a better job and make more money. However the U.S. higher education system provides much more than vocational training.

"Higher education is about the life of the mind, not simply training students for jobs." Elwell indicates that the first great tradition and the major purpose of a university is to develop the intellect of students and to expand their knowledge. "It's not about training athletes for professional sports or spending time away from the supervision of parents to make the transition from late adolescence to adulthood.

"Vocational preparation, athletic training and maturity can all be achieved in a variety of settings—many of them more efficient and less expensive than college. But there is no other institution in our society," said Elwell, "which is exclusively dedicated to the intellectual life— the training of the mind."

Students in the United States, especially those attending comprehensive liberal arts and professional schools such as SSU, are given the opportunity to participate in a tradition that is unique. Unlike students in other countries who attend colleges and universities which are controlled by the government, U.S. students have the privilege of choice among varied institutions.

"Our higher education system is extremely diverse," Elwell continued. Students are given the opportunity to pursue their areas of interest and choose the school which offers the best training and facilities for their intended area of study.

Academic freedom is another one of the great traditions evident at SSU and in the U.S. higher education system. Students and faculty are free to question beliefs and ideas in their search for understanding and knowledge. Although Elwell thinks that academic freedom is one of the most important traditions in our education system, she feels that many students take this freedom for granted.

Gradually higher education has expanded its commitment to educate all people regardless of race, sex, religion, age or physical disability. However, Elwell believes that actually achieving and accommodating an increasing diversity of students, staff and faculty is quite challenging.

Elwell, who received her Ph.D. from the University of Maryland at Baltimore in 1984 (34 years after receiving her bachelor's degree) says she is proof that the boundaries are limitless for those who want to continue their education.

"I think that shows, especially for women, that education can be open to all. There is life after your first job and children," she added. "Education, like life, is full of possibilities and challenges."

Sea Gull Sports Roundup

by Paul Ohanian

The women's volleyball squad and men's soccer team will be the two Sea Gull teams that inaugurate the fall sports campaign as they begin competition this weekend. The volleyball team opens play in the Messiah College Invitational on Friday and Saturday, while the soccer team participates in the Randolph-Macon College Tournament on Saturday and Sunday.

Coming off a season in which they set a school-record for wins with a 35-14 overall record, the volleyball team must replace five of six starters from last year's Eastern States Athletic Conference (ESAC) championship team. Coaches Ed Hoeck and Bridget Benshetler will look to the lone returning starter, senior outside hitter Heidi Smid, to take a leadership position this season. Sophomores Shannon Cianelli and Jenean Plumley both made valuable contributions last season and should play bigger roles this year. Two other returnees, sophomores Jodi Boast and Jenny Shelley, will be contending for starting spots.

The team's only home appearance through the first seven weeks of the season is on September 27-28 when it hosts the annual Gull Classic Tournament. SSU will also host the ESAC Championship Tournament on October 26.

Meanwhile, the men's soccer team is pointing towards one of its most successful teams in recent years with a talented and experienced core of returning players. Senior forward Kevin Jackson scored 10 goals last year during a 7-8-1 campaign, and begins his final season with 17 career tallies. He will be joined on the front line by senior Joe Greco, who notched six goals and three assists in 1989 but sat out last season.

Senior Jim Wakefield will anchor the midfield unit which will probably also include sophomores Matt Roberts and Soon-Jae Kloper. Senior David Kidd, selected to the 1990 all-South Region team, could play in either the midfield or backline. Junior Derek Jessup also figures along the backline if he can return from a preseason knee injury. Returning senior Garrett Tucker is one of three candidates vying for the starting goaltender's job.

Coach Gerry DiBartolo's team plays its first home game on September 14 when the Gulls welcome defending Division III national champion Glassboro State.

Golf Classic To Be Held Oct. 25

Some 144 golf enthusiasts are expected to tee off at the eighth annual SSU Foundation Fall Golf Classic on Friday, October 25, at Green Hill Yacht and Country Club.

Roy Beauchamp, of AHM/Long and Foster and co-chair of this year's tournament, anticipates the field to fill quickly.

"I am very pleased with the community support given the tourney last year and expect it to be even better this time, both through participation and sponsorship," said Beauchamp. Dick Young, president of Salisbury Brick Co., is the other co-chair.

This year's prime sponsor is ALARMGUARD of Delmarva, a well-known home and office security systems business.

Donnie Williams, president of ALARMGUARD which is making a $2,500 gift to the event said, "We are pleased to be the prime sponsor of this prestigious event for the University. Salisbury State has been very important to the community for such a long time, and it's time we all realized SSU's tremendous impact."

The purpose of the event is to raise support for special programs. Some programs that benefit from the event are faculty research and development, cultural enrichment, the Honors House and campus beautification.

A general sponsorship is $200. The entry fee is $50 per player, entitling the participant to greens fees, golf cart, refreshments throughout the day, two bar tickets for after-the-round use, a roast beef and chicken buffet that evening and complimentary gifts.

The golfers with the low team score in the scramble format will have their names placed on the President's Cup which is on permanent display in the Social Room of Holloway Hall.

Awards will be given to the teams with the lowest scores for four flights, including mixed teams. Cash and merchandise prizes will be awarded for other low teams, long drive on various holes and closest ball to the hole on par-3 holes.

A new feature for this year's tournament is a putting contest immediately before tee-off. The "Peninsula's Purest Putter Contest" will feature 36 golfers, one representative from each foursome, vying for over $300 in prizes. Bob Gearhart, executive director of the Foundation which sponsors the tournament, views the success of the event as a great benefit to the Foundation.

Gearhart said, "Not only does the tournament help to continue our close ties with the community, but it provides needed funds for worthwhile University purposes."

Karl Haas Heard on WSCL-FM Awarded Frankel Prize

The National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) has announced that Karl Haas is one of this year's recipients of the Charles Frankel Prize, an annual award that recognizes five Americans for their work in increasing the public's understanding of history and other topics in the humanities. The NEH cited Karl Haas as a musician whose radio program "Adventures in Good Music" broadcast Monday through Friday on WSCL 89.5 Delmarva Public Radio at 7 p.m. has brought a deeper appreciation of classical music to a wide cross-section of the American public. Others who received this year's prize are Ken Burns, the documentary filmmaker who produced the critically acclaimed miniseries "The Civil War"; Winton Blount, business leader; Louise Cowan, a humanities professor and co-founder of the Dallas Institute of Humanities and Culture; and John Kuo Woi Tchen, former chairman of the New York Council for the Humanities and co-founder of the Chinatown Museum.

Karl Haas is a concert pianist and conductor who has shared his deep knowledge and love of classical music with millions of listeners through his daily radio program. The program has also been broadcast worldwide by the 400 stations of the American Armed Forces Network, the Australian Broadcasting Corporation and Mexico City's classical radio station. For 32 years, the program has combined Haas' informal commentary on musical and cultural topics with pertinent selections from the classical repertoire, with emphasis on the interrelationship between the arts and the humanities. Haas is also the author of Inside Music, a reference work now in its sixth printing.

SSU Students Recognized in National Math Contest

When SSU professor of mathematics, Dr. Bernard Fusaro, started the national Mathematical Contest in Modeling (MCM) seven years ago, he never dreamed that it would become so popular within the mathematics communities in the United States.

The first contest, which was open to undergraduates at colleges and universities in both the United States and Canada, had 70 schools participating. This year, 256 schools submitted solutions, including such prestigious institutions as Johns Hopkins, Harvard, Georgetown, California-Berkeley and the University of Toronto.

In an attempt to give applied mathematics more prominence, Fusaro wanted the students to work on practical problems which represent real world situations. Such problems go beyond the classroom boundaries of calculus, algebra and geometry.

Because MCM questions are "open-ended," as the contest rules state, the design of the mathematical model involves more than equations or statistics. There is no "unique correct solution," so students are forced to confront ambiguity and create their own order out of a void. This confrontation of ambiguity in cooperation with others mirrors life in general and the work environment in particular.

Participants in this year's contest were allowed to choose between two problems.

In a small town, there is usually not a very sophisticated way to meter the overall flow of water in the municipal water system. Students were given crude measurements and were asked to design a model that would predict water usage on a typical day in a sample town.

The second problem asked students to design a method of connecting computers in a city area in a cost effective way.

In teams of three, students work together on their campuses over a weekend. On Friday morning the faculty advisors open the national contest envelopes and instruct the students to choose a problem by noon. From that moment until midnight Sunday, they are allowed to use books, journals, computers—any inanimate resource— to construct a solution. No outside coaching is allowed, however, once the contest begins. The teams' final typewritten presentations are handed to the advisors who forward them to a national judging committee which ranks them qualitatively.

Sponsored by the Consortium for Mathematics and Its Applications (COMAP), the contest recognizes three categories of students who have successfully completed contest requirements: Meritorious, Honorable Mention and Successful Participation.

This year, two teams from SSU entered MCM. One team ranked Meritorious along with approximately 20 percent of the participants and another team achieved Successful Participation status.

The Meritorious team was one of four teams invited to present its model to the Mathematical Association of America at Virginia Commonwealth University. Each of these Meritorious teams received $150 to acknowledge its success.

SSU contest advisors and mathematics faculty members, Dr. Robert Tardiff, chair of the Mathematics Department, and Dr. Kathleen Shannon, praise MCM and are understandably proud of their students.

"It is important for students to understand that mathematics is not only an individual effort but a group effort as well," said Tardiff. "And this contest gives the students the opportunity to work in groups.

"The contest is a real confidence builder because students get to see that what they have learned (their acquired skills) in mathematics can be used in a positive way. They also must learn how to communicate their mathematics expertise to other scientists and engineers," he added.

"MCM reinforces that mathematics is usually not just one person against a problem, instead it is often several people offering different competing solutions and having to describe the strengths and weaknesses of their proposed solutions. In other words, they must try to sell their work and show where their solutions could lead to trouble," he said.

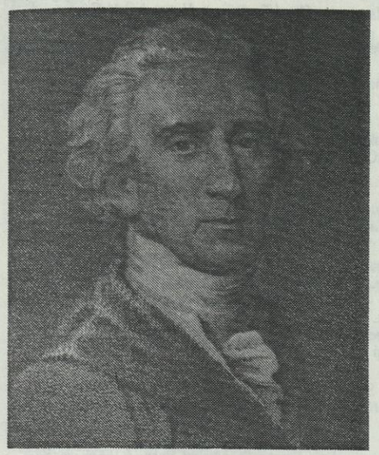
"I feel like a million bucks that some of my students would do this," Tardiff continued. "It's remarkable that they would spend a weekend of their time to produce a solution. In fact, one group didn't even go to bed one night."

Both teams presented their prescribed models in detail to the Henson School of Science and Technology at SSU and a shortened version to the Undergraduate Research Symposium.

Meritorious team members were mathematics and physics majors: Robert A. Henkel, a junior from Ocean Pines; Robert E. Simms of Salisbury; and Leanne M. Wells of Pittsville. Both Simms and Wells earned their Bachelor's of Science in mathematics and physics from SSU this past spring.

Successful Participation team members included: Kelly-lyn Anderson, a junior mathematics and statistics major from Centreville; Charles M. Boykin, a senior mathematics major from Salisbury; and Joseph A. Pepper of Delmar, DE, who earned his B.S. in mathematics and physics last spring.

Exhibit on One of Maryland's Most Powerful Families



Charles Carroll of Carrollton

A major new exhibit featuring the papers and documents of Charles Carroll of Carrollton and his family is on display in the Atrium Gallery through September 25. The Atrium Gallery, located next to the bookstore in the Guerrieri University Center, is open daily from 11 a.m.-4 p.m.

Called "A Priceless Legacy: Charles Carroll of Carrollton's Papers and the History of Maryland," the exhibit focuses on one of the most powerful and influential families in Maryland history. The exhibit opened in January in the Maryland State House with a joint session of the General Assembly and a ribbon-cutting led by Governor William Donald Schaefer. SSU is one stop on an 18-month tour of the state being sponsored by the Maryland State Archives.

Using documents, letters, paintings, photographs and interpretive notes, the exhibit traces the Carroll family from its roots in 17th century Ireland when rebellious Catholic families were dispossessed by the English, through the coming to Maryland of Charles Carroll the Settler in 1688 to the ascendancy of the family in three generations to becoming one of the wealthiest families in Maryland. A major sponsor of the exhibit is the Carroll Foundation of London, whose trustee, Gerald Carroll, is a descendent of the Carrolls who fled Ireland in the 1700s.

In a project sponsored by the National Historical Records and Publications Commission and the Maryland State Archives, the papers of the Carroll family are being assembled for publication and the exhibit is a result of that research. The editor of the Carroll Papers Project is Dr. Ronald Hoffman, professor of history at the University of Maryland, College Park.

Charles Carroll of Carrollton, born in Annapolis in 1737, became one of Maryland's four signers of the Declaration of Independence and helped to draft Maryland's first constitution and declaration of rights in 1776. In the last six years of his life, before his death in 1832, he was revered by the nation as the last surviving signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Sally Mason, associate editor of the Carroll Papers Project, gives a slide-lecture on the project in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri Center on Tuesday, September 17, at 7:30 p.m. There is no charge for admission and the public is invited.

For more information, call 543-6100.

Lecture on Charles Carroll September 17

A slide show and lecture examining the papers and documents of the family of Charles Carroll, one of Maryland's four signers of the Declaration of Independence, will be presented on Tuesday, September 17, at 7:30 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center.

In the fall of 1989, Gov. William Donald Schaefer directed the editor of the Charles Carroll of Carrollton Papers, Professor Ronald Hoffman of the University of Maryland College Park, and Dr. Edward C. Papenfuse, archivist of the State of Maryland, to prepare an exhibit that would communicate to the general public the importance of preserving, editing and publishing historical documents.

Work on the project began in early 1990 and "A Priceless Legacy: Charles Carroll of Carrollton's Papers and the History of Maryland," which opened in the State House in Annapolis on January 23, is the result of Hoffman and Papenfuse's year-long collaboration. That exhibit is on display at the Guerrieri Center's Atrium Gallery September 2-25.

Sally Mason, associate editor of the Carroll Papers, will present the lecture and accompanying slide show. She participated in all phases of planning and producing the exhibit. Her presentation will focus on the purpose and content of the exhibit within the broader context of editing and analyzing the papers of one of Maryland's most famous families.

The lecture is free and open to the public. For more information call 543-6100.

Hall of Fame Inducts Newest Members Oct. 18

The University Athletic Hall of Fame will add five new members on Friday, October 18, when the Hall's class of '91 is officially inducted. The new members, with their graduation years noted, are: Phil Briggs '69 Debbie Bloodsworth '76 Melvin Levi Shade '77 Sue Foelber-Woods '80 Mike McGlinchey (Coach)

Train Excursions Enliven Fall Festivals

Train buffs in ever-widening circles, are expected to converge on the Maryland-Virginia Eastern Shore this fall. Tickets are on sale for excursions that are planned for Saturday and Sunday, September 21-22, between Snow Hill and Berlin, and for trips between Pocomoke City and Parksley, VA, on Saturday, October 12.

In each case, the train excursion will be part of a local celebration which should enhance the appeal of the train ride and bring exposure to these historic main street communities.

The October 12 event will be in conjunction with the River and Railes Heritage Day in Pocomoke City and the annual Parksley Fall Festival.

For tickets or further information, call 1-800-852-0335 or 301-632-3110.

United Charities

The campus will participate again in the statewide United Charities Campaign this fall. Last year, University employees pledged over $12,000 to non-profit organizations which benefit Maryland residents. This year SSU workers can choose from hundreds of statewide organizations established to aid our youth, the elderly, those with physical, mental or emotional disabilities, the the hungry...Thousands of Marylanders in need benefit everyday from your contributions.

In an effort to provide campus employees with a better understanding of some of the beneficiaries of the United Charities Campaign, each week in the SSU News, a different non-profit organization which services the lower Eastern Shore will be profiled. This week it's the Arthritis Foundation of the Lower Eastern Shore, which serves Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset counties.

The mission of the Arthritis Foundation is to fund research to find the cause and prevention and ultimately the cure for more than 100 forms of arthritis. Arthritis affects men, women and children of all ages. Some 87 million Americans, or about 14 percent of the population, suffer from the disease.

The local Arthritis Foundation funds a variety of programs and services including the ACT (Arthritis Coping Together) support group, films, newsletters, a speakers bureau, exercise and aquatic programs, medical equipment loan and research.

The number of clients served by the foundation in the tri-county area has grown from 3,300 in 1988 to 4,100 last year. For more information call 749-8509.

Singleton To Chair SSCA Division

Donald L. Singleton, associate professor of communication arts, was elected chair of the Mass Communication Division of the Southern States Communication Association (SSCA) at its annual meeting in April in Tampa, FL.

Singleton served as division program planner for the meeting. "It was very successful," Singleton said, "attracting participants from around the country—as far north as Maine, as far west as Minnesota."

Program highlights included a media showcase, which consisted of television and radio programs created by communication faculty. The session was well attended and the program will be repeated this year. In addition, competitive programs in communication theory, history and regulation, and criticism were held.

The top three faculty papers from the competitive programs were recognized as well as the top three student submissions.

As a part of his duties as Mass Communication Division chair, Singleton will serve on the executive council of the SSCA. The executive council conducts the business of the association and will plan its program for the following year. SSCA is a professional association of communication scholars dedicated to the teaching and understanding of ethical communication.

Personnel Safety Tips

The Personnel Office is requesting employee help in reducing work accidents and also asking that when an accident does occur, employees report it to their supervisor first and then to the Personnel Office within 48 hours.

In a time of tight budgets, efforts to reduce on-the-job accidents makes good financial sense. Most accidents are the result of being in a hurry, which often leads to carelessness, according to the Personnel Office.

By concentrating on what they are doing and following appropriate regulations, which may include wearing or using safety devices, employees can do their part in greatly reducing the possibility of an accident. Even a relatively minor injury involving no more than a few stitches can represent a considerable expense, when taking into account the charges for the emergency room, the emergency room physicians and at least one follow-up visit. Multiply such an incident by several employees each year and it quickly becomes apparent that the University is spending quite a few dollars unecessarily. Being a little more safety-conscious, then, can mean better health for all and financial savings for the University, according to Personnel.

Again, they request employees to REPORT any accident PROMPTLY!

address such issues. His talk is titled "Critical Thinking: What Every Person Needs to Survive in a Rapidly Changing World."

Paul is the first speaker in this year's Riall Lecture Series which spotlights significant issues in education.

Paul is director of the Center for Critical Thinking and Moral Critique, an international network of scholars and educators headquartered at Sonoma State University, CA. His views on critical thinking have been canvassed by The New York Times, Education Week, The Chronicle of Higher Education, American Teacher, Educational Leadership, Newsweek, and U.S. News and World Report among others.

Not afraid of controversy, he is critical of the way American children are being taught today. "We fill students full of data," Paul said, "but the essence of education is to use information to address new situations and questions. We're neglecting that."

Consequently American children can't apply reasonable thought to everyday situations. "A kid is much more likely to choose a bicycle by its color or by what model a friend has than to think out more relevant considerations like price, durability or performance," Paul said.

The inability to think critically has ominous implications for children's lives. According to psychologists, youth problems such as drug and alcohol use may occur because young people have not learned to measure actions against consequences. In Salisbury, for example, a teenager recently died following massive alcohol consumption.

And authorities say that students in U.S. public schools spend less than one percent of class time in discussions requiring reasoning.

Knowing how to think has never been more important to our children's future, and the future of our country. According to the Kiesters, recently a University of Wisconsin professor gave a math problem from a Japanese college-entrance exam to 350 freshman math students. The four-step problem required students to solve one step, then apply the answer to the next, and so forth. Most Japanese students solved the problem; none of the Americans did, and most couldn't get beyond the first step. They were skilled at computation, but couldn't apply their knowledge to a new situation.

How did reasoning come to be neglected in this country? The answer is complicated but one explanation is obvious: Thinking is work, demanding rigor and discipline. Rigor is not learned at home by sitting in front of a television set nor in the classroom by mindless rote learning, authorities say.

Like learning any skill, "Thinking takes practice," Paul added, "but it's worth it. This country needs good thinkers."

Paul comes to Salisbury after having led the largest conference on critical thinking in the world last month in California. The conference attracted 2,000 people from around the globe. He also has organized two national and eight international conferences on critical thinking. He has given workshops on critical thinking in every region of the U.S.

In the last five years he has published over 40 articles and five books on critical thinking. He has given invited lectures at many universities including Harvard and the University of Chicago in this country, and several in Latin America and Western Europe. The recipient of numerous awards, he was voted "Distinguished Philosopher" by the Council for Philosophical Studies and named Alfred Korsybski Memorial Lecturer by the Institute for General Semantics.

The Riall lecture is free and the public is cordially invited. For more information contact Dr. Maurice Bozman, SSU Riall Professor of Education, at 543-6281.

Tryon Presents Paper to American Psychological Association

Dr. Adeline S.C. Tryon, assistant professor of psychology in the Fulton School of Liberal Arts, presented a paper at the annual meeting of the American Psychological Association in San Francisco, CA on August 18.

Tryon's paper was titled "Disadvantaged Children and Families—Treatment Prospects in Traditional Mental Health Settings." Her paper was part of a national symposium aimed at increasing mental health workers' awareness of the issues that challenge successful treatment of inner-city multiproblem children and families. Tryon reported that one of the challenges faced by professionals is that multiproblem families frequently lead very chaotic lives, making it difficult for them to apply abstract therapeutic suggestions to their specific problems experienced in the heat of home life. Tryon advocates, instead, that professionals teach specific solutions for very specific problems that the families can practice to proficiency in the therapy setting before returning home to apply their new solutions. Tryon presented treatment results from over 50 multiproblem families that she worked with in the Bronx of New York City, where she helped to develop these techniques with her colleague Dr. Elaine Blechman.

Holloway Hall.

During a brief stint as a high school civics teacher in Cambridge, MD, he pioneered the first instrumental music program for elementary and secondary schools there. Meanwhile Gwynette worked with Dorchester County's truant children, as an officer and then a counselor during World War II.

With the outbreak of war, Wade, always an avid sailor, served in the Navy, commanding minesweepers in the Caribbean. He then used the G.I. Bill to attend one of his father's alma maters, Columbia University, earning his doctorate in history.

His first college teaching position was at what is now Keene State University in New Hampshire. There he organized the first Social Science Department, became Keene's first director of graduate studies and chaired a committee for the New Hampshire Department of Education, responsible for revising the state's secondary social studies curriculum.

In 1951 at age 34, with a growing family and blossoming career, he was stricken with polio. As he struggled to recover, he began conducting college classes in his dining room. Within the academic year he was teaching 500 students weekly from a wheelchair. By the time of graduation the following spring he stood with crutches on the dias handing his students their diplomas as they processed.

After 10 years at Keene, the Caruthers moved to Southern Connecticut State University in New Haven. During his 24-year tenure, he again became the first director of graduate studies and the first chair of its newly organized History Department. During his career he wrote numerous articles and two books, one on maritime history and the other on 19th century American intellectual O.B. Frothingham.

Gwynette had resumed teaching in New Hampshire. At SCSU she earned her master's in psychology and launched a distinguished career as a child psychologist, working with the public school system and teaching at local universities. Described as a Pied Piper with children because of her ability to reach both the gifted and those needing help, she earned national recognition for her work. That included Ford and Kettering Foundation Awards for innovation in the education of the developmentally disabled, regular trips to Washington, D.C., for over a decade to present projects of excellence, and three National Merit Awards. Her programs in teacher training became state models used throughout Connecticut.

Both retired in 1981, Wade as professor emeritus.

Moving to Annapolis in 1983, the Caruthers once again became active members of the SSU community through the Alumni Association. Gwynette established the first Annapolis alumni chapter and Wade served as alumni board chair. In Annapolis he testified supporting Salisbury State receiving University status, which was passed in 1988.

In pursuing a career of innovation, Wade felt he and Gwynette had followed in his father's footsteps, who not only helped found SSU, but also developed a new method of training teachers which impressed his son and future daughter-in-law. Paraphrasing his father's eulogy seems appropriate in describing Wade and Gwynette: "Teaching was their great delight...There was something about them that gave us security."

A memorial service is scheduled for 2 p.m., Friday, September 6, in the Social Room of Holloway Hall. A reception will follow.

As a tribute to their memory, contributions may be made to the Caruthers Memorial Fund in the SSU Foundation.

A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

SEPTEMBER 12, 1991 VOL. XIII NO. 3

'Images of the Soviet Union' Starts Sept. 23

"Tremendous changes are taking place in the Soviet Union nowadays. It is obviously breaking apart very rapidly and we're seeing the end of the world's last empire," said Dr. Robert A. Berry, professor of history. "As its political system has quickly descended into chaos along with its already chaotic economic system, the question most people have been asking is 'Will the Soviet Union survive until 1992?' The events of the recent days have proven that the Soviet Union could not survive in its previous form. The question now is, 'What will become of the Soviet Union?'"

In September, the History and Political Science departments along with the Faculty Cultural Events Committee will launch a fall series devoted entirely to the Soviet Union.

"Images of the Soviet Union" will include five lectures by leading experts on Soviet domestic and foreign policies. All speakers will present their material in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri University Center at 7:30 p.m.

Berry and Dr. Greg Cashman, professor of political science, who are both teaching courses on the Soviet Union this semester, thought it would be beneficial to bring in some leading authorities to talk with their students. After meeting with David B. Ganoe, director of the Guerrieri University Center and a member of the Cultural Events Committee, "Images of the Soviet Union" was set into motion.

"We also wanted to offer this series to the community because we felt that what is going on in the Soviet Union and in Eastern Europe is a particularly timely topic—little did we know how timely it was going to be," said Ganoe. "History is being remade on a daily basis and the whole situation in the Soviet Union will have remarkable consequences with what is

Seven faculty members have been recognized for their exemplary teaching performance, their extensive involvement in University and community activities, and exceptional work in their disciplines.

The 1991 recipients of the Distinguished Faculty Award are Dr. Mehmet "Memo" Diriker, assistant professor of marketing; Dr. Tom Jones, professor of biology and department chair; Dr. Khashayar Khazeh, associate professor of finance; William Palmer, associate professor of modern languages; Dr. Scott Ralston, assistant professor of economics; Donald Whaley, instructor of history; and Dr. Connie White, associate professor of English and department chair.

"Too often people do good things and there is no opportunity to give them public recognition. This award is our opportunity to recognize faculty members who have had an exceptional year," said Dr. Michael O'Louglin, chair of the Faculty Welfare Committee and chair of political science.

"It meant a great deal to me to be selected mainly because I was chosen by a faculty committee. I was very surprised but happy that I was chosen by a group of my peers to receive this award," said Whaley, who joined the SSU faculty 16 years ago after he finished a graduate assistantship at Princeton University.

Whaley credits 1990 as being his most productive year at SSU. During this time, he delivered 20 papers, presentations and guest lectures throughout the Delmarva region and was also invited to speak at Tennessee Technological University in the College of Arts and Sciences Guest Lecture Series.

In the summer of 1990, the Delaware Humanities Council accepted Whaley (out of a competition in which only one-third of the applicants were chosen) as a member of the Delaware Humanities Forum Speakers Bureau for 1990-92.

Whaley's published works were included in "Tennessee in American History" and "Academically Speaking." His dissertation on the "19th Century Free Love Movement" was also recently noted in "The Historian."

Palmer also considers 1990 to be one of the most rewarding years in his professional life. It was during this year that he completed his work on "The Secret Journal of Christopher Columbus" and organized a workshop on Columbus which was nominated for the Award of Merit from the American Association for State and Local History.

White, who began teaching at SSU in 1972, said she is very pleased to have received the Distinguished Faculty Award. "For me, this has been a year of finalizing." As a result of "The Yellow Wallpaper," the first casebook that she and Dr. Tom Erskine developed for SSU freshman English classes, White signed a contract with Rutgers University Press to co-edit and oversee publication of a series called "Women Writers: Texts and Contexts." She also obtained a contract with the University of New Mexico Press to do an anthology of Western American short stories.

White served as the co-organizer for a conference on "Minority Literature" in 1990. She, along with Erskine, also organized a

by Paul Ohanian

This Saturday at C.W. Post in Long Island, NY, the football team opens its second season under Head Coach Joe Rotellini. Most observers feel confident that this year's squad will be much improved over last season's 1-8 team for several reasons: 41 returning lettermen who now have a year's experience in the Rotellini system; a talented incoming class that includes several players who may start in the opener; hard work in the offseason by returning players wanting to improve; and d) a somewhat easier schedule that no longer includes Ferrum and Division II Shepherd. Even Rotellini concedes that "we expect to be a better football team. We are much further along than we were last year."

For those not making the trip to C.W. Post for Saturday's 1 p.m. contest, the game can be heard live on WDVH 105.5 FM. SSU's first home game will be next Saturday, September 21 against Methodist.

While the football team travels north, Coach Gerry DiBartolo's soccer squad opens its home season on Saturday against the defending NCAA Division III champion, Glassboro State. The Gulls dropped both contests in last weekend's Randolph-Macon Tournament, losing to R-M 3-0 and falling to Mary Washington 1-0. SSU will be looking to avenge last year's 4-0 loss to the champs, while also improving on a series record that favors GSC, 18-10-2.

The volleyball team hopes to find a more consistent blend in the Gettysburg Invitational Tournament this weekend. SSU finished 1-3 last week in the season-opening Messiah College Invitational. Heidi Smid, Jenny Shelley and Jenean Plumley were Salisbury's top performers.

Sea Gull Football On-the-Air

Sea Gull Football On-the-Air WDVH 105.5 FM will be broadcasting all 10 Sea Gull games this season. Airtime is 30 minutes before kickoff each week. WSUR 107.5, the campus radio station, is also planning on broadcasting several games this season. Head Coach Joe Rotellini can also be heard on WLVW 960 AM each Monday evening at 7:30 p.m. with the "Coach's Corner."

White Water Rafting

The Outdoor Club's next trip will be white water rafting September 27-29. Sign-ups for the trip will be at the meetings of September 16 and 23. Literacy Volunteers Sought

One out of five adults on the Eastern Shore cannot read or write at a functional level. To reach them, Project Read and Literacy Works programs need you help. For the past six years, Project Read has helped Wicomico County adults learn to read. Adults who request assisitance are matched with volunteers who provide individual, confidential tutoring services. Volunteers are provided with training, materials, on-going assistance, and a meeting place. They have a chance to make a real impact on another person's life.

Recruitment is now underway for Project Read tutors and students. Tutors must read at a high school level; no degree or special training is required. Training on how to tutor is provided. The next tutor training workshops will begin on Tuesday, September 24. Individuals who can spare three to four hours per week, read at a high school level, and are sincerely interested in helping someone learn to read are asked call 749-3612 for Salee German or Linda Parry.

Help is also needed in recruiting students. There are an estimated 10,000 county residents who do not read well enough to fully function on the job or in their personal lives. They may be unemployed, underemployed or stuck in dead-end positions because they lack the skills to get ahead. All too often, they are unaware that help is available. It is never too late. They can call Project Read or Literacy Works at 749-3612, or toll free at 1-800-638-2665. Services include evaluation of skills, information and referral to training resources throughout the county, and private tutoring if appropriate. The program is totally free and confidential. For a person who cannot read, the best source of information is speaking with a friend. Please spread the word.

happening in world politics."

"The series will present a well-rounded view of the U.S.S.R.," added Berry. "The speakers we have coming are quite an interesting group—varied in terms of interests. They will present a good sense of the Soviet Union in the past and present, and will analyze plausible directions in the future."

"The first topic on Soviet domestic politics by Dr. Philip Gillette is certainly going to be a timely one because he is going to have to address how the failed coup happened, why it happened and the truly momentous changes which it has set in motion," said Cashman.

Gillette, associate professor of political science at Old Dominion University, begins the series on Monday, September 23. Gillette, who earned his Ph.D. in political science from Harvard University, specializes in Soviet foreign and domestic policy. He has made frequent guest appearances on radio and television as a commentator on Soviet history and current events.

Continuing the series on Tuesday, October 22, is Herbert S. Levine, professor of economics and co-director of the Joseph H. Lauder Institute of Management and International Studies at the University of Pennsylvania. Levine, who will be speaking on the future of the Soviet economy, received his Ph.D. in economics also from Harvard University.

Through his research and writings, Levine has made major contributions to the analysis of Soviet economic planning, reform and growth.

Dr. Mark N. Katz will address the new thinking in Soviet foreign policy on Monday, November 4. Assistant professor of government and politics at George Mason University, Katz earned his Ph.D. in political science from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. A former international affairs consultant, he has written numerous books and articles on Soviet internal and foreign policies.

During the month of November, the Cultural Events Committee will sponsor three films dealing with the Soviet Union in Devilbiss Auditorium as part of its International Film Series.

"Doctor Zhivago" (1965) is based on Boris Pasternak's Nobel Prize-winning story set in revolutionary Russia about a poet-doctor, Uri Zhivago. Shown on Tuesday, November 5, at 7 p.m., it stars Omar Sharif, Julie Christie and Rod Steiger.

"The Russia House," which was produced in 1990, is directed by Australian Fred Schepisi and will be presented on Tuesday, November 19, at 7 p.m.. It is John Le Carre's story of love and espionage filmed in the U.S.S.R. and stars Sean Connery as a British publisher seeking a manuscript written by a Soviet dissident, while Michelle Pfeiffer, his Russian contact, attempts to protect the writer.

On Tuesday, November 26, at 7 p.m., SSU will present what many film analysts consider the most important Russian film in the past 20 years. "Andrei Rublev" (U.S.S.R., 1966) is an epic based on the life of the 15th century Russian monk and icon painter, an artist in conflict with his society.

The lecture series continues with Dr. Juliette R. Stapanian, chair of the Department of Russian Studies at Emory University, on Monday, November 18. Her topic will be, "Ethnic Conflict in the Soviet Union." Stapanian earned her Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin.

Wrapping up the lecture series is Dr. Michal Barszap with his presentation, "Doing Business in the Soviet Union," on Tuesday, November 19, at 7:30 p.m. "Mike Barszap of ITS Tours and Travel has successfully been conducting business with the Soviet Union for several years," said Berry. "For all practical purposes, he owns a travel agency in the Soviet Union."

Berry will be making his fifth trip to the Soviet Union in January, and for the third year in a row, students will be accompanying him as part of a study tour which is open to all students, faculty and staff, and the local community.

On Sunday, December 1, at 2 p.m., Dr. Thomas Elliot, chair of SSU's Music Department, will deliver a lecture, "Russian Music after the Kucka," in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri Center. Following his talk, one of the University's music majors who is studying piano under Linda Cockey will present "An Afternoon of Russian Music."

"As a result of this fall series, I hope that people will develop an understanding and appreciation for the various peoples of the U.S.S.R.," said Berry. "It's a fascinating and rich culture and a lot has happened there—we see so many recent changes going on in the Soviet Union that it really calls for a program to tie it all together," he added.

For more information on the series, please call the Guerrieri Center at 543-6100.

national conference, "Other Voices: American Women Writers of Color," this past May in Ocean City.

"I think it is a real tribute to the University that the atmosphere here allows for creativity," she said. "At SSU, I have the freedom and support I need to work on various projects."

Diriker learned that he had received the Distinguished Faculty Award soon after returning from his computer programming assignment for the Turkish army following the Persian Gulf War. When Diriker returned from Turkey, he was welcomed back with congratulatory notes from his colleagues.

"What a wonderful way to be welcomed home," said Diriker, who joined the SSU faculty three years ago after leaving his teaching position at Bentley College in Boston, MA.

Diriker has been recognized for his exceptional teaching techniques which include the use of on-line computer information systems, mentors, live cases, video taping of class presentations, joint projects and field assignments. In addition to his teaching responsibilities, Diriker is also director of the European American Business Institute and the Mid-Atlantic Sales and Marketing Institute in the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business.

In addition to the Distinguished Faculty Award, Khazeh also received the Outstanding Faculty Award in the spring of 1990.

Khazeh established and continues to advise the SSU student chapter of the Financial Management Association. He developed this organization to provide students with the opportunity to begin their professional development while they attend school.

Khazeh's commitment to students is evident through his efforts to improve his teaching abilities, to always be available to students, to develop new courses to meet the changing needs of students and to accept and learn from student evaluations.

Ralston is also being recognized for his role as a superior teacher. Ralston's student evaluations show him to be above the norm for the Perdue School in the "Overall Effectiveness" category.

During 1990 he had one journal article published and a second accepted for publication. He published a proceedings article and had another abstracted in a professional journal. Three papers were also presented to professional societies and one of his manuscripts has been submitted for review.

Ralston also served as the adviser for Phi Beta Lambda, SSU's business and economics society.

Jones' long list of accomplishments during 1990 made him another successful candidate for the Distinguished Faculty Award.

Jones, who joined the SSU faculty in 1978, feels his most important job as a teacher is to motivate students to pursue knowledge. In one of his undergraduate courses, "Estuarine Biology," Jones gives his students the opportunity to pursue knowledge in a unique way.

He takes these studnets on a three-day research trip aboard the University of Maryland's research vessel, Aquarius. Students collect samples, analyze data, learn how to use state-of-the-art equipment and plot the results of their estuarine research.

"I feel this is one of the few science courses in which students get the whole picture of what is involved in scientific research," Jones said.

Jones, who is an adjunct associate professor with the University of Maryland Horn Point Environmental Laboratory, is currently researching the estuarine ecosystem. He is also working toward the development of an estaurine ecology research program at SSU.

In 1990 Jones had a paper published in "Marine Ecology Progress Series," which is a refereed periodical with international recognition. He is also working on three more manuscripts and several other papers which he will co-author.

Jones was elected president of the Atlantic Estaurine Research Society and will hold this position until 1992. He was also selected to serve on the Advisory Search Committee for the chancellor of the University of Maryland System. He is a member of the SSU Speaker's Bureau and was recently promoted to major in the U.S. Army Reserves.

"This year's recipients have done something really important," O'Louglin added, "and these people deserve to be acknowledged for their outstanding work."

Publications Guidelines

University Publications, part of the Public Relations Office, exists to service the campus departments and its organizations. All publications should come through the Publications Office.

Publications' goal is to provide all departments with the best possible product, whether it be a flyer or a newsletter, in a timely and cost efficient manner.

Publications serves some 100 departments and areas which last year generated approximately 1,000 work requests. For Publications to successfully produce those requests on deadline, the planning and scheduling stage in the design process is critical.

The process for completing a publication is:

PLANNING To provide the best product it is important that one's planning include adequate time for Publications to schedule production (planning, editing, design, typesetting, paste-up and printing).

The production schedule is prepared on the 15th of the preceeding month. Therefore, to schedule a job into production Publications needs at least a month-and-a-half advance notice.

Jobs received after the monthly production schedule has been prepared will be accepted, but the design and production will be bid to off-campus sources. Off-campus sources are considerably more expensive.

As soon as a department determines it requires a publication (even if dates, content, budget, etc., are incomplete), it should contact Publications.

EDITING Editing can simply involve a spelling correction or be as complex as a total rewrite. Each publication is examined independently. To make the editing as efficient as possible, please submit all copy typed and double-spaced. DO NOT submit copy laid out in the design you would like the publication to reflect. Each publication dummy should contain placement directions only (eg., Copy A here, Copy B here, etc).

Publications use the Associated Press Style Book, with a few modifications, for all publications.

DESIGN Design is the plan behind the final product. It is the creation of order and beauty out of a chaos of pictures, copy, headlines and white space. In this process the graphic designers make a series of decisions as to size, medium, typography and art based on the information provided.

This is why it is critical to the design that all the elements be provided when the job is submitted.

TYPESETTING Typesetting of all copy is done on the Merganthaler CRTronic 200. The CRTronic has the capability of setting type from 4 to 128 points, bold or italicized.

There are a variety of typefaces and sizes which should be discussed during the design stage to save time and money. After typesetting but before paste-up the requesting department will be contacted to proof its copy.

PASTE-UP Paste-up is when the graphic designer puts together all the final elements to produce a camera-ready board. This board is exactly what will show up in the final printing of a job.

Paste-up is exacting and tedious so major alterations in text (rewrites) or design must be made beforehand.

PRINTING Printing is done internally in Duplication Services or externally at independent print shops. Design factors and budget determine whether a job is Xeroxed in Duplication Services or offset at the printers.

Time factors vary according to print location. Duplication Services usually takes five working days for completion. Print shops request at least 10 working days.

All external jobs must go through the bid process. This process can take from two days to three weeks depending on the cost of the job. This time is in addition to printing time. Planning, designing and paste–up also represent additional time.

In the event job requests exceed Publications ability to complete requests in a timely and creative manner, despite meeting submission deadlines, some jobs will be referred off campus for printing. Priority is given to student recruitment pieces.

Personal Safety Tips Offered

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entryways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Faculty Bible Study

This semester the Faculty Bible Study group is meeting on Fridays from noon to 1 p.m. in Devilbiss conference room 103.

"Have you ever wondered just who Jesus was," said Dr. Ed Senkbeil, Campus Crusade for Christ faculty advisor, "whether a prophet or a philosopher, a great teacher or just a good man, or maybe even the Son of God? Why not join us on Fridays as we study the Gospel of John and draw your own conclusions?"

Steve Young who works with the Campus Crusade for Christ will be leading the discussion. Bring a "brown bag" lunch and invite a friend, Senkbeil said.

Other study members include Homer Austin, Mike Burton, Ed Shaffer, Wayne Shelton, Jerry Waldron, George Whitehead, Brent Wilhelm and Jeanette Wolinski.

Perdue School Communications

Perdue School Communications The Perdue School has installed bulletin boards on the first floor of Holloway Hall in the Perdue wing, on the wall opposite the class rooms. Perdue School students and others who are interested are asked to check these boards weekly for announcements of deadlines, meetings, scholarship/ internship opportunities and other important information.

A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

SEPTEMBER 19, 1991 VOL. XIII NO. 4

Book Rack Wins Scholarship Award

The Book Rack was one of five top prize winners of the Follet Campus Resources' "Promote the Promotion" competition.

The used book promotion earned the Book Rack $1,000 toward the University's scholarship fund.

The Book Rack's "carnival theme" this spring helped generate a 16 percent increase in used book buybacks, up to $129,669 from the previous May's record total of $108,608.

The promotion to encourage students to sell back their used textbooks featured outdoor sales in red square with numerous giveaways including soda, candy bars and outdoor games. Random prizes given away included pizza, dinners at area restaurants, oil changes and gasoline. Book Rack employees rode unicycles, juggled, played with Hacky Sacks, made huge bubbles and encouraged a circus-like atmosphere. Also, a local Ford dealer provided new cars for students to test drive.

"Kaaren Kundell, our textbook manager, and her staff were the keys to our being considered for this award," said Stanley Shedaker, manager of the Book Rack. "They came up with the creative ideas which translated into such a successful promotion for us."

Shedaker also thanked the University faculty for its support. "A faculty committee with the University Forum came up with several useful ideas to help our used book sales and buybacks on campus," said Shedaker.

Richard M. Traut, president of Follett Campus Resources, formerly Follett Campus Book Company, acknowledged the efforts made by the Book Rack: "I hope that this award not only helps to bring a college education to a worthy student, but that it also bring some recognition to a hard working and professional bookstore staff."

This marks the second consecutive year the Book Rack has won this contest.

Roger Johnson, National Leader In Cooperative Learning, To Speak

There is a math class in Wicomico County where kids are learning that one plus one can equal much more than two.

In George Blankenship's classes at Mardela Middle and High School, when one student helps another, they learn much more than they would have on their own.

Blankenship is just one of many teachers who has discovered the benefits of a new, but in some ways very old strategy for teaching "Cooperative Learning."

One of the leading researchers and teachers of Cooperative Learning, Dr. Roger Johnson, is coming to Salisbury State this month to introduce more educators to the exciting prospects this strategy has to offer.

Dr. Charles K. Long, associate professor of education at SSU, explains that in a cooperative classroom, students work together to solve problems and, in some cases, teach the subject matter to each other, as an integral part of the learning process. Like the early one-room schoolhouses, students work in groups that may include the brightest in the class and the slowest. Unlike most contemporary classrooms, however, teachers spend most of their time working with the groups, rather than lecturing to the class.

In a cooperative classroom, there is no competition among students to "go to the head of the class." Their teacher has structured the lesson so that the students become actively involved in it. Rather than work individually or in competition with each other, students work in groups where each member has to succeed. And they wind up learning more than the lesson itself.

To prepare his students to work together, Long begins the semester with team-building exercises. Throughout the semester, social skills are deliberately taught. Students learn to share, to accept new ideas and contribute their own. Perhaps most importantly, they learn how to disagree with one another.

"Business studies show that the number one reason people fail at their first job is that they lack the ability to work together," Long said. "Everyone assumes that people learn this automatically." Reconciling differences is deliberately built into lessons in Long's classrooms, as part of the cooperative learning strategy. A fringe benefit, said Long, is that "kids learn to help each other."

Blankenship sees many such fringe benefits in his classrooms. In his middle school classrooms, he begins the year by building students'

DiBartolo Selected Top Doctoral Candidate

Gerard R. DiBartolo, an assistant professor of marketing with the Perdue School of Business, was honored recently as one of the nation's outstanding candidates for a doctoral degree in his field.

He was among 74 top doctoral candidates selected by the American Marketing Association to attend a three-day consortium of experts in the marketing field held at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles.

There the 74 scholars, all in the final stages of their program of study for a doctoral degree, met with leading professors of marketing and other experts in the field throughout the country.

DiBartolo, who is enrolled in the doctoral study program at George Washington University in Washington, D.C., represented that school at the consortium.

Commenting on the affair, Dr. Richard F. Bebee, dean of the Perdue School, said, "We at SSU feel honored when Gerry or anyone on our faculty receives such prestigious recognition. We think it's an indication of the kind of faculty we have here at the Perdue School."

The purpose of the consortium was to acquaint the doctoral students with the latest developments in the marketing field and also to help them select a research topic for their dissertations, the final step in one's quest for a doctorate.

DiBartolo said he came away from the meeting with several ideas for his dissertation. One he is considering would be a detailed study of the value of sponsoring sporting events from both the viewpoint of the sponsor and that of those staging the event.

Such a study would involve two aspects of his teaching career. In addition to being on the business faculty at SSU, he also is the University's head soccer coach.

A 13-year veteran of SSU's business faculty, DiBartolo earned his bachelor's and master's degrees at Frostburg State University in western Maryland.

Horticulture Department Conducts Campus Tours

Beginning this fall, the Horticulture Department will conduct plant tours of the campus.

The tours are designed to showcase rare and unusual plants in the campus arboretum which are there for education and exhibition. "This is an opportunity to be introduced to the plants that we have been collecting from other botanic gardens and arboreta over the last several years," said Les Lutz, horticulture director.

Tours will begin on the northeast patio of the Guerrieri University Center. The first tour will be conducted Tuesday, October 1, at noon and will last approximately 45 minutes. All tours are free.

Cooper Featured

Dr. Nancy Joyce Cooper, a member of the music faculty, was a featured recitalist at the National Convention of the Organ Historical Society held in Baltimore in July.

Cooper performed on the 1973 Detlef Kleuker organ at St. John's Lutheran Church in Parkville, one of the only organs in the United States by the German builder. Cooper's program included works by Bach, Vivaldi, Buxtehude and Balbastre, and was recorded by Michael Barone for possible future release on his National Public Radio Program "Pipedreams."

Mastroianni Performs Piano Recital Sept. 26

Internationally acclaimed pianist Dr. Thomas Mastroianni performs on Thursday, September 26, at 8 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri University Center.

The New York Times has described Mastroianni as a "serious artist...sensitive musician" while The Times of London characterized his performance as a "vigorous style of playing excellently suited to American works...deep interpretive insight...glitteringly brilliant."

Known for his recitals, lectures, concerto appearances and chamber music programs throughout the United States and in Mexico, the Caribbean, Europe, South America and the Far East, Mastroianni is currently chairman of piano at the Benjamin T. Rome School of Music at Catholic University, having served there as dean of music for nine years. Prior to that he was chairman of applied music and professor of piano at Texas Tech University.

A native of Pittsburgh, Mastroianni earned B.S. and M.S. degrees from Juillard where he was a scholarship student of Beveridge Webster. After military service, he earned the D.M.A. in piano performance from Indiana University where he worked with Bela Nagy and Sidney Foster.

Mastroianni is a frequent adjudicator at piano competitions and has held offices in national organziations such as the National Association of Schools of Music in which he was regional vice-chairman and elected member of the Graduate Commission. He is currently executive-secretary of the American Liszt Society.

His many workshops, master classes and lecture-recitals have included topics such as "Performance Anxiety," "Chopin and Bel Canto," "The Italian Aspect of Liszt" and "Musical Memory." He is currently at work on a book on the latter topic.

His performance will feature works by Debussy, Ravel and Liszt. The concert is free and the public is invited. For more information call 543-6100.

Technology Council Seeks to Improve Economic Climate

If someone offered you a set of valuable business tools that would benefit your company while giving a boost to the economy of the lower Shore, would be you interested?

If you would, and your company manufactures a product or provides technology-related services, the Lower Eastern Shore Regional Technology Council (LESRTC) has a proposal for you.

One of six such councils established across the state by the Office of Technology Development of the Maryland Department of Economic and Employment Development, the LESRTC serves Somerset, Wicomico and Worcester counties. It is designed to improve the economic development climate for technology-related businesses in the region, and provide information and assistance to existing businesses at the same time. Information on state and federal assistance programs, assistance with employee training, establishment of active business networks, and access to the latest technology being developed at the many federal labs and universities will all be on the LESRTC menu.

J. Warren Keller, director of the LESRTC, is preparing an invitation to 400 companies to attend a kick-off breakfast. Keller says that at the LESRTC breakfast meeting in September current plans for the Council will be outlined. Keller adds that while the LESRTC mission is clear, it will take its cue with respect to specific approach from the area businesses.

"The Council has three primary objectives," according to Keller. They are to stimulate the growth and development of technological businesses on the lower Shore; to help all businesses to apply the technology available to them to make improvements in areas like productivity and safety; and to encourage networking among the private sector personnel and those in government in economic development, education and elected positions.

Warren Rosenthal, director of economic development in Worcester County and a member of the LESRTC Advisory Board, is pleased to see these efforts given priority. "This initiative began at the state level," Rosenthal explained. "There has been an ongoing discussion over the years — more informal than formal—to identify the present and, more important, the expected needs of industry for the next five years. Five years is really about as far as you want to project.

"You can take that information and begin working backwards," he continued. "What kind of education do we need to provide our workforce with the skills it needs to meet those needs?"

Another Advisory Board member is Nola Arnold, who as dean of community and continuing education at Wor-Wic Tech Community College has been working to answer that question for local businesses since 1976. She is looking forward to seeing the Council expand on the concept of training local people for local jobs.

"Everyone is looking for more trained people," said Arnold. She has been impressed by the bright, talented people here on the Shore.

Keller explained that improved technological training is just the beginning. "We plan to form county round tables and regional forums that will meet on a regular basis.

"At those meetings members can discuss the problems we all share, from waste management and industrial safety to improving productivity," Keller said. "They can share the solutions that they have found to those problems. We will bring in speakers who specialize in issues that local businesses are facing."

And there's more.

The Lower Eastern Shore Regional Technology Council will host seminars for companies in the area on topics of general technological interest, on better management strategies or about matching grants or special loan programs. The Council will conduct surveys to assess existing technology, training and education programs and make the results of those surveys available to members. Members can arrange to have specialists analyze their company's productivity and get advice to make improvements—at no cost.

In his experience in economic development, Rosenthal has seen that there are many valuable resources available to area businesses. He sees part of the LESRTC's role as a clearinghouse of that information. "We need to focus those resources and get the word out," he said. "Accessing the system itself is difficult."

Getting access to the Council will not be difficult. From his office at the Perdue School of Business, Keller will publish a newsletter keeping members informed in the latest technology—from high to low tech—and fill them in on what's available. The quarterly publication will carry news ranging from local advancements to current federal funding opportunities.

Designing its programs to suit local needs, the LESRTC will be many things to many people. However, Keller is quick to define what it is not.

The LESRTC is not restricted to high tech. The technological advancements it hopes to bring to the lower Shore will have applications to businesses employing any level of technical complexity from the most simplistic to the most sophisticated.

Keller adds that the LESRTC is also not limited by geography. He'll keep in contact with members in all three lower Shore counties, sharing news with area businesses and drawing on the considerable resources of educational institutions in the region.

The best place for those invited to learn more about the Lower Eastern Shore Regional Technology Council will be at the kick-off breakfast at 8 a.m. on Thursday, September 26, at UMES. Membership applications will be included with the invitations and application for membership can be made any time before or after the breakfast meeting. There will be a nominal fee for memberships.

Attendance at the breakfast is free and does not imply any commitment with respect to Council membership.

The invitation to breakfast opens the door both ways. Businesses will have a chance not only to learn what the Council can do for them today, but to tell the Council what needs to be in the future.

Further information about the Regional Technology Council may be obtained by calling 548-4419.

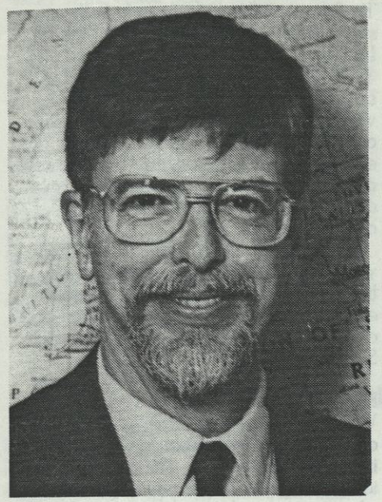
Soviet Union Lecture Series Begins



Dr. Philip S. Gillette

Salisbury State begins its fall lecture series, "Images of the Soviet Union," on Monday, September 23. Sponsored by the Political Science and History departments and the Faculty Cultural Events Committee, the first lecture will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri University Center.

Launching the series is Dr. Philip S. Gillette, associate professor of political science, chair of the Department of Political Science and Geography and chair of the graduate program in international studies at Old Dominion University. The topic of Gillette's lecture is "Soviet Domestic Politics."

A leading authority on Soviet foreign and domestic policy, American foreign policy and international relations, Gillette earned his Ph.D. in political science and his M.A. in regional studies concentrating on the Soviet Union from Harvard University.

"Gillette's lecture on Soviet domestic politics is certainly going to be a timely one because he is going to have to address how the failed coup happened, why it happened and the truly momentous changes which it has set in motion," said Dr. Greg Cashman, professor of political science at SSU and one of the lecture series organizers.

Gillette has made frequent guest appearances on radio and television as a commentator on international events. He served as a consultant to Academic Television Services at Old Dominion for their program, "Doing Business with the USSR: Toward the Joint Venture" (1989) and "USA/USSR Youth Summit" (1987). He co-directed Old Dominion's Conference on Soviet Military Doctrine in an Era of Change in 1989 and was a consultant to CBS-TV for "The Kremlin Connection," a documentary on the life of Armand Hammer.

Fluent in Russian, French, German and Italian, Gillette has traveled several times to the Soviet Union and East Europe. He is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies and the International Studies Association, and serves on the American Committee for U.S./Soviet Relations.

In addition to his book, "The Sources of Soviet Naval Conduct," co-edited with Willard C. Frank, Jr. of Lexington, MA, in 1989, he has authored numerous articles, papers and reviews dealing with the Soviet Union.

The lectures are free and open to the public. For more information, please contact the Guerrieri Center at 543-6100.

The campus community and the public are cordially invited to this forum in the Guerrieri University Center Nanticoke room A. The performers will take questions from the audience. Admission is free.

Dr. Nelson Butler, vice-president of academic affairs, has covered the over-run for the FDC. Therefore, all faculty members whose requests have been approved will receive their travel grant.

United Charities: Life Crisis Center

The campus will participate again in the statewide United Charities Campaign this fall. Last year, University employees pledged over $12,000 to non-profit organizations which benefit Maryland residents. This year SSU workers can choose from hundreds of statewide organizations established to aid our youth, the elderly, those with physical, mental or emotional disabilities, the hungry... Thousands of Marylanders in need benefit everyday from your contributions.

In an effort to provide campus employees with a better understanding of some of the beneficiaries of the United Charities Campaign, each week in the SSU News a different non-profit organization which services the lower Eastern Shore will be profiled.

The Life Crisis Center operates a 24-hour hotline for the tri-county area (Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset) dealing with all types of problems through telephone counseling, information and referrals. The agency attempts to increase public awareness and provide education and professional training in the area of sexual offense, domestic violence and suicide.

Life Crisis assists victims and family members of rape, sexual assault, child sexual assault and domestic violence in coping with the aftermath of the crimes through advocacy and counseling.

Last year Life Crisis received 9,822 hotline calls.

Heidler Presents Paper

Dr. David S. Heidler, assistant professor of history in the Fulton School of Liberal Arts, recently presented a paper at the annual conference of the Society for Historians of the Early American Republic. The conference was held at the University of Wisconsin in Madison in July.

Heidler's paper, "The Politics of National Aggression: Congress and the First Seminole War," examined the congressional investigation of Andrew Jackson's 1818 invasion of Spanish Florida. During a campaign that was supposed to discipline marauding Seminole Indians, Jackson attacked Spanish forts at St. Marks and Pensacola. Thus, the U.S. military made war on a foreign power without the congressional authorization required by the Constitution.

Heidler's research into this significant constitutional crisis shows that the political accord of the so-called Era of Good Feelings was breaking down earlier than previously thought. He has drawn praise from historians in the field for advancing important revisions about the modern nature of political discourse during the administration of James Monroe. He will be presenting the findings of his continuing research in this area at a conference at Auburn University in October.

Heidler also has had an article, "Virginia in the American Revolution," accepted for publication in the forthcoming Encyclopedia of the American Revolution. In addition to this major entry, his biography of patriot General Samuel Elbert will appear in the two-volume work due out in 1992.

Sea Gull Sports Roundup

by Paul Ohanian

Despite a strong defensive effort and an overall edge in possession time by over four minutes, the Sea Gulls fell at C.W. Post, 10-5 in the football opener for both schools last Saturday. Rob Grande's 27-yard third quarter field goal accounted for SSU's only offensive points. The Gulls added two points when Post punter Mike Manzella took a safety with 30 seconds remaining.

The Sea Gulls open the home season this Saturday at 1:30 against Methodist College. The Monarchs, playing just their third season of intercollegiate football, are 1-1 on the year following a 34-0 loss to Guilford last week.

The soccer team fell to 0-3 on the year following last Saturday's 3-1 loss to defending NCAA Division III champion Glassboro State. The Gulls led 1-0 at halftime behind Kevin Jackson's early tally, but couldn't hold off a second half charge by the Profs. SSU begins conference action this Saturday with a 2 p.m. home game against ESAC rival Shenandoah.

The field hockey team begins a big weekend of action on Saturday when it hosts the annual SSU/Sunfest Tournament. This year's field includes Washington, Catholic, Eastern Mennonite, Lebanon Valley and Oneonta State. Play begins Saturday morning and continues through Sunday afternoon.

The young volleyball team continues to show improvement each week. SSU, 6-4 overall after a 1-3 start, advanced to the semifinals of the Gettysburg Tournament last weekend. Sophomore Jenean Plumley was among the key performers for SSU as she registered 19 blocks in the four game tournament. The Gulls play in the Mary Washington Tournament this Saturday.

The cross country teams compete in the Christopher Newport Invitational Meet this Saturday. Junior Tim Smith has had a strong opening two weeks for SSU, winning the Lebanon Valley Invitational last weekend after placing second at the Essex Invitational one week earlier. Erin Green was SSU's top female finisher last weekend.

Her area of study is sports history with an emphasis on women in sport. Chepko authored the chapter, "The Domestication of Basketball," in a recently published book, titled, "The Centennial of Basketball: from Frailty to the Final Four."

Chepko was elected from a strong pool of nominees from the campus community to chair the council.

Women's Issues Update

The first of the "Topics at Noon" series sponsored by the Council on Women's Issues was held on Friday, September 13, and provided all who attended with some lively and productive discussion.

The initial discussion focused on the issue of violence against women and provided the council with the impetus to begin work on activities for the fall surrounding this theme. Ideas regarding programs and workshops were generated regarding self-defense, victimization and related issues. Look for information in the near future regarding upcoming activites.

The next "Topics at Noon" will focus on a review and discussion of the film, "Thelma and Louise." Several articles, reactions and reviews will be placed on reserve at Blackwell Library for those who would like to read them prior to the Friday, September 27, meeting. These reviews will be used as a basis for discussion.

The meeting will be held from noon-1 p.m. in the Choptank Room of the Guerrieri University Center. Any campus community member is welcome to attend this brown bag meeting.

self esteem. Once they feel good about themselves, he says, they are ready to give learning a try.

"Then kids buy into the learning process," he beamed. "It is their responsibility to learn, more than it is mine to teach."

Often Blankenship will group quick students with slower ones. Both benefit, he says. The child who becomes his classmate's teacher deepens his own understanding of the lesson. Others find themselves taking on tasks they might never have tried.

"Solving a problem alone can be threatening," said Blankenship. "Kids that wouldn't try to solve problems alone feel they can with the group."

Johnson and his brother, Dr. David Johnson, are among the scholars who have researched the effects of cooperative learning. According to David Johnson, "There is probably more evidence validating the use of cooperative learning than there is for any other aspect of education...and the research applies as much to teacher as it does to students."

As a teacher, Roger Johnson has found many of the same benefits that have made believers of Long and Blankenship.

"What you want for every child—but especially for those with a lot of ability—is a cheering section urging that student to work to maximal capacity. You can have high, medium and low kids in the same group, cheering each other on...The cooperative system encourages everybody to work to top capacity."

For the teacher, cooperative learning represents a new way of thinking about his or her role in the classroom. More time is spent planning lessons built on what the Johnsons call "positive interdependence" and much less lecturing in front of the class. "They may have a feeling like "I must not be doing my job," said Long. "But actually, this takes a bit more planning."

And once they try it, teachers are becoming the evangelists of the cooperative system. "It has changed my teaching" said Long. "I wasn't chopped liver before; but now I keep students involved."

George Blankenship is equally enthusiastic, and now five teachers in his department use the cooperative system. Among other things, cooperative learning has helped him reach problem students: "If a kid is doing something, he's too busy to be disruptive."

Teachers and parents - anyone who is interested in learning more about cooperative education will have a chance to do just that in the second of this year's Riall Lectures, presented by the SSU Education Department at the beginning of each school year. The featured speaker will be Dr. Roger Johnson.

Roger and David Johnson divide their time between teaching at the University of Minnesota, where Roger is a professor of curriculum and instruction and David is a professor of education psychology, and spreading the word about cooperative learning. Together and individually, they have presented workshops and seminars from Seattle to Singapore. Roger Johnson is the director of the Cooperative Learning Center at the University of Minnesota.

Roger Johnson will speak in the Holloway Hall Auditorium at 8 p.m. Thursday, September 26. Admission is free and the public is cordially invited. For more information call Dr. Maurice Bozman, Riall Professor of Education, at 543-6282.

Foreign Study Opportunities Abound!

Study in Britain

The short January term at Salisbury State University has offered students an opportunity to study British culture first-hand on an almost annual basis since 1984, and another London course and trip has been organized for January 1992 by Jim Welsh, associate professor of English.

"Those who have not been to England in January might expect a blast of winter," said Welsh, "but that is not necessarily the case at all. For the past two years, the weather has been glorious and not even especially nippy, and the sun was out almost every day. You'll even see flowers budding in London in January, as we did last year.

"But this is not a trip for botanists," said Welsh. "The main purpose is to visit London landmarks such as St. Paul's Cathedral and the Tower of London and to see as many play performances as we can pack into a two-week stay. Sure, there are papers to write, but this could be as enjoyable and interesting a course as you'll ever take."

In many respects January is the perfect time to visit London, when the tourist trade slumps after Christmas and bargains are to be had. The cost of the trip, exclusive of tuition, should be under $950, and that includes the trans-Atlantic flight, bus transfers and two weeks in a London hotel. (Last year it was the Eden Park near Queensway and Kensington Palace.)

Welsh has been to London a dozen times and knows the city better than he knows Baltimore. "London offers more than twice as many plays in production as you'll find on Broadway," Welsh noted, "and most of these are excellent." Day trips are also organized for students to let them see the English countryside. Stonehenge, Salisbury and Bath can be covered in a single excursion, for example, or Oxford, Warwick and Stratford-upon Avon. If there is sufficient interest this year, a side trip might also be offered to Nottingham and Sherwood Forest and nearby Eastwood, where the novelist D.H. Lawrence was born.

The trip is scheduled to leave Salisbury on Thursday, January 16, and return on January 30. Interest meetings are scheduled for Thursday, September 26, and Thursday, October 10, at 8:30 p.m. in Devilbiss Science Hall Auditorium. For additional information, call Welsh at the English Department 543-6446 or at home 749-4190.

New Zealand, Australia Trip

An interest meeting for winter term 1992 travel courses in English and/or nursing will be held Wednesday, October 2, at 5 p.m. in Nanticoke B on the second floor of the Guerrieri University Center.

Interested people unable to attend should contact Dr. Tom Erskine (543-6371) or Dr. Edna Quinn (742-7963).

Study in Russia

Conditions in the Soviet Union are rapidly changing, but you still have the chance to witness history in the making. Join SSU in its 1992 winter term study-tour to this fascinating country.

Travelling to the three capitals of Russia's history, Moscow, St. Petersburg and Kiev, you'll be able to experience a cultural wonderland. See the Hermitage, the Kremlin's treasures, the riches of St. Sophia's in Kiev. Enjoy cultural events, get to know Russia's history "up close and personal." Visit Lenin's tomb before it's too late and absorb an understanding of a complex society in transformation.

The price is $1,498, including air travel, all hotels and meals, admissions, side excursions to Pushkin and Zagorsk, and an overnight in Prague on return. Departure is on January 17 and return is January 27.

For more information, come to an interest meeting Thursday, September 26, at 7:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall, room 104, on the SSU campus, or contact the tour leader, Dr. Robert Berry in the History Department, at 543-6251. The study-tour is open to all students, faculty, staff and friends of SSU.

Kundell Honored

Dr. Frederick Kundell, professor and chair of the Chemistry Department, was one of 29 U.S. university faculty members selected by the National Science Foundation to participate in a two-week program which focused on polymer chemistry research and education.

"Teaching Macro-Molecular Chemistry and Engineering in the Undergraduate Curriculum," sponsored by the National Science Foundation and the American Chemical Society, was developed for people who teach or are interested in polymer chemistry. Offered for the first time this year, the program was held at Virginia Polytechnic Institute (Virginia Tech) because of its leadership in polymer research and education.

According to Kundell, the average person, even though he or she may not know it, is aware of polymer chemistry. "All synthetics, plastics, rubber, polyester clothing and packaging materials are made up of polymers," he said. "Polymers are all around us and they account for a substantial amount of business in our country."

Although polymers surround us in our homes and working environments and even though the majority of industrial chemists and engineers work with polymers every day, only about 20 percent of the students in colleges and universities in the United States receive training in this area of chemistry.

"We are turning out chemists who are not prepared to enter their work area. I had not taken any polymer chemistry courses before I started my first job so I had to learn as I went along," Kundell added.

Salisbury State has offered courses in polymer chemistry for three years, but "we aren't where we want to be yet," he said.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Benefit For Shane Conley

Mucopolysacchridosis is a severely deforming disease that effects about 1,000 children in this country. Carol and Phillip Bosserman's seven-year-old grandson, Shane Conley, has this disease.

The prognosis for Shane at age three months was "he may live to be six," said his grandmother. He will be eight October 2! Shane is as bright as his normal twin sister, Heather. Carol describes Shane as "a cheerful little guy" who recently endured six weeks in the intensive care unit at Pittsburgh Children's Hospital. He now lives with a trache tube which denies him speech. He will enter Johns Hopkins Hospital in October to undergo more surgery in hope of improving his condition.

No health insurance provider will accept Shane. Therefore, the Conleys are trying to meet astronomical medical expenses through the state medical assisitance program and the generosity of family and friends. The White Marsh/Perry Hall Jaycees in Baltimore are sponsoring a Shane Conley Benefit—dancing, entertainment, door prizes—on Saturday, September 28. The tickets are $12.50.

Ticket buyers unable to attend the benefit will still be eligible for several nice prizes including a weekend at Inner Harbor in Baltimore with hotel accomodations. All monies from the tickets go directly into the fund for

Shane Conley

Shane. Please call the Bossermans at 543-6022 or 742-4945 if interested in tickets or more information about Shane and mucopolysacchridosis.

Moscow Circus Comes to Campus

Young members of the Moscow Circus and students at SSU come together in an open discussion of political and cultural changes in the Soviet Union on Thursday, September 26. The differences between the two groups couldn't be more obvious, the discussion more timely.

The youthful Muscovites, who make their living in the heady world of European show business, arrive in Salisbury direct from the capital of an empire undergoing revolutionary upheavals. They will be visiting a University campus in one of America's longest settled rural areas, Maryland's Eastern Shore—known for its continuity, stability and conservatism.

The circus artists have been in the United States only a few days. They come direct from Moscow. Salisbury was chosen as the "rehearsal city" for the North American tour, not only because of the convenience of its location to several East Coast urban areas, but because it is economical for the performing company to rehearse here.

According to a spokesperson for the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center which is hosting the circus, most of the young Soviets have never been in the United States before. Salisbury and the University will be their introduction to civic and intellectual life in this country.

Long before the campus visit was planned the University Cultural Events Committee had decided to devote a series of fall events to the Soviet Union. "The visit of the circus complements the series perfectly," said Dr. Robert Berry, associate professor of history.

"Salisbury has an exceptional opportunity to see what is possibly the world's finest circus," Berry added. He regularly leads study tours to the Soviet Union and has seen the circus perform.

The premier performance of the troupe's all new program will be September 27-29 in Salisbury. It is being billed as "one that reinterprets Soviet traditions." To be played on a regular theatre stage, the production is "heading to Broadway," producers say.

The Salisbury State discussion with Soviet circus stars may not have sequins and rhinestones, but will introduce young people to each other's very different worlds. Organizers are hoping for some meaningful interchange. The campus community and the public are cordially invited to the forum which is in Nanticoke A of the Guerrieri University Center (off Dogwood Drive) from 4-5:15 p.m. Performers will take questions from the audience. Admission is free.

For more information contact Amy Wiedemer, SSU student activities and organizations director, at 543-6209.

North American Indians Subject of Art Exhibit

A new exhibit, "George Catlin Prints," opens in the Atrium Gallery located in the Guerrieri University Center on Friday, September 27. Catlin is often referred to as "the" Indian painter. The first artist to penetrate the Far West, he spent eight years among the Indians and often captured the native pride and common humanity of his Indian subjects.

Seventeen prints from the University-owned portfolio of Catlin's North American Indians: hunting scenes and amusements of the Rocky Mountains and prairies will be on display. The exhibit is open daily from 11 a.m.-4 p.m. except Sunday, September 29, when it is open from noon-4 p.m. It is closed on October 3.

Related video programs accompanying the exhibit, all at 2 p.m., include: September 27, "Views of a Vanishing Frontier," September 28, "Hudson River and Its Painters," September 29, "Ansel Adams: Photographer," September 30, "Edwin Church," October 1, "The Wild Riders," October 2, "Views of a Vanishing Frontier," and October 3, "Hudson River and Its Painters."

The print exhibit and video show are free and open to the public. After the closing of the exhibit the prints will be hung permanently in offices and public spaces throughout the campus. For more information call the Guerrieri Center at 543-6100.

Fire Prevention Week

The week of October 7 - 11 is National Fire Prevention Week. During that week, which is also the anniversary of the Great Chicago Fire, the Public Safety Office would like everyone to be conscious of fire safety.

Fire exit drills will be conducted in all campus buildings. The purpose of these drills is to familiarize everyone with what to do in the event of an actual fire. An emphasis will be placed on orderly evacuation under proper control rather than on speed. Everyone will become accustomed to the sound of the fire alarm and to the location of the nearest exit.

Proper and timely response to fire emergencies requires preplanning. For this reason, it is important that everyone participate in the drill by leaving the building when the alarm sounds. Prompt and authoritative fire emergency procedures are the best course of action to avoid panic and possible loss of life.

When the alarm sounds, everyone should: close all windows in the room that you are in; turn off all electrical equipment; close the room door as you leave; and walk to the nearest exit (do not run and do not use the elevators).

Also, if the nearest exit is blocked due to fire or obstruction, proceed to an alternate exit, leave the building and move a safe distance from the building. Do not re-enter the building until an officer signals that it is safe.

Stressed Out?

Plan to attend a Stress Seminar on Friday, September 27, from noon - 1 p.m. in Nanticoke A of the Guerrieri University Center.

Learn how "good" and "bad" stress can affect your mental and physical health.

You'll learn how to identify stressors (sources of stress) and some techniques for reducing stress.

You'll also learn why it's important to develop a support network, and how this can be accomplished.

WSCL-FM Starts Membership Drive

WSCL-FM (89.5), the noncommercial radio station licensed to the Salisbury State University Foundation and located on the campus, has announced plans for its annual fall on-air campaign for listener support. The campaign begins October 4 and runs through October 25; it will not interrupt regular prgramming.

The fund raiser is designed as an experiment in seeking support, while leaving regular program essentially intact. The station hopes to increase its memberships by 475 new members during the month of October.

"Listeners have told us," said General Manager Fred Marino, "and research data confirm, that the more conventional kind of on-air fund raiser, with its characteristic disruptiveness, can raise money in the short term, but alienates listeners in the long run. Good music and news—not chatter and drum-banging—are why people listen to radio stations like WSCL. We feel our listeners deserve music and news, even while we ask them for their support."

"Delmarva arts audiences," added Marino, "have an exceptionally good track record of supporting work they value. Just the same, we're taking a risk with this type of drive. It's up to our listeners to make it a success, in which case, we'll stay quiet the next time around. We're hoping that our listeners will become members of WSCL and that our members will encourage their friends to also become members."

During the drive, WSCL will devote only a few minutes each hour to air messages in which on-air personalities at the station and other spokespersons from the Delmarva community will explain how listeners can become members and why they should.

The station needs to raise member funds because it is dependent upon listener support. Continued classical music programming and in-depth news reporting will rely increasingly on income from listeners.

The fund-raising announcements will explain the stations five-tier membership system, ranging from $35 to $500, and will describe the benefits available to members in addition to the finest classical music and public affairs programming on Delmarva. Listeners can join the station by calling 543-6895, or by sending a check to P.O. Box 2596, Salisbury, MD 21802.

Sea Gull Sports Roundup by Paul Ohanian

The Sea Gulls scored early and often last week as they ran to a 41-21 win over Methodist in the football home opener last week. Nine different running backs combined for 297 rushing yards and accounted for five of the six touchdowns. FB Jason Barton finished with 68 yards and two touchdowns, freshman Tony McCray added 67 yards and two touchdowns, and senior Pierre Copes had 69 yards and an 83-yard punt return for a touchdown. Ron Stump accounted for the other Sea Gull score with an 11-yard TD run.

The Sea Gulls, now 1-1 on the year, host cross-state rival Frostburg State this Saturday at 1:30 p.m. The Gulls are 13-5 all-time against the Bobcats, but have lost to the arch-rivals the last two years.

Meanwhile, it was another successful Sunfest Field Hockey Tournament for the home team as the Gulls won the event for the third straight year. SSU defeated Lebanon Valley, 2-1, and Washington, 5-0, in addition to a 1-1 tie with Eastern Mennonite. Salisbury's 2-0-1 record in the round-robin was the best among the six teams, giving SSU the title. Senior All-American Cheryl Ish paced the offense with four goals on the weekend.

The men's soccer team overcame the loss of co-captain Kevin Jackson last week to win two games, beating Washington, 5-0, and edging Shenandoah, 1-0. Scott Talley netted two scores against the Shoremen, while Mike Conners scored the game's only goal against the Hornets. Jackson, who had 10 goals in 1990, will be lost for the year due to surgery for a non-athletic related ailment.

Tim Smith and Erin Green each claimed titles for the men's and women's cross country squads in the Christopher Newport Invitational last Saturday. Smith won the men's 8K race in a time of 25:57, while Green registered a time of 19:33 in winning the 5K women's championship. SSU finished third overall in the seven-team men's competition, while the SSU women were second among six teams.

The volleyball squad, 6-9 overall, looks to rebound from last weekend's 0-4 showing at the Mary Washington Tournament when it hosts the Gull Classic this Friday and Saturday. Teams scheduled to play in the two-day event include Stockton State, Lincoln, Allentown, Washington and Shenandoah.

The women's tennis team opened its season with mixed success last weekend. The Gulls fell to Loyola, 8-1, on Friday, then rallied from a 4-1 deficit to defeat ESAC rival Cabrini 5-4 on Saturday. Number one singles player Lisa Trelease was the only two-time winner for SSU, registering a 6-3, 3-6, 6-3 win against Loyola and adding a 6-3, 6-2 victory against Cabrini.

Dick Young, co-chair of the Salisbury State University Foundation Golf Classic and president of Salisbury Brick Co., is shown teeing off at Green Hill Yacht & Country Club, the site for the eighth annual Golf Classic. A general sponsorship is $200 and the entry fee is $200 per foursome. Proceeds will be used by the SSU Foundation for the encouragement and enrichment of education at the University. For more information on the Golf Classic call the Foundation Office at 543-6175.

Klein Wins Prize

Mary Klein, assistant curator at the Julia A. Purnell Museum in Snow Hill and a 1991 SSU graduate, has been chosen the recipient of a $250 cash prize awarded by the Maryland Historical Society for a Maryland history essay.

Klein's paper was selected from entries submitted from throughout Maryland. Using primary resource materials such as church records, wills, census data, rent rolls and household inventories from Snow Hill, Princess Anne, Crisfield, Easton and Salisbury, her paper was titled, "We will be Held Accountable: Some Inquiries into the Position of Blacks In Somerset Parish 1692-1861."

Schultz To Present Workshop

Dr. Barbara Townsend Schultz, an associate professor of education in the School of Education and Professional Studies, will present a workshop on Friday, October 11, at the Diamond State Reading Association Conference at Dewey Beach, DE.

The presentation "Fairy Tales with a Twist," will feature children's books such as "The True Story of the Three Little Pigs" and "The Frog Prince Continued" by Jon Scieszka. Slides and children's writing samples will be included.

Schultz has been a member of the faculty of the Department of Education for the past 18 years and is currently assistant chair of that department. She teaches Communication Arts Methods and Children's Literature for prospective teachers.

United Charities: Epilepsy Association

The campus will participate again in the statewide United Charities Campaign this fall. Last year, University employees pledged over $12,000 to non-profit organizations which benefit Maryland residents. This year SSU workers can choose from hundreds of statewide organizations established to aid our youth, the elderly, those with physical, mental or emotional disabilities, the hungry... Thousands of Marylanders in need benefit everyday from your contributions.

In an effort to provide campus employees with a better understanding of some of the beneficiaries of the United Charities Campaign, each week in the SSU News a different non-profit organization which serves the Lower Eastern Shore will be profiled. This week it's the Epilepsy Association of The Eastern Shore.

The Epilepsy Association of the Eastern Shore, Inc. is a private, non-profit organization dedicated to the prevention and control of epilepsy and its consequences, and to help those with epilepsy, their families and others concerned with overcoming the problems associated with this condition.

The agency provides clinical support through counseling and self-help groups, financial assistance through emergency and support services, residential and vocational advice, recreational opportunities via a summer camp, in-service training, general information and referrals.

EAES's primary emphasis is on people with epilepsy, however, grant funds are awarded to serve developmentally disabled people. Last year, EAES served 423 clients on the lower Eastern Shore.

Kundell, who joined the SSU faculty in 1970 after teaching at the University of Aarhus in Denmark and the University of Maryland College Park, believes that emphasis has to be placed on undergraduate teaching.

"We have spent almost $300,000 to revamp SSU's lab facilities and we have also made changes in our chemistry curriculum to bring it up-to-date," Kundell said. "We were able to do these things partially because of the endowment from Richard Henson and partially because of the administration's desire to be the best in whatever we do. Our goal is to turn out the best chemists in the world."

Kundell will work toward this goal by sharing the information that he learned in the two-week summer course with students in his Experimental Physical Chemistry class. He will introduce new material to the class and allow his students to experiment with the polymer samples he also received. Next year, students in Kundell's Polymer Chemistry course will also have the opportunity to benefit from his participation in the program.

"I am very thankful that I was selected to take part in this excellent program," Kundell added. "Our students will definitely profit from it."

Enhancement Project Set With SSU, Middle Schools

Educators from the tri-county area feel that the Middle School Summer Enhancement Program is right on target. Standing from left to right are: Dr. Richard Walker, assistant superintendent of Worcester County Public Schools; Dr. DeWayne Whittington, superintendent of Somerset County Public Schools; Dr. Evelyn Holman, superintendent of Wicomico County Public Schools; Dr. Ann Taylor, an assistant professor in the SSU Department of Education and director of the program; and Dr. Brennan Taylor, an assistant professor in the SSU Department of Social Work and a co-director.

"We have to take action now and help our middle school students. Universities and middle schools have to work together and save the future of our children," said Dr. Ann Taylor, an assistant professor in the Department of Education. "We have to start blending theory and practice to show our students that they can learn and they do have opportunities and choices in life."

Beginning in July of 1992, Salisbury State University and educators from Somerset, Wicomico and Worcester counties will work together to stimulate students' interest in education through the implementation of the Middle School Summer Enhancement Program.

The brainchild of Drs. Ann and Brennan Taylor, this pilot program, which is being sponsored by the SSU Office of Academic Affairs, the School of Education and Professional Studies, Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset counties and the Maryland State Department of Education, will allow 30 sixth, seventh and eighth-graders from the tri-county area the opportunity to participate in a two-week residential program involving academic, social and recreational activities.

"There are very little resources and opportunities available in this area to keep young people out of trouble and involved in social and educational activities. We have to reduce the possibility of working with students in a rehabilitation program and start a preventative program that will give kids the opportunity to participate in a variety of activities," said Dr. Brennan Taylor, assistant professor in the SSU Social Work Department. "Students will develop and

'Mark Twain' Encore October 5

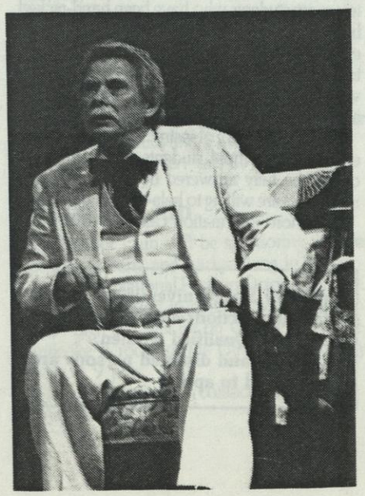
"Back by Popular Demand," says the poster, but then in smaller print it reads, "But please, this time no tar and feathers."

What is back is "An Evening With Mark Twain," reprised for Parents/Spouse Weekend Saturday, October 5. The "tar and feathers"—appropriately tongue and cheek.

R.J. Wesley again recreates the celebrated author in the 70th year of his life during a lecture tour. Last April he performed his Twain tribute titled "Lies, Laughs and a Lynchin'" to capacity audiences on campus.

For many students, both university and high school, it was an entertaining introduction to Twain's tall tales and short stories. After the success of the spring run, "We thought it would be a good way to welcome and entertain new students and their families," said T. Paul Pfeiffer, director of SSU Theatre.

Twain was a prolific writer and one-time newspaperman. During much of his lifetime (1835-1910) he took to the lecture circuit to raise money. According to critical reviews of the era, he was an extremely popular if unorthodox orator, using a distinctly American drawl and lounging about the stage with a variety of gestures and mannerisms, all to maximum comic effect. He communicated in a vernacular that is still accessible a century later.



Dr. R.J. Wesley

"Lies, Laughs and a Lynchin'" includes selections from classic Twain works such as "Huckleberry Finn," and his celebrated collections of travel stories, "A Tramp Abroad" and "The Innocents Abroad."

It initiates this year's theatre season which includes "The Playboy of the Western World," a 20th century comedy by Irish playwright, John Synge, opening October 18; "Boy's Life" by Howard Korder, a contemporary comedy of manners, opening November 20; "The Grapes of Wrath," the 1990 Tony Award-winning adaptation of John Steinbeck's classic novel, inaugurating the new Fulton Hall Theatre, opening March 6; "Apology for the Life of an Actor," a world premier one-man show inspired by the life of the 18th century British actor, Parents/Spouse Weekend Turns 18!

The University will host its 18th annual Parents/Spouse this weekend, October 4, 5-6. Family and friends of students are invited to visit the campus, talk to professors and staff, observe typical classes in session and attend special events.

"We look forward to welcoming our extended family back to the University," said Guerrieri University Center Director Dave Ganoe. "We have planned many activities that we hope will give parents and spouses a real flavor of Salisbury State University."

Friday night's program will feature the Charles Greene III performance, "The Color of Magic." The show, which is being sponsored by the Salisbury State Program Board, will begin at 8 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium. Admission is free.

Official registration will take place Saturday from 9-10 a.m. in the Guerrieri University Center. After registering, visitors are encouraged to attend the University's Open House and meet the academic vice president, deans, faculty, student services staff and representatives from the Parent's Association.

At the conclusion of the Open House, SSU

Commencement exercises will be held on Sunday, December 15, at 3 p.m. in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center. Detailed information will be mailed at a later date.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Cash Cart Operator

The Dining Services Gulls Nest Snack Bar has an immediate opening for a cash cart operator. Hours are 10 a.m.-2:30 p.m., Monday - Friday. The position requires the ability to work independently. Starting salary is $5 per hour. This is a contractual position with no state benefits.

Make application not later than October 7 to the Personnel Office, Salisbury State University, Room 222, Holloway Hall, Salisbury, MD, 21801.

Fire Prevention Week

The week of October 7 - 11 is National Fire Prevention Week. During that week, which is also the anniversary of the Great Chicago Fire, the Public Safety Office would like everyone to be conscious of fire safety.

Fire exit drills will be conducted in all campus buildings. The purpose of these drills is to familiarize everyone with what to do in the event of an actual fire. An emphasis will be placed on orderly evacuation under proper control rather than on speed. Everyone will become accustomed to the sound of the fire alarm and to the location of the nearest exit.

Proper and timely response to fire emergencies requires preplanning. For this reason, it is important that everyone participate in the drill by leaving the building when the alarm sounds. Prompt and authoritative fire emergency procedures are the best course of action to avoid panic and possible loss of life.

When the alarm sounds, everyone should: close all windows in the room that you are in; turn off all electrical equipment; close the room door as you leave; and walk to the nearest exit (do not run and do not use the elevators).

Also, if the nearest exit is blocked due to fire or obstruction, proceed to an alternate exit, leave the building and move a safe distance from the building. Do not re-enter the building until an officer signals that it is safe.

Marson Galleries Exhibit

A special exhibition and sale of original graphic art will be presented by Marson Galleries, Ltd. of Baltimore, on Friday, October 4, from 11 a.m.-8 p.m. and Saturday, October 5, from 10 a.m.-4 p.m., in the Atrium Gallery, in the Guerrieri University Center.

Marson Galleries Ltd. is the largest firm in the nation specializing in arranging exhibitions and sales of original graphic art at colleges, universities, museums, hospitals and art centers, throughout the U.S.

'The Color of Magic!' October 4

If you want to be kept continuously laughing, then make your merry way to Caruthers Hall Auditorium on October 4, for an outstanding 8 p.m. show. Voted Magician of the Year, Charles Greene III "will not only keep the laughter rolling, but with his powers of magic he will even turn the skeptics into true believers," said SSPB sponsors. Join them that Friday night as the Salisbury State Program Board's Variety Showcase presents "The Color of Magic!"

Foreign Study Opportunities Abound

Study in Britain

The short January term at Salisbury State University has offered students an opportunity to study British culture first-hand on an almost annual basis since 1984, and another London course and trip has been organized for January 1992 by Jim Welsh, associate professor of English.

Prevailing Winds

Prevailing Winds To Appear

Prevailing Winds, a woodwind quintet, will perform for the President's reception on Saturday, October 5, from 4-6 p.m. in the Guerrieri University Center lounge. Their lively style of performance includes a wide variety of selections, showing their mastery of classical, popular, jazz and ethnic music.

Prevailing Winds is exactly what their name implies. Their goal is that classic music, be it Beach Boys, Brubeck or Bach, be as much fun for the audience as it is for the performers. Their busy schedule this year includes concerts in many parts of Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D.C. They have received an enthusiastic response from their audiences and critical acclaim from the press, and have appeared on numerous radio and television programs.

The Washington Post describes an evening with Prevailing Winds as a "wide-range concert that at once delighted and relaxed the crowd...first-rate intonation, phrasing and dynamics...done with cleverness and animation." The Baltimore Sun's reviewer said that a Prevailing Winds concert was the "most enjoyable performance I have attended in some time."

The members of the group are Nan Raphael, who as a member of the Piccolo Society has an active interest in promoting the piccolo as a solo instrument; Kerry Willingham, who as well as being a specialist in baroque performance practices, is the originator of the country and western style of oboe playing; Tom Puwalski, clarinet, clearly the most eclectic member of the group, who counts among his credits study at three major conservatories of music and work with professional orchestras, polka bands, rock bands, and a Klezmer band; Beth McDonald, former member of Chicago Chamber Brass and winner of the Wisconsin Cheese Producers Sensitive French Horn Playing Competition last year; Roy Carson, holder of the American land speed record on a German bassoon. Their combined talents and unique approach to programming and performance promise to provide a highly entertaining evening of fun and music.

Tossey Presenter at Florida Conference

Dr. Marvin Tossey, chair of the Social Work Department presented a paper on the Dual Degree Social Work/Sociology Program between SSU and the University of Maryland Eastern Shore at the ninth annual Baccalaureate Program Directors' Conference in Orlando, FL, on September 28.

The paper addressed the development and implementation of the unique program which permits UMES students to earn a Bachelor of Science in sociology from UMES and a Bachelor of Social Work from Salisbury State in four years. The program design has been adopted for other intercampus dual degree programs in the University of Maryland System.

"In a time of scarce resources cooperative model designs permit program growth and curriculum diversification at minimum cost," said Tossey.

Sea Gull Sports Roundup

by Paul Ohanian

Jenean Plumley and Heidi Smid were named to the all-tournament team as SSU finished second in its own Gull Classic Volleyball Tournament last weekend. SSU finished 5-1 in round-robin play, then lost a narrow 17-15 championship game to Allentown College. The Sea Gulls are now 11-11 entering play in this weekend's Juniata Tournament.

Senior all-American Cheryl Ish continues to move up SSU's all-time goals list. The field hockey standout started the season in seventh place with 36 career goals. Her 12 goals through six games in 1991 has pushed her into third, just two goals behind Susan Ralph Elliott's 50 career scores. The Sea Gulls are ranked fourth in the nation and first in the South Region in the weekly Division III poll.

Eric Mellette's overtime goal lifted the soccer team past Kutztown, 3-2, last Saturday. Senior Joe Greco had scored twice in the second half to force the extra session. The Gulls will host Catholic on Saturday at 2 p.m.

The women's tennis team won two of three matches last weekend to even its record at 3-3 for the year. Following a 7-2 loss against Catholic on Friday, the Gulls blanked Virginia Wesleyan, 9-0, on Saturday and defeated Christopher Newport, 7-2, on Sunday. Senior Millie Baer, playing number two singles, helped lead the squad with victories on Saturday and Sunday.

The men's and women's cross country teams, both off last weekend, return to action this Saturday in the Frostburg Invitational. Junior Tim Smith, who has won all three races he has run in 1991, puts his unblemished record on the line. Senior Erin Green is also coming off a first place finish for the women in the Christopher Newport Invitational two weeks ago.

The football team closes out a three-week homestand this Saturday as the Gulls welcome undefeated Guilford College to Sea Gull Stadium. Salisbury looks to rebound from last Saturday's 39-14 loss to Frostburg State. QB Len Annetta led the offense last week with 194 yards passing. Six of his completions went to senior TE Scott Cook, who also caught his first touchdown of the year.

An interest meeting will be held at 7 p.m. on Monday, October 7, at the Honors House. For more information, contact Krissy Monks at 548-1976. W. Paul Coates

Leading Publisher Here October 7

The roles of black publishers and booksellers in the struggle for human and civil rights is the topic of a lecture by W. Paul Coates, founder and director of Black Classics Press of Baltimore.

The public is cordially invited to hear Coates speak on Monday, October 7, at 7:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium.

That day Coates also will visit with an ethnic literature class taught by Dr. John Kalb.

His appearance is made possible by the SSU Visiting Scholars Program of the Office of Minority Affairs, in cooperation with the African-American Historical and Philosophical Society.

Coates topic for the evening lecture is, "Black Publishers and Booksellers: An Appraisal for the '90s." The appraisal looks at the historical role which black publishers and booksellers have played as vital informational conduits in the struggle for human and civil rights. The appraisal then moves on to a current examination of the activities of black publishers and booksellers.

According to Vaughn White, coordinator of minority programs at SSU, Coates' visit is "a good opportunity to meet someone who is successful in publishing books in a field he loves and which are also unique."

The Black Classics Press specializes in republishing obscure and significant works by and about people of African descent. Books that Black Classics has published include "The Life and Adventures of Nat Love," an autobiography of a black cowboy originally written in 1907; the works of Drusilla Dunjee Houston, a cousin of Ralph Ellison (author of "The Invisible Man") who was first published in the 1920s; and "Sieze the Time," the story of the Black Panther Party written by Bobby Seale. During the 1991-92 year, the press will add 12 new titles to the 30 it has printed to date.

Coates was formerly the African American Studies reference and acquisition librarian at Howard University's Moorland-Spingarn Research Center. In this position, he was responsible for collection development of African American Books and related materials. This included selection and purchase of rare and non-rare items. He is a graduate of Atlanta University's School of Library and Information Studies (1980) and Antioch University (1979). He is an active Black Bibliophile, collector and co-editor of "Black Bibliophiles and Collectors: Preservers of Black History" (1990, Howard University Press). He is co-chair of the African-American Publishers, Writers and Booksellers' Publishers Commission. His experience with the purchase, sale and collection of books by and about blacks is a love affair that has extended over a period of two and one-half decades, White said.

For more information call White at 548-4503.

This year SSU workers can choose from hundreds of statewide organizations established to aid our youth, the elderly, those with physical, mental or emotional disabilities, the hungry...Thousands of Marylanders in need benefit everyday from your contributions.

In an effort to provide campus employees with a better understanding of some of the beneficiaries of the United Charities Campaign, each week in the SSU News a different non-profit organization which serves the Lower Eastern Shore will be profiled. This week it's the Lower Shore Chapter of the American Red Cross.

The mission of the Lower Shore Chapter of the American Red Cross is to improve the quality of human life, to enhance self reliance and concern for others and to help people avoid, prepare for and cope with emergencies. The Red Cross achieves its mission with the help of volunteers and administers services in compliance with its Congressional charter and the principles of the International Red Cross.

Over 84 percent of its emergency services are dedicated to fire victims, the remainder providing primarily for disaster training, preparation and assistance; Hurricane Hugo was the most prominent recent example of this type of assistance. The Red Cross also provides service to military families, emergency communication and loans for servicemen and their families, health services such as first aid, CPR, water safety training and AIDS education, and blood services.

mature through interaction. We have to create positive experiences that will plant the seed for positive individual enrichment."

This program will target those students who are capable of learning but who lack motivation or basic skills. A school-based coordinator will provide SSU scholarships to students falling into the targeted categories. These students will then be given the opportunity to attend pre-designed academic courses while living on the SSU campus. Social and recreational events have also been developed to help students build their self-esteem.

Dr. Richard Walker, assistant superientendent of Worcester County Public Schools, says that this program is right on target. "There are many kids who believe they can't go to school because no one in the family has. This type of program can build bridges for other students. I have great hopes for this endeavor."

Dr. DeWayne Whittington, superintendent of Somerset County Public Schools, agrees that this type of program is needed right now. "I think we are going to see academic improvement. This type of program could also cause a ripple effect. Participants will be excited and eager to tell their friends about their experience at Salisbury State. The program will challenge everyone involved."

During the two-week program, University and middle school faculty will work in teams to initiate learning, offer counseling services and provide students with intense training.

"This is the kind of program that can really raise the sights of children. This type of program will allow the privileged to share their expertise, resources and facilities with disadvantaged students," said Dr. Doran Christensen, dean of the SSU School of Education and Professional Studies.

According to Ann Taylor, poor children can't visualize college. "Many of these students have never been on a college campus. We must take the children out of their environments and provide them with new experiences. I know this program will work because I am a product of a similar program. I was given the opportunity to see what college was really like. The mystique was taken away and I was given a chance to be all that I could be. This program is largely responsible for my Ph.D.," she said. "Now I want to give something back to other students and back to Salisbury State for the chance that I was given."

Dr. Evelyn Holman, superintendent of Wicomico County Public Schools, agrees that a child's cultural upbringing can hinder the pursuit of higher education.

"I think it is very important to reach children at a young age. I have always encouraged this type of program because it will give students the important opportunity to actually visit a college and see what it has to offer," Holman said.

Brennan Taylor hopes that the program will build upon students' strengths and eliminate their deficits. He believes this program will tap the interest of students and encourage them to build on their professional development for the future.

"This program is a win-win situation," he added. "It will build self-esteem, encourage and initiate learning, provide the community with future professionals and give disadvantaged students an opportunity they never thought they would have.

"All of our children have a future," he said. "The question is what kind of future will they have?"

Dr. Karin Johnson

Karin Johnson: Carpe Diem, Carpe Grants

Dr. Karin Johnson, the University's new director of grants and sponsored research in the Office of Institutional Advancement, is taking on her new role the same way she has taken on Africa as a health worker and the way she chaired SSU's graduate nursing program: with a zest for a challenge and always with a sense of fun.

Since last May SSU faculty have brought in some $800,000 in grants and contracts for research and other projects—including a $190,000 grant from the National Science Foundation for Dr. Bernard A. Fusaro of the Math Department. With the fall semester now underway Johnson hopes to fuel that progress by adding a number of new programs to help faculty with the grant process. While most of her plans involve implementing new ways to help faculty write grant proposals, they also include a desire to bring a liveliness to her office. Among the first things she wants to start, she says, is a tradition of tea and crumpets with faculty members every Wednesday afternoon, a custom she enjoyed while a community health consultant in Kenya.

Johnson hopes this informal approach to doing business, in which she and faculty members can casually discuss research interests, will help her keep in contact with faculty and will demystify the grant process.

"I want to try to inject a little humor into this process," Johnson said. "When I was in Kenya tea was served every morning and a lot of work got done over tea."

Although medical work abroad has often pulled Johnson away from the University—whether in Kenya through the African Medical and Research Foundation (AMREF), in Uganda at Makerere University or in Costa Rica through the Ministry of Health there—she is no foreigner to the process of writing and getting research grants. As head of the graduate nursing program she authored or co-authored four major grant proposals, including the Family Nursing Grant, which resulted in more than $200,000 in support for her department. Her experience in writing grants, understanding the difficulties faculty members face in getting funding and doing research herself makes her the perfect liaison between research donors and faculty.

"Karin brings with her a broad base of knowledge and was very successful in writing and managing grants when she was with the School of Nursing," said Bob Gearhart, director of the Office of Institutional Advancement. "She has an excellent grasp of what faculty need and will develop a new collegial spirit of cooperation between our department and the various schools at the institution. We are very enthused about having her joing the advancement effort at SSU."

Along with the nearly $200,000 grant to Fusaro, recent grants that have been awarded to faculty include a $231,000 Small Business Development grant to Dr. Richard Palmer in the Perdue School of Business; a $41,000 Maryland Department of the Environment grant for Dr. Laura Murray of the Biology Department in the Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology, which is part of a larger University of Maryland System grant; and a more than $86,000 Maryland Industrial Partnership Grant to Dr. Mark Frana in the same department. Dr. Peter Lade has been successful in securing more than $200,000 in contracts for the Image Processing Center.

Although the actual awarding of a grant may receive the most attention, it is the process of working to get a grant and then helping faculty with the grant afterward that Johnson feels is most important. Keeping in touch with faculty interests, knowing what grants are available and the actual writing of a grant proposal are all important, she notes, particularly for those who are unfamiliar with the process of securing a grant. "I see my biggest role as working with faculty, especially faculty who have never written grant proposals before," Johnson said. "It's hard when you're a full-time faculty to write grants. They need encouragement for the ones they have done and the ones they are going to do."

Johnson plans to initiate a grant newsletter for faculty, run workshops on gaining grants, work with faculty after grants are awarded and publish a booklet of guidelines about the grant writing process. In acting as a kind of talent agent for faculty research interests, some note that Johnson's most important skill may be in helping faculty put their proposed research interests into the jargon of grant proposals.

"That's where she can be a very valuable asset, to turn proposals into what I call 'grantese'—language that the grant people understand but most of us don't," said Palmer. "That's exactly what's important in getting grants."

Although Johnson notes that securing grants can be a competitive process, particularly when SSU is going up against large research universities like Johns Hopkins University, Johnson contends that SSU's role as a capable small university and its rurality work to its advantage. Johnson should know. Along with her success in authoring grants, during her six-year tenure as head of the graduate nursing program its enrollment tripled, it was accredited by the National League for Nursing and was given the Distinguished Program Award by the Maryland Association for Higher Education. In her new role, Johnson hopes to boost the University's research endeavors while at the same time preserving its reputation as a university where teaching comes first.

"I think it's possible to strike a balance between research and teaching," Johnson said. "Grants allow you to do all the things you want to do that you can't fit into your regular budget. They bring a lot of enrichment to the University that you wouldn't have otherwise."

President Thomas E. Bellavance and Mr. and Mrs. Reid Henderson, chairs of the Parent's Association, will formally welcome all visitors to the University community.

A special feature of Parents/Spouse Weekend, "Back to School," will begin at 11 a.m. in the University Center. At this time, faculty members from each of the five academic schools will give the audience a brief overview of what students experience on a daily basis.

"The Back to School feature has continued to be a very important and popular part of Parents/Spouse Weekend," said Ganoe. "We trust that the topics selected will not only be informative, but will give our visitors a sense of what it is like to go to Salisbury State University."

For those people interested in learning more about SSU's special Freshman Orientation Wilderness program, a slide show will be presented at 11 a.m. in Caruthers Auditorium.

After brunch which runs concurrently with the "Back to School" and wilderness programs, everyone is invited to come out and cheer for the SSU football team as they tackle Guilford College at 1:30 p.m. (Discount football tickets will be on sale at the information desk in the University Center from 10:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m. Discount tickets will not be available at the stadium.)

Immediately after the game, Bellavance will host a reception which will be followed by the annual Sea Gull Sports Barbecue. The cost of the barbecue is $15 for adults, $10 for students with ID and children under age 5 are free. Saturday night's program offerings include a folk music concert and a special encore Mark Twain performance. Dr. R. J. Wesley, a professor in SSU's Communication Arts Department, will bring the American humorist to life as he tells some of Twain's funniest and most touching stories. The show begins at 8 p.m. and will be held in Holloway Hall Auditorium. The cost is $2 for adults, $1 for students and senior citizens; free for SSU students, faculty and staff. The Salisbury State Program Board is also sponsoring a folk music program by "Runaway." It will begin at 8 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the University Center. Admission is free.

Parents/Spouse Weekend will close Sunday with a special Brunch on the Hill. Brunch will be served from 11 a.m.-2 p.m. in the University Center. The cost is $7.95 per person and $3.95 for children under age 12. "We encourage everyone to feel like they are a part of the University community," said Ganoe.

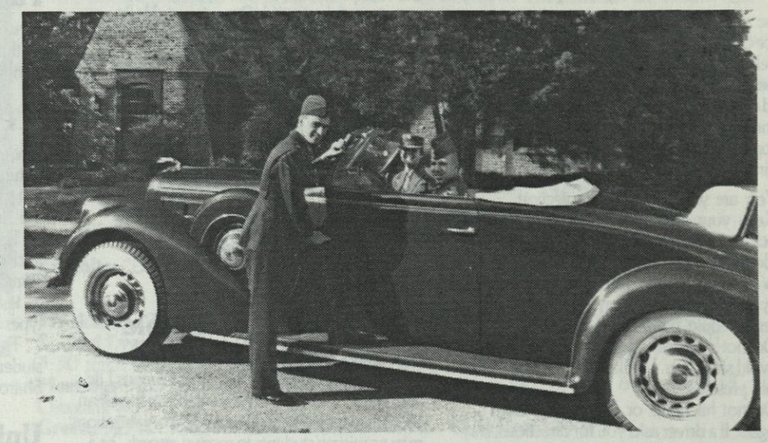
Delmarvans Go To War Looks at Shore Impact Of WW I, II

As the 50th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor approaches, a new exhibit at the University recalls the two World Wars. "Delmarvans Go to War" tells the story of World Wars I and II from the homefront: recapturing the days when men were doughboys, when butter was margarine, when patriotism was a way of life.

Although its focus is a military era, "Delmarvans Go to War" will appeal as much to the social historian as it does to the military buff. Alongside a remarkable display of uniforms and accessories is memorabilia of a more personal nature: letters home, photographs of local boys at war on foreign soil.

A booklet is offered as a companion to the display provides a concise history lesson, recounting not only the sinking of the Lusitania, but the first successful attack by a U-boat off American shores, the sinking of the schooner Hattie Dunn off Assateague Island. The stories of Salisbury's own Company I, as well as those of other of Delmarva's fighting men, are brought to life.



WHERE WERE YOU IN '42? Greg Spencer, Mary Klein and David McCulloh, students at SSU, wear period WW II uniforms to be displayed in the exhibit. The car (not part of the exhibit) is a 1937 12-cylinder Lincoln Le Baron. (Photo by Rick Maloof)

Contributors to the exhibit have provided more than physical evidence of those heady days. On Tuesday, October 15, military historian Tom Price, Jr. will answer the question "Whatever Became of Company I?" It's a topic that has interested Price for quite some time. These soldiers, Delmarva's sons, had a hand in some of the hardest fought battles of World War I. Price is scheduled to speak in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center at 7 p.m.

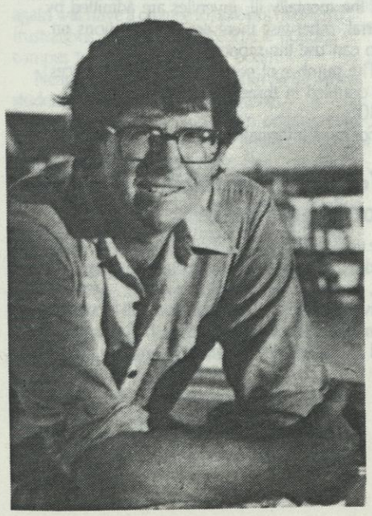
Author, Environmentalist Tom Horton To Speak

Like all decent journalists, Wicomico native Tom Horton has never been afraid to tell people what they don't want to hear. In an April 1991 cover story in the Sunday New York Times Magazine titled "Deer on Your Doorstep," he examined the explosion in the deer population in the Northeast, giving voice to advocates of controlled hunting. "The image of soulful-eyed Bambi is changing to what one biologist calls 'rats with hoofs,'" Horton wrote, provoking a storm of letters from deer lovers to the Times.

In the September 1991 Rolling Stone magazine, he took on Greenpeace. Titled "The Green Giant," Horton gently asked if the largest, wealthiest environmental organization in the world (annual revenues $160 million) was forsaking risk-taking for greenbacks? This was his second feature for Rolling Stone. The first, in 1990 on the Exxon Valdez spill, was nominated for National Magazine honors.



Tom Horton

On Monday, October 14, this award-winning journalist brings his eloquence to a day-long series of activities which take him from Wicomico County science classrooms to a public lecture at the University. In between is a book signing of his latest effort, "Turning the Tide: Saving the Chesapeake Bay." The signing is at B. Dalton's in The Centre at Salisbury from 5-6:30 p.m. At 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri University Center he will give a 45-minute lecture followed by a question and answer session. Admission is free.

Horton was born with ink in his blood. His mother, Imogene Caruthers Horton, was the first woman reporter for the Salisbury Times. His cousins started newspapers of their own in Missouri and Baltimore County.

Reviewing Horton's first book, "Bay Country," Pulitzer Prize-winning critic Richard Eder of the Los Angeles Times said: "Horton writes...clean, sinewy prose that goes on holiday every few pages and cuts various beribboned capers...this Maryland journalist is a poet."

The New York Times said Horton "displays a stunning command of the language. He enlists Proust to help describe the migration of alewives; Freud...in a treatise on goose hunting. Yet as Mr. Horton never forgets, the profoundest eloquence is possessed by the people of the (Chesapeake) bay."

Classic Irish Comedy Opens Theatre Season

A comedy which provoked riots when it opened in Ireland and America at the turn of the century is the first mainstage production of the University's theatre season.

"The Playboy of the Western World," written in 1907 by John Millington Synge (pronounced Sing), opens Friday, October 18, for two weekends in Holloway Hall on stage.

According to theatre historian Oscar Brockett, "The Playboy of the Western World" has as its central character Christy Mahon, a shy young man who thinks he has killed his domineering father. Fleeing to a strange village, he exaggerates his deed and wins the admiration of villagers, including the love of Pegeen Mike. When the supposedly dead father arrives, Christy is denounced by the villagers. To regain their esteem he attacks his father again, but is now treated like a criminal. When the father revives, however, he has new respect for his son.

"Few plays have elicited so stormy a response from audiences," said Brockett. It was criticized for its characters and language. One newspaper called the comedy an "unmitigated, protracted libel upon (the) Irish...." It went on to become a classic of 20th century drama.

"The Playboy of the Western World" is directed by Dr. Andrew Hepburn, chair of

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

United Charities: Diakonia

The campus will participate again in the statewide United Charities Campaign this fall. Last year, University employees pledged over $12,000 to non-profit organizations which benefit Maryland residents. This year SSU workers can choose from hundreds of statewide organizations established to aid our youth, the elderly, those with physical, mental or emotional disabilities, and the hungry. Thousands of Marylanders in need benefit everyday from these contributions.

In an effort to provide campus employees with a better understanding of some of the beneficiaries of the United Charities Campaign, each week in the SSU News a different non-profit organization which serves the lower Eastern Shore will be profiled. This week it's Diakonia, Inc.

Diakonia provides food, shelter, counseling, transportation and referral services to those in crisis. Last year it provided 2,390 nights of food and shelter to 405 guests, served a total of 7,167 meals, transported 181 guests to keep their appointments and gave 559 individuals formal counseling and referrals for other community agencies.

Diakonia is open to anyone in crisis including the homeless, victims of abuse and addiction, and the mentally ill; juveniles are admitted by referral, otherwise there are no limitations on who can use the services.

The number of people using those services has doubled in three years, last year up to 2,803.

For more information call (301)289-0923.

Women's Council Noontime Series

The next meeting of the SSU Women's Council Noontime Series will be held on Friday, October 11, in the Pocomoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center. The discussion will focus on women's obstacles to leadership, both manmade and womenmade. All are welcome to attend.

Octoberfest: Music, Food, Games, Fun

A Berlin Wall, Hofbraeuhaus and Fahrvergnuegen are all part of this year's student Oktoberfest.

Along with traditional sausage, sauerkraut and strudel, the days festivities include music, carnival games, drawings and gifts. It will be from 11 a.m.-4 p.m. on Wedensday, October 16, in the collonnaded mall beside Devilbiss Science Hall.

Sponsored by the University's German Club in cooperation with Dining Services and the Student Program Board, this year's party celebrates the first year of German reunification and sweeping political changes in Europe.

Centuries old, Oktoberfest originated in Munich, Germany, according to club advisor Klaudia Thompson, and celebrates the end of harvest. Traditionally the 10-day festival is noteworthy for its consumption of beer. At the SSU celebration there will be a Hofbraeuhaus, a buffet of Bavarian staples including bratwurst, red cabbage, potato salad, and soft pretzels along with all kinds of pastries and tortes.

Two radio stations, WQHQ-FM, and the student station, WSUR, will be broadcasting live from the fest. The SSU Dance Company in traditional German costumes will perform under the main pavillion through the day. And while oompah-pah music is playing students again will have a chance to take out mid-term frustrations in what has become a popular campus tradition, a dunking booth.

Nearby will be a mock Berlin Wall where students will add their own graffitti.

A variety of town and gown organizations are again joining in the fun. Towne Motors of Salisbury will have Mercedes-Benz on display; Fuller Motors of Easton will bring in Volkswagens. Travel Advisors, Inc. will have information on European tours. Other campus language clubs also will have tables. Many area business has donated gifts and prizes which should add to the fun, according to German Club organizer, Janet Hewitt.

"A surprisingly large" segment of the local Shore population has German roots, Thompson added, and SSU's Oktoberfest has grown in popularity with each passing year. The University has been holding the harvest festival for over a decade. As always, the public is invited to celebrate with the students. Admission is free.

Peace Studies Teacher, Post Columnist Here

Colman McCarthy, author and columnist for the Washington Post, will be on campus Friday, October 11. He will be speaking in Devilbiss Hall, room 144, at 12:10 p.m. and 1:15 p.m., Principles of Sociology classes.

McCarthy, the founder and director of the Center for Teaching Peace, in Washington, D.C., visited the campus two years ago. The impact he made encouraged over 500 students to petition the University to have peace studies in the curriculum.

The beginning of such a program is now underway with a peace studies minor scheduled to begin this fall. The main purpose for McCarthy's visit to the Eastern Shore is to address Wicomico County secondary school teachers on how to teach young people alternatives to violence, and ways of resolving conflict without resorting to violence.

From the Center for Teaching Peace Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy send out materials to schools, universities, churches and groups of all kinds who desire to study alternatives to violence. The center also has a home study correspondence course. The materials are exciting and challenging.

Currently McCarthy teaches a peace course in two high schools and the University of Maryland College Park, along with writing his stimulating and provocative columns for the Post.

For more information contact Dr. Phillip Bosserman, Sociology Building, or call 543-6430 (office), 742-4945 (home).

June Study Trip To Britain Planned

During the summer semester of 1992, SSU students and other interested individuals will have the opportunity to travel through Britain.

Unlike other recent trips to the Isles, this trip, organized by history faculty member, Wayne Ackerson, will cover England, Scotland and Wales by private motor coach. Said Ackerson, "You can cut costs on paper by staying in a central location and making day trips, but you'd be surprised how quickly the meals, transportation and admission costs add up."

Some of the noteworthy sites to be visited include Edinburgh, Stratford-on-Avon, York and several days in London. Many other sites will also be on the 12-day itinerary.

"This really is a nice trip, as everyone will find something of interest, from literary sites to locations from Britain's long history," said Ackerson, who believes the variety to be the strength of the trip.

Ackerson lived in Marlow, Bucks for five years and has since visited the Isles twice. Britain has always been one of his main areas of interest.

The cost of the trip, exclusive of tuition, is approximately $1,500, including airfare, all transportation and most of the meals. Admission charges to the many fascinating locations are also included. Added Ackerson, "You'd be hard-pressed to travel for 12 days through England, Scotland and Wales and have the total bill come to around $1,500."

The trip is scheduled to leave Salisbury the first week of June 1992 and return around June 17. The first interest meeting will be held on Monday, October 21, at 7:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall, room 102. For more details, contact Ackerson in the History Department at 543-6527 or 543-6245.

Century Saturday

The Sea Gull Century and Metric Century, a pair of bike rides, one just over 100 miles and the other a metric century (around 62 miles), will be held on Saturday, October 12. Sponsored by the University Cycling Club, both rides promise to be a sublime trek down country roads and past solemn beaches, with outstanding support services.

The cost is $10 for students, faculty and staff. A chicken barbeque following the ride is $8.75. Ride-day registration begins at 7 a.m. at Maggs. Rides depart at 8 a.m.; helmets are required. The ride is sanctioned by the League of American Wheelmen. Any profits from the ride will be used by the Cycling Club, an LAW member, to foster bicycle education, recreation, racing and touring on the Eastern Shore.

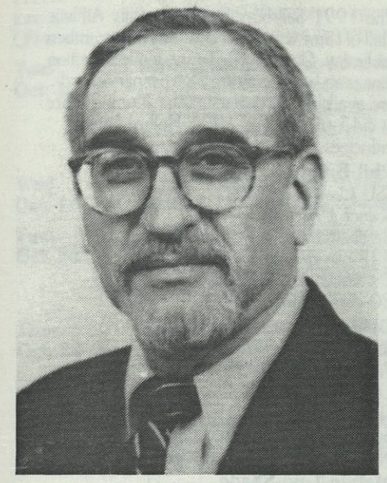
For more information call Joseph Gilbert at 548-2772.

Bike Locks Available

The information desk in the Guerrieri University Center now has Kryptonite bicycle locks for sale. These are the same high quality locks the Public Safety Office has sold in the past. The Kryptonite locks can be purchased for $21 at the information desk from 8 a.m.-10 p.m., Monday - Saturday, and noon-7 p.m., Sunday.

A lock can be rented by the hour for a nominal fee with an SSU ID card. See the desk attendant on duty for details.

Soviet Economy Subject of Talk



Dr. Herbert S. Levine

Dr. Herbert S. Levine, professor of economics and co-director of the Joseph H. Lauder Institute of Management and International Studies at the University of Pennsylvania, will speak on "The Future of the Soviet Economy" on Tuesday, October 22.

"Dr. Levine's talk should be extremely timely," said Dr. Evan Kraft, assistant professor of economics at SSU. "The Soviet Union (or whatever new states may emerge) faces runaway inflation, enormous problems with its foreign debt and difficulty assuring basic food and energy supplies. Many of the former Union Republics want to issue their own currencies. Fundamental changes are needed in economic organization to meet these challenges," he added.

Kraft, who was instrumental in planning Levine's visit, adds that "almost everything is in question in the Soviet Union today. Some talk of a new alliance of independent states modeled on the European community; others seek to retain some economic powers for the central government. Dr. Levine, who has had close contact with Soviet economists and politicians, should be in an excellent position to assess these possibilities," he said.

Born in 1928 in New York City, Levine received his B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. degrees in economics and Soviet studies from Harvard University. He came to the University of Pennsylvania in 1960 and has lectured at Berkeley, Columbia, Harvard and Princeton. Among his awards and fellowships are two University of Pennsylvania prizes for distinguished teaching.

Through his research and writings, Levine has made major contributions to the analysis of Soviet economic planning, reform and growth.

He has contributed chapters to a number of significant studies, including "International Trade and Central Planning" (1968), the first substantial examination of the international trade aspects of the centrally planned economies; "Comparing Economic Systems" (1971), which became a major influence on the economic analysis of planned economies; the "Modernization of Japan and Russia" (1975), a comparative study of the modernization of Japan and Russia from the 1860s to the present, which shed new light on the process of modernization itself; and "The Soviet Economy Toward the Year 2000" (1983), an evaluation of Soviet growth prospects to the end of the century, which he also co-edited.

One of his earliest works, a study of the Soviet supply system, the heart of Soviet centralized planning, was published in "Comparisons of the U.S. and Soviet Economies" (1959), and one of his recent works, an analysis of the transition problems in Soviet economic reform, is included in "Can Gorbachev's Reforms Succeed" (1990).

Levine is chair of the Board of PlanEcon, Inc., president of the American Association of Slavic Studies and director of the Social Science Research Council Summer Workshop on Soviet and East European Economics.

He was a founding member and past chair of the Board of Trustees of the National Council for Soviet and East European Research; and was a consultant to SRI-International, the International Research and Exchanges Board (IREX) and Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates (WEFA).

Levine has published more than 50 articles in professional journals on planning and the Soviet economy. His current work includes: the analysis of Soviet economic reform and growth; theoretical aspects of Soviet planning; the role of entrepreneurship in centrally planned economies; and East-West trade and technology transfer.

The lecture will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri University Center. The presentation is free and open to the public. For more information, please call the Guerrieri Center at 543-6100.

Anyone interested in obtaining materials can visit the center from 8 a.m. - noon and 1 p.m. - 5 p.m., Monday-Friday, or call 543-6309.

Open Enrollment

Open enrollment for benefits is fast approaching. State employees will have from Monday, October 14, to Friday, November 15, to make any changes or select any additional benefits for 1992. Watch for packets in the mail.

Pay particular attention to the Prescription Drug Plan, which is changing, and to the rates, which are increasing. Those currently enrolled in the Blue Cross/Blue Shield Traditional Plan may want to make appointments to discuss options.

State employees should mark their calendars for Monday, October 28, for a Health Fair in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center, from 11 a.m. - 2 p.m. Get insurance questions answered—representatives from the major plans will be there. Several medical screenings will also be available.

Economist To Examine Racism, Soviet Union

Perlo is the author of 12 books, and many articles and pamphlets on economics. His most recent book is "Super Profits and Crises: Modern U.S. Capitalism." Perlo has also been an invited lecturer at many colleges and public forums. His insights into the current crises in the Soviet Union and the reasons for them should be informative.

AIDS Update Shared with Conway

Maryland Delegate Norman Conway recently met with a team of nursing researchers who presented an update on AIDS services and resources on the Eastern Shore.

The team, all registered nurses currently enrolled in graduate studies in the Department of Nursing, evaluated resources and services available to AIDS patients, including hospitals, health departments, support groups, long-term care facilities, insurance providers and workplace policies. They then compared their findings about services on the Shore with services in Baltimore City.

The initial assessment indicates that even though Baltimore City has the largest AIDS/HIV population in Maryland, the number of AIDS patients is increasing on the Eastern Shore; in addition to cases that originate on the Shore, many people infected with AIDS in greater metropolitan areas return to the Shore when they become ill.

A nationwide trend was also evident on the Eastern Shore: although in the past AIDS patients have been predominantly among drug addicts and the homosexual community, cases are now increasing in the heterosexual population and among young people. There is an increasing need for public education and services, both in Baltimore and on the Eastern Shore.

"A major problem on the Shore is the lack of social support for AIDS victims, due to the Shore's rural characteristics and demographic patterns," said Dr. Edna Quinn of the SSU nursing faculty. "A long-term research project is proposed. After a decade of hearing about the disease, many people still do not recognize the threat posed by the AIDS epidemic and the problems faced by AIDS victims."

by Paul Ohanian

Anthony Menegatti and Sean Karns netted goals in the second overtime period to lift the Sea Gulls past Catholic, 2-0, last Saturday. The win was the third straight for the 5-4 soccer team. SSU is 1-0 in ESAC games. Goalie Brian Polczynski, who recorded four saves, registered his second straight shut-out. The Gulls blanked Wesley, 3-0, earlier in the week.

Junior runner Tim Smith finished third place in last week's Frostburg State Invitational as the men's cross country team was seventh out of 19 teams. Smith s third place finish, in a time of 27:00, snapped his string of three straight first place finishes this season. Seniors Erin Green, 28th, and Cathy Emerson, 29th, were the top two finishers for the SSU women. The team placed sixth overall out of 16 squads.

Despite 25 saves in two games from goalie Cindi Smith, the field hockey team dropped a pair of 2-1 contests at Cortland State and Ithaca last weekend. Edie Matthews netted the team's lone goal against Cortland, while Regina Zippel tallied her fourth goal of the year in the loss to Ithaca. SSU is 5-3-1 entering Thursday's game at Trenton State, the defending NCAA champion.

It was a tough weekend for the volleyball team at the Juniata Tournament last Friday and Saturday. SSU dropped all four of its matches to see its season record slip to 10-14. Senior Heidi Smid had a team-high 23 kills for SSU, while Shannon Cianelli registered 17 kills. Jenean Plumley totalled 19 blocks and 16 kills in the four matches.

Meanwhile, the gridiron Gulls were shut out for the first time since game one of 1989 as they fell to Guilford, 20-0, on Parent's Day last Saturday. WR Pat Stancarone was one of the bright spots for the offense, catching a career-high seven passes for 61 yards. Quarterbacks Len Annetta and James McCormick combined to throw 42 passes, a new SSU single-game record. The Gulls, now 1-3, visit Glassboro State this Saturday at 2 p.m.

Horton's return to the Eastern Shore after three decades somewhat resembles the voyage of Magellan. Following graduation from Johns Hopkins University in 1968 and after a year in Indiana where he oversaw a poultry operation of a million laying hens, he went into the Army. There he served in the Middle East as an Arabic translator—graduating with honors from language school. As a sideline to translating, he began a private poultry enterprise to employ Ethiopians. It eventually had about 5,000 chickens in Eritrea province.

Then in 1973, Horton began a 15-year stint at what would become his first love, journalism. Like any cub reporter at the Baltimore Sun, he started out by writing obituaries. "If there's any place where you learn your craft, it's in writing an obituary where people literally read every dotted i and crossed t," he said.

Soon Horton was receiving national awards for reporting from the Amazon and for coverage of famine in Africa and the Middle East. In his final year at the Sun, "Bay Country" was published. It received the 1988 John Burroughs Medal, given by the Museum of Natural History in New York, considered the country's top award in nature writing. "Bay Country," now in its fourth printing, was also chosen by the American Library Association as one of the top 40 books published in 1987.

He is currently working on an article about the Chesapeake Bay for National Geographic magazine. A book on Smith Island for W.W. Norton is scheduled to be published next year. For more information on his October 14 appearances call 543-6030.

Colette Inez

Award-Winning Poet Reads From Her Work

Colette Inez, award-winning author of five poetry collections, will read from her work on Thursday, October 24, at 8 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center.

Inez's works include "Family Life," "Eight Minutes from the Sun," "Alive and Taking Names" and "The Woman Who Loved Worms" which received the 1972 Great Lakes Colleges Association National Book Award. Her "New and Selected Works" is forthcoming and she is currently completing "Notes from an Exiled Daughter," a prose memoir.

Her poems are widely anthologized and have appeared in such publications as The Nation, Yale Review, Hudson Review, The New Republican, Poetry and Partisan Review.

Recent Pulitzer Prize-winner Henry Taylor has said of her work, "She uses honest ink, writes syllable by syllable, and makes of almost every poem a finished work that stands apart from its background. With skill and love, she takes them farther than most poets can, without taking them beyond control or usefulness."

A faculty member in Columbia University's Writing Program, Inez has taught at Ohio University, The New School, Hunter College, SUNY-Stony Brook, Denison University and Kalamazoo College. She has instructed poetry workshops at New York's Cooper Union, the West Side YMCA and elsewhere. A poetry residency at Bucknell University is scheduled for 1992.

Inez has received fellowships from the Guggenheim Foundation, the National Endowment for the Arts (both in 1974 and 1988), the Rockefeller Foundation and the New York State Creative Artists Public Service (CAPS).

The reading is free and open to the public. For more information, call the Guerrieri Center at 543-6100.

home. Well-known storyteller and retired teacher Dot Mumford brings "Memories of World War II from the Beach" to her Tuesday, October 22, presentation. Across the country, the second World War invaded the lives of all Americans, who learned to live with rationing and Civil Defense dim-outs once again. Mumford will present a personal and historical view of those times in her speech at 7 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri Center.

On Delmarva, volunteers once again took on the task of protecting the Atlantic shoreline, assisting the Coast Guard in its duty. Communities across the lower Shore became host to a variety of new "guests": from serviceman calling on USO clubs created to give them a little "R&R" to Italian and German prisoners of war, housed in a specially created camp just outside the town of Berlin.

Many Eastern Shore businesses thrived during World War II. Poultry farms, seafood packing houses and canneries supplied the troops with food, while shipbuilders were hard at work equipping the Navy.

Today, there is barely a trace of what had once been a way of life. The USO on Camden Avenue in Salisbury was destroyed by fire years ago. Only a few of the large gun towers that once dotted the coast remain in north Ocean City. Visiting this exhibit, however, it is easy to turn back the clock.

A helmet, taken from an Austrian prisoner of World War I, is remarkably well preserved, as are the other military uniforms on display. Newspapers, letters home from the front, maps, a soldier's diary, ration books, even sheet music help re-create the period.

Even the mundane has not been overlooked. Exhibit planners hope to reproduce some of the tricks homemakers resorted to during rationing. If anyone who lived through the days of homemade margarine and leg makeup have forgotten the experience, "Delmarvans Go to War" is here to remind them.

This latest exhibit of the Research Center for Delmarva History and Culture opens Thursday, October 10. Tours will be offered to school groups. "Delmarvans Go to War" will be on display through October 31 in the Atrium Gallery of the Guerrieri Center. The exhibit is funded, in part, by a grant from the Maryland Humanities Council.

Homecoming '91-Something For Everyone

University Alumni Director Judy Pielemeier anticipates a big turnout of returning graduates for Homecoming Weekend on Saturday, October 17-18.

"We traditionally have an overflow crowd for the football game plus excellent attendance at the many other activities planned specifically for our alumni and University friends," said Pielemeier.

The week leading up to Homecoming is packed with activities including the election of a new king and queen, an Oktoberfest, a chicken wing-eating contest, movies, the traditional bonfire and the dedication of a new Hall of Fame display in the Maggs Center.

The weekend festivities kick off on Friday night with the annual Athletic Hall of Fame induction ceremonies at the Guerrieri University Center beginning at 6 p.m. Former Sea Gull greats Debbie Bloodsworth (Class of '76) Phil Briggs (Class of '69), Sue Foelber-Woods (Class of '80), Melvin Levi Shade (Class of '77) and ex-football and wrestling coach Mike McGlinchey (1972-87) will boost the Hall membership to 35.

The traditional bonfire will be held at 8:30 p.m. Friday in the lot across from the Power Professional Building.

Also that night, SSU Theatre's production of "The Playboy of the Western World" opens on Holloway Hall on stage at 8 p.m. Performances continue Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. The Class of '86 also will get together on Friday night for a social in the Guerrieri Center.

Homecoming Saturday opens with registration at the Guerrieri Center in the morning with campus tours beginning at noon.

"I'm sure many alumni who haven't visited the campus in several years will be surprised but surely pleased with the changing face of the campus," said Pielemeier. "The Guerrieri Center itself will be new to most of our graduates."

Recyclers Exceed Goals!

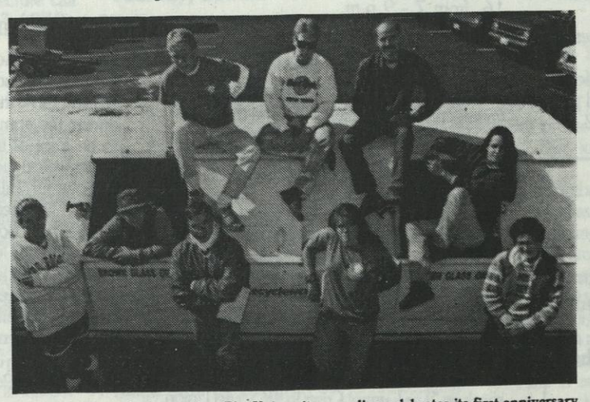
Perhaps the first sign of success in anything is that everyone else wants to know how you became successful.

That seems to be the case for the University's year-old campus recycling program and its coordinator Les Lutz, the SSU director of horticulture who helped get the program running in September 1990. Today the program is recycling nearly a third of all campus waste, is the only one of its kind among University of Maryland System campuses. With recycling becoming mandatory for UMS colleges in 1992, it has left Lutz fielding questions from all over about starting up recycling programs.

"They want to know how we did it, how it works, who picks it up, how we handle the material and whether we make any money doing it," said Lutz, who has spoken to several national groups and has offered advice to other campuses.

SSU's success with recycling didn't begin with speeches. Instead Lutz and others began sticking their noses into campus trash cans to study the kinds of waste there—all research for a recycling program that now collects most of the University's aluminum, plastic, white paper, glass, corrugated cardboard, tin cans and other recyclable waste. Through recycling SSU is today saving $1,500 a month in landfill fees and is making a small profit from the recyclables, but more importantly it is setting an example for other universities and the community at large.

"We feel that the University is among the leaders if not the leader on the Eastern Shore in terms of recycling," said Bob Stover, a recycling coordinator with the Eastern Shore district of Browning-Ferris Industries. BFI works with SSU in transporting the recyclable materials to various businesses in the area and to Baltimore, Philadelphia and elsewhere. "They have taken a proactive approach instead of waiting for legislation that would mandate them to do it. It puts them a step ahead of the game; it's a credit to the University."



Recyclers Prove Indisposable—The University recycling celebrates its first anniversary with stellar results. The program which students run and the whole campus participates in started a year ago. Pictured are left to right are: (front row) Holly Cather, Steve Merchant (in dumpster), John Gutierrez, Backy Ammon, Terry Tucker (in dumpster), Linda Langelo (assistant director of horiculture) (top of dumpster) Chuck Mezan, Nick Nichols, Les Lutz (director of horiculture).

By state law all UMS campuses will have to start recycling beginning in January 1992, and a goal of 15 percent reduction of campus solid waste has been set. SSU's head start already has the campus recycling about 30 percent of its total solid waste—Lutz estimates as much as 80 percent of campus aluminum and glass are being recycled—with a third of that coming from residence halls, a third from academic buildings and a third from food services. That, included with the composting of yard waste the University is already doing on its 115 acres, brings the current total volume of recycled materials to 800,000 pounds, or 400 tons. In environmental terms that comes to about 2,000 trees and 30,000 gallons of gas a year.

"It allows us to be part of the solution to the problem rather than part of the problem," Joseph Gilbert, vice president of administration at SSU, said of the benefits of recycling. "We're a throwaway society, and this calls into questions, "How much of this can we do? You raise the consciousness of the school community, you raise the consciousness of the need to recycle."

Although the University recycling program has been in place for a year, it is still evolving as it finds more markets for its recyclable waste.

Attention December Graduates

Commencement exercises will be held on Sunday, December 15, at 3 p.m. in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center. Detailed information will be mailed at a later date.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

SSU Newsletter Guidelines

The SSU News is a newsletter for the campus community published each Thursday during fall and spring semesters, unless noted. The deadline is 4 p.m. Friday.

Any story relating to the life of the campus is welcomed. Newsletter items should be typed and double-spaced.

Because stories are proofed and typeset on a first come, first served basis, don't feel you have to wait until Friday to get your article to public relations (HH 264).

For more information call 543-6030.

Spring Student Teaching

Education majors who wish to student teach during the spring semester and have completed or are in the process of completing their professional education (methods) classes are requested to attend an orientation meeting on Friday, October 25, from 8:30 - 10:30 a.m. in Nanticoke rooms A, B and C of the Guerrieri University Center.

Sharon Clark, director of field experiences in the Education Department, will explain the student teaching program and the application process.

Also, Dr. James Lackie of the Center for Personal and Professional Development will present information on how to begin preparing for a job search.

Application forms are available from instructors (secondary majors only) or from the Education Department. Completed student applications must be submitted to Clark by November 1. Student teaching applications received after the deadline will not be accepted.

Bike Locks Available

The information desk in the Guerrieri University Center now has Kryptonite bicycle locks for sale. These are the same high quality locks the Public Safety Office has sold in the past. The Kryptonite locks can be purchased for $21 at the information desk from 8 a.m.-10 p.m., Monday - Saturday, and noon-7 p.m., Sunday.

NTE Prep Course

Students taking the National Teachers Exam on Saturday, October 26, are invited to attend a test preparation session on Wednesday, October 16, from 7 - 9 p.m.

The session will be conducted by Dr. Robert McBrien of the Center for Personal and Professional Development and will cover such topics as test-taking skills and familiarization with the types of questions which will be on the exam.

The session is free and open to all interested students. For more information, contact Mrs. Sharon Clark at 543-6277.

Economist To Examine Racism, Soviet Union

Noted economist, author and lecturer Victor Perlo delivers two lectures in Caruthers Hall Auditorium on Thursday, October 17.

At 3:30 p.m. he will speak on "The Economics of Racism" and at 7:30 p.m. he will speak on "The Current Crises in the Soviet Union."

Perlo is the author of 12 books, and many articles and pamphlets on economics. His most recent book is "Super Profits and Crises: Modern U.S. Capitalism." Perlo has also been an invited lecturer at many colleges and public forums. His insights into the current crises in the Soviet Union and the reasons for them should be informative.

The forum is sponsored by AWARE (Alliance for Women Attaining Recognized Equality) and The Peace Alliance of the Lower Shore. The public is cordially invited.

June Study Trip To Britain Planned

During the summer semester of 1992, SSU students and other interested individuals will have the opportunity to travel through Britain.

Ackerson lived in Marlow, Bucks for five years and has since visited the Isles twice. Britain has always been one of his main areas of interest.

The cost of the trip, exclusive of tuition, is approximately $1,500, including airfare, all transportation and most of the meals. Admission charges to the many fascinating locations are also included. Added Ackerson, "You'd be hard-pressed to travel for 12 days through England, Scotland and Wales and have the total bill come to around $1,500."

The trip is scheduled to leave Salisbury the first week of June 1992 and return around June 17. The first interest meeting will be held on Monday, October 21, at 7:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall, room 102. For more details, contact Ackerson in the History Department at 543-6527 or 543-6245.

Open Enrollment

Open enrollment for benefits is fast approaching. State employees will have from Monday, October 14, to Friday, November 15, to make any changes or select any additional benefits for 1992. Watch for packets in the mail.

Pay particular attention to the Prescription Drug Plan, which is changing, and to the rates, which are increasing. Those currently enrolled in the Blue Cross/Blue Shield Traditional Plan may want to make appointments to discuss options.

State employees should mark their calendars for Monday, October 28, for a Health Fair in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center, from 11 a.m. - 2 p.m. Get insurance questions answered—representatives from the major plans will be there. Several medical screenings will also be available.

Homecoming Bonfire

The Student Government Association would like to invite students, faculty and staff to come out and show their support for the football team during the annual bonfire. The event promises to be a lot of fun: not only will there be distinguished speakers (Dr. Bellavance, Athletic Director Dr. Bill Lide), but the fall athletic teams will be honored plus other exciting features.

WSUR's Boggs and Oz, with the help of other DJs, will lead everyone through the night; and SSU cheerleaders will perform some of their greatest routines. Also, the Semper Fidelis Society will build and tend the fire. As always, free refreshments will be served.

The bonfire is Friday at 8:30 p.m. in the lot opposite the Power Professional Building.

Hoops Scorekeeper Needed

The men's basketball team is seeking an official scorekeeper for all home games for the 1991-92 season. If interested, please contact the Men's Basketball Office at 548-2542. Ask for Coach Ward Lambert or Assistant Coach Andy Sachs.

Salisbury State University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled persons are encouraged to apply.

Noted Hiker Lectures Oct. 24

Cindy Ross, a long distance hiker with over 5,000 cumulative miles including the entire Appalachian Trail and the Pacific Crest Trail, and author of two books on those experiences, lectures here on Monday, October 21, at 8 p.m.

Her presentation, "Winter Climbing in the White Mountains," is in Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri University Center. It is sponsored by the University Outdoor Club. Ross had already hiked the 2,000-mile length of the Appalachian Trail, stretching from Maine to Georgia ("A Women's Journey," East Woods Press, 1982), when, to escape deadening daily routine, she set off once again to the wilds to in her words "sort it all out." But now it was a more rugged arena: The Pacific Crest Trail, a mostly mountainous 2,600-mile route from Mexico to Canada, vastly different from the gentle, well-traveled Appalachian Trail.

Her trip began at a low point (in the California desert) as the hiking "partner" she had selected from an advertisement proved to be totally inexperienced and so weird that they parted company the first day. Continuing along, Ross soon became the de facto leader of a motley, changing crew of Crest walkers known as "Cindy's Circus."

The long, rugged hiking days produced physical ailments and mental strain, of course. But in confronting and surmounting these, Ross grew in strength as the trail miles dropped away until, after many months (and several major changes in her life) Ross beat fall snows and storms to reach the Canadian border. More than the end of the trail, this was also a symbolic milestone in her life.

Ross, a resident of Kempton, PA, has been a hard-rock miner, a waitress and a model for life-drawing classes, among other pursuits. She and her husband operate a hostel for hikers along the Appalachian Trail.

For more information on Ross' lecture call the SSU Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

Dr. Kashi Khazeh of the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business is shown here with his Salisbury State University specialty Maryland license plates, available through the SSU Office of Alumni Relations for $30. All students, faculty and alumni are eligible for the plates which read SSU followed by a randomly selected four-digit number with "Salisbury State Univ." across the bottom.

Mumford will present a personal and historical view of those times in her speech at 7 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri Center.

Sea Gull Sports Roundup by Paul Ohanian

A full schedule of athletic activities are planned for this Homecoming '91 weekend, beginning on Friday evening with the Hall of Fame Banquet. The five new inductees will be officially honored at the ceremony as the Hall of Fame grows to 35 members.

Saturday begins with the annual SSU Tidewater Cross Country Invitational, the only home meet of the season for the Sea Gull men's and women's teams. Junior Tim Smith continues to impress as he placed third last weekend at the Maryland Colleges Championship in College Park. The only two runners to defeat him in the field of 92 were Division I scholarship runners from the University of Maryland. Smith has three first place finishes and two third place finishes in five meets this year. Erin Green and Cathy Emerson were the top two finishers for the SSU women last week. Green placed 17th (20:25) while Emerson was 24th (21:15).

The field hockey team plays the second of four straight home games on Saturday against Kutztown. SSU, 5-4-1, is ranked sixth in the latest Division III poll. Senior All-American Cheryl Ish continues to move up the career scoring list. Her 14th goal of the year in last week's 2-1 loss to Trenton State was also the 50th of her career, tying Susan Ralph Elliott ('77-80) for second-place all-time in SSU history.

The football team will try to snap a three-game losing skid as they host Wagner College in the Homecoming Day football game. The Gulls fell to Glassboro State 34-7 last week, and are looking to avenge a 23-6 loss to Wagner last year. In last week's game with Glassboro, Pierre Copes highlighted the offense with his 30-yard touchdown run and Rick Helton led the defense with 16 tackles.

Also in action this weekend but competing on the road are the men's soccer, women's volleyball and women's tennis teams. The soccer squad, which won their fifth straight game last Saturday with a 1-0 win over Allentown, plays an important ESAC game at Frostburg on Saturday. Also in Frostburg, the women's tennis team competes in the ESAC Championship, while the volleyball squad plays in the North-South Tournament at Western Maryland.

Conference on 'Drugs in the Workplace' October 24

"We want to teach Eastern Shore business leaders how to identify the signs and symptoms of a drug user. It is sometimes difficult for business leaders to see how an employee on drugs can affect their business," said Jennifer Berkman, director of Salisbury State University's Alcohol and Drug Prevention Resource Center. "In our efforts to help local business leaders, we are hosting a conference to educate local business leaders and put prevention information in their hands."

The one-day conference, "Drugs in the Workplace," is scheduled in the Guerrieri University Center on Thursday, October 24, from 8:30 a.m.-3 p.m. It costs $10, which includes lunch, and is open to Eastern Shore business owners.

One recent Gallup survey estimates "that at least 15 percent of the American workforce works under the influence of drugs or alcohol daily." Maryland State Police statistics also confirm that drug-related crimes are on the rise on the Eastern Shore.

Guest speakers at the conference will share information concerning the economic impact of substance abuse in the business community. Law enforcement officials will teach conference participants how to recognize the signs and symptoms of drug use among their employees. Issues such as the personal costs to employees and employers, the negative effects of competitiveness and the financial costs of having illegal drug users in the workforce will also be addressed.

"We will also talk about services and resources that are available to business leaders in the Eastern Shore region," Berkman said.

SSU's Alcohol and Drug Prevention Resource Center is a regional resource facility which offers audiovisual listings, printed materials, instructional aids and training sources not only to University students but also to the Eastern Shore community.

In recognition of the center's outstanding effort to work with law enforcement agencies in the area of crime prevention, the Center will receive an award at the 12th annual Governor's Prevention Awards ceremony later this fall.

The Resource Center and the University's Small Business Development Center are working in cooperation with the Governor's Executive Advisory Council and the Governor's Drug and Alcohol Abuse Commission as sponsors of the conference. For more information or to register call 328-7032.

Methods Students Visit Horn Point

On Friday, September 27, students enrolled in Dr. Lee Garigliano's and Dr. Amy Meekins' Science Methods courses had the opportunity to visit Horn Point, an environmental education center near Cambridge. Attended by approximately 70 education majors, the half-day sessions allowed participants the chance to experience a variety of outdoor educational activites. In addition to participating in sample lessons, students toured the facility and completed a scavenger hunt on the Cove Trail, one of two trails available for use at Horn Point. The visit was arranged by Cathy Baptist, an environmental specialist, who frequently works with area teachers and their students.

Students Attend Language Experience Demonstration

On Tuesday, October 1, education students in Dr. Amy Meekins' and Dr. John Wolinski's Reading Methods courses attended a demonstration of the language experience approach for reading instruction. Conducted by Jeannie Groves, the demonstration lesson provided the opportunity for future teachers to actively participate in a language experience story. Groves is a first grade teacher at Sandy Hill Elementary School in Dorchester County, MD.

'Playboy of the Western World' Opens Friday

"Why did I choose to direct 'The Playboy of the Western World'?" said Dr. Andrew Hepburn, chair of the Communication Arts Department. "I love the play for its wildness, its eccentric characters, its passion and for the intriguing questions it raises."

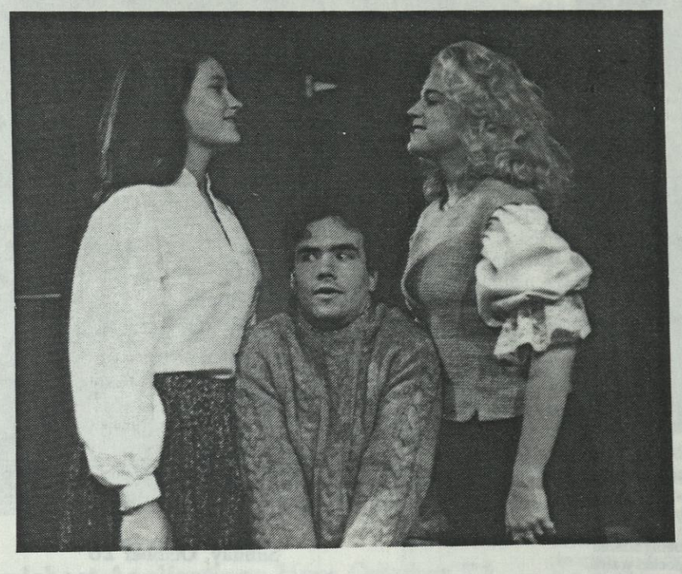
When this classic of 20th century drama opens on Friday, October 18, audiences will have a chance to see a comedy which caused riots when it opened in 1907 in Dublin, Ireland.

Written by John Millington Synge (pronounced 'Sing'), this story about a young man's relationship with his father and himself, is set in a turn of the century Irish village. For its college actors challenges abound.

"Speaking an Irish accent is one of them," said Hepburn. The language of the Irish peasants of County Mayo (located in western Ireland) is rich and colorful but strong to our ears. Articulation is a must."

The demands of comedy for "Playboy" require not only precise timing but a critical quality called "emotional truthfulness." "Synge's humor grows out of the way human beings interact," said Hepburn. "To play for cheap laughs undercuts this truthfulness and destroys the life and spontaneity of the moment and the comedy."

Unlike the humor of standup comedians, laughs cannot be ends in themselves.



Cyrus Teter (center) plays Christy, the title role in "The Playboy of the Western World," who is pursued by Heather Campbell as the Widow Quin (left) and Tina Grossweiler as Pegeen Mike.

"It is very tempting for the actor to try to get a bigger laugh the next performance. This results in 'pushing' or 'milking' the potentially comic moment for all its worth and thereby destroying it," Hepburn said.

"I am fortunate to have a talented group of students who are already making moment after moment come to life," he added.

In the title role is Cyrus Teter of Willards, Donald Atkinson of Salisbury plays his father; Tina Grossweiler of Cape May, NJ, plays Pegeen Mike and Heather Campbell of West Friendship, MD, plays the Widow Quin, the two women who vie for "the playboy"'s affections.

Performances are Friday-Saturday, October 18-19, and Thursday-Saturday, October 24-26, at 8 p.m. with a matinee on Sunday, October 20, at 2 p.m. in Holloway Hall on stage.

Tickets are free to SSU students, faculty and staff. Season tickets offering considerable discounts are still available. For more information or reservations call the SSU Theatre Box Office at 543-6228.

CD ROM Business Databases In Library

Compact D/SEC, an outline business database available on compact disc has recently been installed in Blackwell Library and will be on demonstration loan through the month of October. This database gives access to business and financial information extracted from documents that public companies must regularly file with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission. The scope of facts, figures and financials provides users with detailed profiles of more than 12,000 companies whose securities are traded on the New York Stock Exchange, American Stock Exchange, NASDAQ and Over-The-Counter. Profiles include information such as annual balance sheets and income statements, annual cash flow statements, ratios, and price/earnings data.

Investment is a full-text database of company and industry analyst reports from the most prestigious Wall Street firms as well as regional and international brokers and financial firms. Reports cover 11,000 United States and foreign compnaies and industries from over 53 groups. Included is the most current 12 months of data. This database will be available in Blackwell Library until the end of December.

Even though these products are very user-friendly, the librarians will be glad to assist any patron needing help. Questionaires requesting user opinion of these products can be found near the CD ROM workstations. It is very important for all patrons using these products to answer the questionaires. The information will aid the library staff in the evaluation of both products.

United Charities: Lower Shore Enterprises

The campus will participate again in the United Charities campaign this fall. Last year University employees pledged over $12,000 to non-profit organizations which benefit Maryland residents. This year SSU workers can choose from hundreds of statewide organizations established to aid our youth, the elderly, those with physical, mental or emotional disabilites, and the hungry. Thousands of Marylanders benefit everyday from these contributions.

In an effort to provide campus employees with a better understanding of some of the beneficiaries of the United Charities campaign, each week in the SSU News a differnet non-profit organization which serves the lower Eastern Shore will be profiled. This week it's Lower Shore Enterprises.

Lower Shore Enterprises was incorporated in 1967 to provide evaluation, training and employment for disabled persons in Somerset, Wicomico and Worcester counties. The program of services enables severly disabled persons to explore their capabilities and achieve maximum vocational goals.

The agency provides evaluation, work adjustment training, employment, supported employment, placement and follow-up services. Last year 127 disabled individuals from the lower Eastern Shore benefited from the services provided by Lower Shore Enterprises. For more information call 749-6183.

Dr. Robert Smith

Expert on Spreadsheet Applications Here October 21

One of the country's leading experts on spreadsheet applications will conduct a workshop on "Using Spreadsheets to Teach Mathematics" on Monday, October 21.

Jointly sponsored by the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science, the Perdue School of Business and the Office of Minority Affairs, the workshop is conducted by Dr. Robert Smith of Miami University, OH. His presentation is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. in Room 207 of Devilbiss Science Hall.

The spreadsheet, a standard tool for business applications, is a powerful and versatile, yet easy to use, software tool. It is becoming increasingly popular in the teaching of the mathematical sciences. It is ideal for implementing algorithms which rely upon iterative procedures or recurrence relations and is a natural tool for solving many types of applied problems. An overview will be provided, as well as applications to specific examples.

Robert Smith has a B.S. degree from Morgan State University and an M.A. and Ph.D. from Penn State University, all in mathematics. He has been a Visiting Fellow at La Trobe University in Australia and a Visiting Assistant Professor at the University of North Carolina. Dr. Smith joined the Miami University faculty in 1969. He has organized workshops and published papers on spreadsheet applications and is one of the leaders in the field.

The program is now picking up materials six days a week and this September added tin cans to its recycling agenda. Lutz hopes to add newspapers to the list within the next two years—as soon as a market for newsprint can be found. Another sign that recycling is becoming an entrenched part of campus life is that new campus buildings that are now in the planning stages will be designed and equipped to accomodate recycling. Plans for a new dining hall include a loading dock designed to help with the recycling program and juice machines that can be refilled without having to throw away plastic containers.

Although in the past one might think students would grudgingly go along with a recycling program, in the environmentally hip 1990s it is SSU's students who are taking the lead in making the recycling program work. Participation among students is estimated at at least 70 percent, and Lutz notes that they are doing better than many of the faculty, who generate most of the white paper trash on campus. Also, Lutz has a handful of students who work as much as 20 hours a week for the recycling program.

"It's good that an institution like the school is interested in recycling as much as it can," said junior Becky Ammon, 21, as she made her recycling pickup rounds on foot one recent afternoon. "They keep on planning more stuff and that's really good."

Arnold B. McKinnon

McKinnon, who lives in Norfolk, VA, with his wife, Oriana, began his career in the railroad industry as a law assistant at Southern Railway in 1951 after receiving his undergraduate and law degrees from Duke University. Play Addresses Issues Concerning Black Men

"I have one pair of pink, high waisted, super fly pants with the zipper broke. Try looking for a job in one pair of pink high waisted super fly pants with the zipper broke."

The preceding lament is from "Our Young Black Men are Dying and Nobody Seems to Care," by James Chapman and hailed by some critics as "the most provocative play in America."

When "Our Young Black Men..." was first produced, the Village Voice wrote,"...one of the best plays in New York."

"Engaging, outstanding, excellent theatre by an standard," said the New York City Sun.

On Friday, November 1, at 8 p.m. in the Caruthers Auditorium, "Our Young Black Men..." will be presented by Living the Dream, a four person black theatre ensemble which uses music, drama and dance to address contemporary issues facing the black community. The play, which runs from 45-60 minutes and is followed by a discussion, is filled with humor, music and poetry.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Sea Gull Sports Roundup

by Paul Ohanian

The volleyball team seeks its fifth straight Eastern States Athletic Conference championship this Saturday when it hosts the conference tournament beginning at 9 a.m. The Gulls, 12-20 on the season and coming off a 1-3 showing in last weekend's North-South Tournament, will nevertheless be one of the favorites to capture the ESAC title. Top challengers should include Marywood, Allentown and Shenandoah. The women's tennis team completed its season last weekend in the ESAC Tournament played at Frostburg. SSU placed second overall, scoring 34.5 points to Frostburg's 36. Senior Lisa Trelease did defend both her number one singles and doubles titles, however, winning both championships for the second straight year. Senior Millie Baer teamed with Trelease for the doubles victory. Other singles winners for the Gulls included Sherri Sheppard at number four and Jen Baker at number six. The soccer team, 8-5 overall, had its six-game winning streak halted with a 1-0 loss to Frostburg Saturday. The loss also curbed Salisbury's chances for the ESAC championship. The Gulls are 3-1 in conference play heading into Saturday's ESAC final with Cabrini. Frostburg is undefeated in conference play. The football team, 1-5, had its biggest offensive output of the season last week, but lost to Wagner on a last-minute touchdown, 38-31. The Gulls set season highs for total yards and passing yards, in addition to generating their second-highest point total of the season. The Gulls travel to Montclair this week to meet the Red Hawks on Astroturf. The field hockey squad, 7-4-1, continues its homestand this Saturday with a 1 p.m. contest against Frostburg. Kristen Guttilla scored both goals in last Saturday's 2-0 blanking of Kutztown. Goalie Cindi Smith needed to make just one save in recording her fourth shutout of the year. Tim Smith continues his banner season for the men's cross country team. The junior won his fourth race in six starts by claiming the SSU Tidewater Invitational with a new course record time of 25:42. The Sea Gulls finished second as a team to George Mason University. Seniors Erin Green and Cathy Emerson paced the SSU women to a second place team finish as well. Green was second overall while Emerson finished fifth. Catholic University took top team honors among the women.

Meekins Attends Conference

Dr. Amy Meekins of the School of Education and Professional Studies recently attended a Region IV MAACCE (Maryland Association for Adult Community & Continuing Education) Conference at Cambridge-South Dorchester High School.

Meekins offered two sessions. The first, "An Introduction to Cooperative Learning," included beginning cooperative learning techniques that coult be utilized with adult learners. During the second session, "Reading for Adult Learners," various ideas for improving reading comprehension were shared as well as techniques for establishing a parent library.

Attending the professional development conference were adult educators from Caroline, Cecil, Dorchester, Kent, Queen Anne, Talbot, Somerset, Wicomico and Worcester counties. Participants had the opportunity to attend sessions addressing a variety of topics.

United Charities: Coastal Hospice

The campus will participate again in the statewide United Charities Campaign this fall. Last year, University employees pledged over $12,000 to non-profit organizations which benefit Maryland residents. This year SSU workers can choose from hundreds of statewide organizations established to aid our youth, the elderly, those with physical, mental or emotional disabilities, and the hungry. Thousands of Marylanders in need benefit everyday from these contributions.

In an effort to provide campus employees with a better understanding of some of the beneficiaries of the United Charities Campaign, each week in the SSU News a different non-profit organization which serves the lower Eastern Shore will be profiled. This week it's Coastal Hospice, Inc.

Coastal Hospice cares for the terminally ill and supports their families. It also cares for seriously ill cancer patients. Care is provided with professional and volunteeer services in the home. Coastal Hospice is licensed by the state, accredited by the JCAHO and certified by Medicare.

Hospice and cancer care programs include skilled nursing by RNs; personal care (such as bathing) by home health aides; medical social services; and speech, occupational and physical therapy. A staff counselor facilitates the Cancer Support Group. Professional volunteers provide medical direction, dietary advice and pastoral counseling. Support groups and individual followup is available to family members.

Clients range in age from 9 to 90. Cancer is the primary diagnosis for 95 percent of the patients. Others may have heart failure, ALS, AIDS, etc. Their physicians estimate that hospice patients may live for about six months or less. A family member gives primary care. Cancer care patients are home bound and often need only short-term skilled nursing. Because of an increase in the number of children being served, hospice nurses are developing a pediatric program.

Coastal Hospice cares for about 250 patients a year. For more information, call 742-8732.

Living the Dream

black men he knew. The result was a riveting, poignant, fictionalized portrait of their lives, their struggles, and the ways in which they met their early demise.

Considering the recent media attention given black males, Vaughn White, coordinator for Minority Programming at SSU, felt that this particular play would interest not only the campus community, but the surrounding communities on the Eastern Shore. "This is a great opportunity for groups to expose their youth to contemporary issues in a non-formal educational medium," White said. "There are a number of churches which are interested in and community groups which are expressly organized to work on the issues confronting black men. I hope many of these groups attend this play."

The production is co-sponsored by the Office of Minority Affairs and the Union of African-American Students. Admission is free and the public is cordially invited. For more information, please contact White at 548-4503.

Australia, New Zealand, London Nursing Courses Offered

Graduate nurses will be able to learn through travel and receive credit two ways this winter term. First, the nursing elective, "Cultural Considerations in Nursing," will be offered in Australia and New Zealand (returning home via Hawaii) December 28-January 15. The course is approved for two credits.

Course content includes communication problems in the nurse-client interaction, cross-cultural beliefs and practices and their impact on health and health care, and lifestyles and common health problems encountered among cultural and ethnic minorities.

Health care in Australia and New Zealand, the role and responsibilities of the nurse, and midwifery services are the focus of field trips in both countries. Field trips in Hawaii will include a luau in Honolulu.

"The luau illustrates cross cultural nutrition, food practices and beliefs," said Dr. Edna Quinn of the SSU nursing faculty and trip organizer. "Academic demands of the course allows students to take advantage of numerous activities and cultural events with other SSU students on the trip.

"The others will be studying English literature with Dr. Tom Erskine of the Department of English. Both courses may be taken for undergraduate credit also. The trip will cost $3,129, including hotels, flights, round-trip bus transportation to and from Salisbury/BWI airport, and travel within New Zealand.

"This package compares favorably with similar trips—it is peak tourist season 'Down Under'," said Quinn. (SSU tuition is additional.)

The second travel offering is for London, January 16-January 30. (Many people consider this the best time to travel to Britain.) The trip is sponsored by the Maryland Nurses Association, District IV, for continuing education units (approval pending; previously approved by MNA for 3.8 CEUs). It is open to all nurses or interested persons. Travel costs are estimated at $950 and include airfare, transportation to and from airports, and hotel and breakfast (double occupancy). CEUs fees are extra. In addition to field trips to health agencies, nurses can take advantage of numerous cultural activities in London, including day trips outside of London with students taking a concurrent SSU English course taught by Jim Welsh of the English Department.

Both the Australia/New Zealand and London travel courses are taught be Quinn, Ph.D., C.N.M., R.N., and require study prior to travel. A $500 deposit is due now, with the balance required by November 15. For further information, contact Quinn at 742-7963.

Soviet Foreign Policy Lecture Here on Nov. 4

Dr. Mark N. Katz, assistant professor of government and politics at George Mason University, speaks at the University on Monday, November 4, at 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri University Center.

His lecture is part of the "Images of the Soviet Union" series which is taking place at the University this fall.

According to SSU political science professor, Dr. Greg Cashman, "There has been a real revolution in Soviet foreign policy since Gorbachev came to power in 1985. Americans are familiar with words like perestroika and glasnost which are part of Gorbachev's package of domestic reforms. The term used for the change in direction of Soviet foreign policy is novoe myshlenie or 'new thinking,'" Katz will be talking about this "new thinking" in Soviet foreign policy and the extent to which it is has changed the nature of international relations in the post cold war world.

Katz earned his M.A. in international relations from the Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies and his Ph.D. in political science from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

A former international affairs consultant, he was a research associate with the Kennan Institute for Advanced Russian Studies at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars and was a visiting scholar with the Soviet Studies Program at the Center for Strategic and International Studies.

He has been the recipient of research fellowships from the United States Institute for Peace, the Rockefeller Foundation, the Kennan Institute, the Earhart Foundation and the Brookings Institution.

Katz, a specialist on Soviet foreign policy toward the Third World, is the editor of two recent books, "Soviet-American Conflict Resolution in the Third World" and "The U.S.S.R. and Marxist Revolution in the Third World." In addition to numerous scholarly articles, he is also the author of "Gorbachev's Military Policy in the Third World," "Russia and Arabia: Soviet Foreign Policy toward the Arabian Peninsula" and "The Third World in Soviet Military Thought."

Non-specialists may know Katz from the occasional commentaries he has written for The Washington Post and The Christian Science Monitor, explained Cashman. One recent article compares international relations in the current world situation to a multiple player chess game.

"My personal favorite," said Cashman, "is an article in which Dr. Katz commiserated that the Soviet Union's disengagement from the Third World under Gorbachev had also disengaged his academic career. Katz said (tongue-in-cheek), 'I kind of sympathize with Castro and the other Third World radical leaders. I feel as if Gorbachev has cut me adrift just as he has them.' As you can see, Katz brings an interesting perspective to his work as well as a wry sense of humor," added Cashman.

The lecture is free and open to the public. For more information, contact the Guerrieri Center at 543-6100.

A 1988 graduate of Wicomico Senior High School, Graff is a senior with a 3.8 grade point average majoring in social work at SSU.

The Governor's Citizens Cabinet is a group of volunteers representing Maryland's diverse cultures, professions, life styles and needs in each county. Representatives on the Citizens Cabinet are selected by the governor's office to help advise him on issues, programs and legislation as it may impact their local area.

Through town meetings in different municipalities each month, the Cabinet meets with people and allows them to discuss their needs and concerns about issues which are important to them. Cabinet members are then responsible for submitting a synopsis of each public hearing directly to the governor.

"I can't think of a better time for the Governor's Citizens Cabinet to be in action," said Graff. "It offers the Maryland citizens a chance to express their viewpoints on the current state budget crisis and many of the budget cuts."

Graff is the only Wicomico County student appointed to the Cabinet. "This opportunity to serve on the Cabinet has helped me associate much of my educational background on the different policies to how the policies actually operate independently," added Graff.

Graff is president of the SSU Social Work Club. He is vice president of Phi Eta Sigma national freshman honor society and is a member of Pi Gamma Mu national honor society in the social sciences.

He is currently doing his social work internship at Deer's Head Center in Salisbury, a hospital for the chronically ill. Following graduation, Graff plans to attend graduate school and pursue a social work career in gerontology.

Powell's Watercolors On View At Library

The Wicomico County Free Library sponsors the eighth annual watercolor exhibit by Dolores Powell during November.

Having attended Salisbury State and studied art, Powell discovered a hidden talent for capturing a place and mood in the media of watercolor. By its very nature, watercolor demands a quick response to the scene, capturing the mood, and the play of light and shadows. Her paintings are fresh and uniquely light-filled creating a harmony of sky and water with soft edges, yet detailed portrayal of her chosen subject. She is constantly studying art and refining her technique.

Although originally from Pennsylvania, Powell considers herself an Eastern Shore artist. "I love the charm of the Eastern Shore," said Powell, who often visits and paints such areas as Jenkins Creek, Deal Island, Nanticoke, Smith Island, Hoopers Island and the beach. For 11 years, Powell has been capturing the life on the Chesapeake Bay with paintings of landscapes, waterfowl and the beautiful and vanishing sailing vessels known as skipjacks, whose crews were are often made up of third generation watermen. She also recently captured scenes from the Outer Banks of North Carolina, barns of Maryland and Pennsylvania, lighthouses of the Northeast, and white sands of Pensacola, FL.

Powell was commisioned by the president of the Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia Elks Association to paint a map of that area as its yearly project. The prints of the painting have been successfully shown to and produced by the lodges and Elks members throughout the Mid-Atlantic region.

Some of her most rewarding experiences have been the wonderful expressions on the faces of viewers when they see a painting that reminds them of their childhood or a happy event. Children also have expressed their feelings at exhibits and demonstrations.

On Saturday, November 23, the library will feature a "Meet the Artist" afternoon from 1-4 p.m. Powell will be in the lobby and will demonstrate her painting as an educational exhibit.

This exhibit of landscapes and waterfowl paintings will be on display at the Wicomico County Free Library in Salisbury, November 2 - November 30. Hours are Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. - 9 p.m.; Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. - 5 p.m.; and Sunday from 1 - 5 p.m. Works in the exhibit are for sale.

Powell is the administrative aide in the Office of the Dean of the Henson School of Science and Technology. For more information call her at 543-6425 or 546-2836.

Salinger Study By Wenke Published

The first book-length study of J.D. Salinger's short stories has been published by a Salisbury State professor.

Salinger is best known for his celebrated novel, "The Catcher in the Rye," written in 1951, which became a literary and cult classic. For 25 years, up through 1965, however, he was also publishing short stories, several of which initially appeared in the New Yorker.

According to author Dr. John Wenke, associate professor of English, many readers say that Salinger's works have had a profound impact on them. "Salinger is one of the few authors I know of who has actually changed people's lives," Wenke said.

In Wenke's new book titled "J.D. Salinger: A Study of the Short Fiction," the SSU professor makes the first substantial examination of Salinger's complete literary output. He includes 21 uncollected stories which were published in magazines as disparate as Good Housekeeping, Mademoiselle and Esquire during the 1940s.

Unknown to many, Salinger served in Army intelligence in World War II, landing in Normandy on D-Day. Before, after and during the war, however, he was writing, even sending stories home from the European theatre. He had his highest number printed in 1945.

The war shades these stories and Wenke critically compares Salinger's fiction to that of his peers, Kurt Vonnegut, Jr., Joseph Heller and Norman Mailer, who wrote novels with war as their settings.

An early theme of the stories and more fully developed in "The Catcher in the Rye" was Salinger's preoccupation with reclusiveness. After 1965 he refused to publish or be interviewed, living in seclusion in Cornish, NH. To research his book, Wenke had to dig through yellowed copies of magazines in library stacks, some issues a half century old, because the celebrated author has refused to allow his work to be republished.

Ironically, that posture has brought unwanted notoriety. Many critics consider Salinger to be America's preeminent author-in-absentia.

Wenke, who has taught at SSU since 1985, has received the University's Distinguished Faculty Award. A summa cum laude graduate of the University of Notre Dame where he was Phi Beta Kappa, he earned his Ph.D. from the University of Connecticut. Among his publications are numerous articles and essays on Salinger, James Joyce and Herman Melville. A recognized Melville scholar who recently served as a source for The Washington Post's feature on annual "Moby Dick" celebrations in Mystic, CT, Wenke is treasurer of the famed Melville Society.

Published by G.K. Hall and Co. of Boston, MA, "J.D. Salinger: A Study of the Short Fiction" is on sale at the SSU Book Rack in the Guerrieri University Center.

Career Day: Pros Help Students Get the Job Done

Jobs are scarce in today's world and every applicant must come armed with both the right qualifications and plenty of information about how to snag the job.

That is why 25 successful alumni from the University will return to the campus on Wednesday, October 30, for Career Day IV to counsel students on how to prepare for the realities of the working world.

Sponsored by the Alumni Association, the program consists of two parts: an introductory session with all participants available for general suggestions about employment and workplace; followed by panels concentrating on business, social sciences, natural sciences, education and liberal arts.

Terry Clay, career development specialist at SSU, sees Career Day as a valuable part of the career planning process.

"At the Center for Personal and Professional Development we look at the whole picture," said Clay. "Once a student's values, interests and skills have been defined we recommend an interview with someone already in the field. Career Day gives students the unique chance to have face-to-face interviews with people in a variety of jobs who can tell them how to make the most of an SSU education."

Clay also recommends that students bring their resumes both for critiquing and taking early advantage of job networking possibilities. A number of internships have resulted from previous Career Days.

Returning student, Susan Hoeck, knows the value of inside information. Hoeck worked as a radiology technician before deciding to continue her education and is planning to enter teaching after she graduates in '92. "The working world is full of surprises and I am interested in hearing personal suggestions about how to handle situations that come up in a teacher's life," she said.

A finalist for 1991 Maryland Teacher of the Year and 1991 Wicomico County Outstanding Teacher, Doreete Murray, teaches at Pinehurst Elementary School and is well qualified to

Chinese Magic Revue Nov. 4

"If you thought theater had gotten out of reach or you've concluded that big time circus is a monumental bore, you owe yourself an exotic, tingly, eye-sucking favor," said the San Francisco Chronicle.

"...this two hour vaudeville of jugglers, acrobats, clowns, dancers and cyclists makes family entertainment respectable and even glorious again....This show will restore a sense of simple wonder to folks young and old," said the San Francisco Examiner.

What they are talking about is the Chinese Magic Revue of Taiwan and on Monday, November 4, at 7:30 p.m., this critically acclaimed troupe will appear in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

Presented by the Salisbury State Program Board, tickets are free to SSU students, faculty and staff.

Astonishing audiences of all ages worldwide for the past 11 years, the Chinese Magic Revue has gone as far afield as Southeast Asia, Central and South Americas, Europe, the Middle East and Africa, as well as Canada and the United States. In 1986 the National Association for Campus Activities awarded the Chinese Magic Revue the Campus Entertainment Award for Major Performances in the Performing Arts. They have also appeared on national public television specials and were featured on "That's Incredible."

The multi-faceted production includes formidable feats of balance and daring, explosive Kung Fu, brilliantly costumed traditional dancing and even a touch of Chinese comedy.

According to Monica Moody, SSPB student coordinator, the revue is more than a theatrical presentation. Most of the acts have been an integral part of Chinese culture for more than 2,000 years. "It offers a breathtaking glimpse into an exotic world," she said.

"If you missed the Moscow Circus you'll sure want to see the revue and even if you did catch the circus, you're in for an additional treat," she added.

Tickets for the general public are on sale at the Guerrieri University Center information desk, and will be sold at the door the night of performance. The doors open at 7 p.m. half an hour before curtain. For more information contact the SSPB at 543-6209.

The play which runs from 45-60 minutes and is followed by a discussion, is filled with humor, music and poetry.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

FDC Requesting Presentations

Presentations for the 1992 Mid-Atlantic Conference on College Teaching and Classroom Research, to be held at SSU in April, are now being requested by the University's Faculty Development Committee (FDC).

The subject for the conference is "Reconnecting With the Natural World." Its major goal will be to consider methods and rationale for educating students to view their reality in terms of the living system of which they are a part.

Two speakers of national stature will set the tone for the conference. In addition, the FDC seeks workshops and papers that will encourage participants to explore their own assumptions about how humanity fits into the natural world and to consider ways these assumptions influence curriculum and classroom practice.

"We hope to consider issues ranging from anthropocentric aspects of multicultural and traditional curricula to student involvement in regional environmental issues," said Dr. B.A. Fusaro of the FDC. "In addition we welcome presentations and workshops on other aspects of teaching, for example, motivating students, group process in the classroom and experiential learning."

Prospective presenters are invited to submit a typed abstract of not more than 100 words for papers and 200 words for a workshop. Papers presented at the conference should be not more than 20 minutes and workshops approximately 90 minutes. Interested applicants are asked to include their name, address, telephone number and employer. Workshop abstracts must be received by December 2, paper abstracts by January 13.

The conference is Friday-Saturday, April 3-4. The FDC will subsidize members of the SSU community wishing to participate if they register before Friday, March 6. SSU registration is $15, including Friday dinner and Saturday lunch. For non-SSU participants registration is $30.

For a registration form or other information write Fusaro in care of the Faculty Development Committee, Salisbury State University, Salisbury, MD 21801 or fax number 543-6068.

His talk will occur, appropriately enough, on Thursday October 31, at 3:30 p.m. in Caruthers 118. All are invited and refreshments will be served.

Brooks/Burgess Exhibit Opens Nov. 8

Bonnie Brooks and James Burgess are shown with selections from their upcoming exhibit.

A two-person exhibit featuring pottery by Bonnie Brooks and paintings by James Burgess will open Friday, November 8, and run through Tuesday, November 26, in the Atrium Gallery located in the Guerrieri University Center.

Both artists are familiar to the local art scene, but this exhibit is the first time they have collaborated to mount a show. A "Preview Reception" will be held from 4-6 p.m. on Thursday, November 7. The community is invited to attend.

Brooks has worked in clay for nearly 20 years. With a degree in liberal studies from SSU, she is basically a self taught potter and cites Wayne Higby of Alfred University and Bill Miles of New Mexico State University as two potters whose philosophies about clay she admires most. Brooks has a long list of gallery and juried exhibitions to her credit. She won the Potter's Guild Choice Award in the Works of Clay, 1981 Maryland Federation of Art Exhibit.

"Good work exhibits an integrity of concept as a merging of form and surface, idea and execution, and reflects the appropriate choice of every design and material component," said Brooks.

Both porcelain and stone pieces will be exhibited, their colors manipulated by chemical applications. All are three-dimensional forms, many have lids and handles, but a functional capacity is not necessarily their original intent.

Burgess studied painting at East Carolina University, the University of Maryland College Park, Towson State University and St. John's College. He has been chair and assistant professor of art at SSU since 1972. In addition to his work at SSU, he has served on numerous boards, committees and arts organizations at local and state levels.

Burgess' paintings reflect images he has gathered from travels both within the United States and abroad. Paintings in the exhibit concentrate on memories of sights from the dunes of North Carolina and the numerous wild flowers of England.

"My intent is not to document or record my visual experiences, but to provide a symbolic reaction to the viewer," said Burgess. A variety of media, acrylic, water color and spray enamel are used.

Both pottery and paintings have simple flowing lines and exhibit an organic, natural feeling. There is a wide range of color, but it is subdued. The pottery and paintings complement and enhance each other and the two-person exhibit will appeal to most. The gallery is open daily from 11 a.m.-4 p.m. except Sundays when it opens at noon.

See Joan Collins In 'Private Lives'

The Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council has announced that its first bus trip of the season will be in January to see Noel Coward's "Private Lives," starring Joan Collins at the National Theatre in Washington, D.C. The deadline for trip sign-ups is December 16.

Coward's classic comedy is considered by many to be his best. It's the story of a divorced couple, Elyot and Amanda Chase, both newly remarried and on honeymoons when they learn they have taken adjoining suites at the same hotel. After the divorcees discover that they prefer each other to their new spouses, the play unfolds into a series of comic escapades between the four characters.

Collins of TV's Dynasty will be starring as Amanda. The trip is set for Saturday, January 25. The performance is a 2 p.m. matinee; the bus will be leaving from the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center parking lot at 10:45 a.m., and returning by 8 p.m. There will be a stop for dinner on the way home.

SWAC has arranged for orchestra seating. Tickets, including bus fare for SWAC members, are $65, and for non-members $70. Dinner is not part of the price. Tickets may be purchased at the SWAC, located in the civic center. For more information, call 543-ARTS.

CoHousing: A New Concept in Community

CoHousing communities are resident-developed cooperative neighborhoods where individual households are clustered around a common house with shared faciliities such as a dining room, an area for childcare, workshops and laundry. Each home is self-sufficient with a complete kitchen, but dinners are often available in the common house for those who wish to participate.

CoHousing was "born" in Denmark almost 20 years ago out of a desire to create cooperative housing that satisified the needs of changing lifestyles. CoHousing developments in Europe, range in size from six to 80 households, with the majority between 15 and 33.

If this idea appeals to you, then join a group who will be traveling to Newark, DE, on Sunday, November 3, for a program sponsored by Clay Creek CoHousing for the Delaware Valley. The program starts at 2 p.m. and will last until 4:30 p.m. It will be in the Newark United Methodist Church, 69 E. Main St., Newark and features Bruce Coldham, architect and editor of "Northeast CoHousing Quarterly."

Coldham has traveled widely in Europe and the United States and has a beautiful set of slides to show of CoHousing communities. Also featured will be SSU Sociology Professor Phil Bosserman who has visited several CoHousing and alternative living communities in the United States as part of a study he is making on innovative ways people are choosing to house themselves. Contact either Phil Bosserman (543-6430 or 742-4945) or Carol Bosserman (543-6022 or 742-4945) for further details.

by Paul Ohanian

The streak is up to five. That's how many consecutive times the Sea Gull volleyball team has now won the Eastern States Athletic Conference championship after last Saturday's title. The Gulls won all five of their matches in the one-day round-robin tournament, all by identical two games to zero counts. Jenean Plumley, who had 26 kills and eight blocks, and Heidi Smid, 27 kills, were named to the all-tournament team. The Gulls, now 17-20 on the year, close out the season Saturday with home matches against Christopher Newport and Mary Washington.

The field hockey team upped its record to 9-4-1 over the weekend with a 7-0 whipping of Frostburg State. The win was the team's fourth straight overall and third straight by shutout. Senior Cheryl Ish, who scored three times against Frostburg, inched closer to the all-time SSU goals record. She now has 57 career goals and needs four more to tie all-time leader Terri Timmons (1983-85).

The men's and women's cross country squads compete in the ESAC Championship Meet on Saturday. Both squads finished fourth overall at last weekend's Mason-Dixon Conference Championship. Tim Smith won second place in the men's division while Erin Green was fourth in the women's race. David Atlas and Cathy Emerson also earned all-conference honors.

The football team plays its final home game of the season this Saturday when it hosts Albany State. The Gulls are 1-6 after last week's 41-17 loss to Montclair State. SSU plays its final two games on the road at Newport News Apprentice and Kean (NJ).

The soccer team closes out its season on Saturday when the Gulls welcome NCAA power Methodist. Game time is 1 p.m.

There will be two separate sections of the seminar. Offered on consecutive Mondays, the dates are November 11 and 18. One section is noon - 1 p.m. in the Choptank Room of the Guerrieri University Center; the second session is from 6:30-7:30 p.m., also in the Choptank Room.

Persons wishing to register for either the daytime or evening section should stop by the CPPD or call 543-6070.

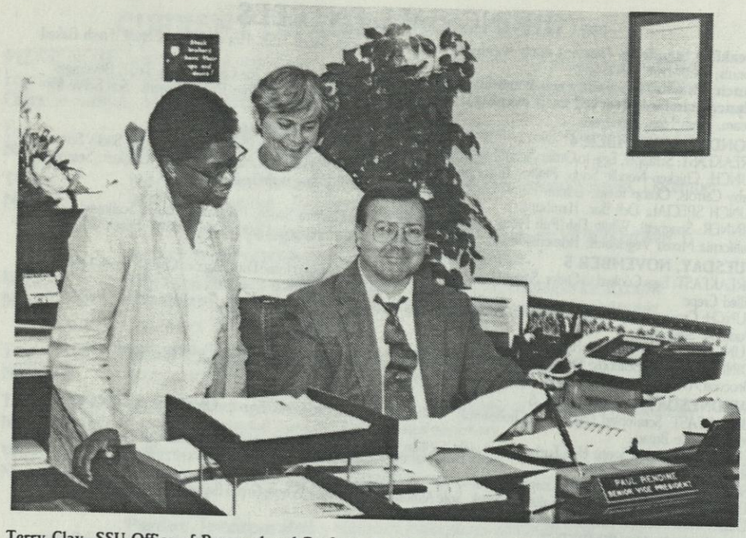
Stressed out by bad news? Get over the "hump" in the work week and enjoy some convivial company on Wednesday from 3-4:30 p.m. when the Office of Institutional Advancement (HH232) sponsors its "Humpday High Tea" for faculty and administrators.

Bob Gearhart, executive director of the SSU Foundation, and Karin Johnson, new director of Grants and Research, invite you to discuss creative ideas and funding with them and your colleagues.

It's a tradition Johnson discovered in Africa when working there and it's a good way to touch base with members of the campus community you may not ordinarily see.

Leave stress at the door at Humpday High Tea.



Terry Clay, SSU Office of Personal and Professional Development, with Dr. Carolyn Bowden, SSU Education Department, and Paul Rendine, committee chair, go over the details of Career Day IV to be held at Salisbury State University on Wednesday, October 30.

Making Money With the Government

"Procurement: How to Do Business With the Government" is the title of a seminar sponsored by the Maryland Small Business Development (SBDC) Network, Eastern Shore Region, offered through the University's Perdue Center for Professional Development.

The one-day seminar will be held on Thursday, November 14, from 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center.

Doing business with government agencies is perhaps one of the most difficult areas of business to manage. The marketplace, however, can be very advantageous to the business owner. Once procured, it offers an opportunity for long-term planning and cash flow.

The seminar will deal with procuring government contracts at the federal, state and local levels. It will also deal with managing those contracts and their incorporation into the organization's flow.

Seminar leaders are Robert Terrell, Dr. Richard Palmer and Marvin Long.

Terrell is a newly hired information business counselor for the SBDC. He comes to the network from Prompt Tech Inc., a minority-owned firm in North Miami, FL. Prior to that he worked with the SBDC in Georgia.

Palmer is a professor of entrepreneurship in the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business. As director of the Eastern Shore Regional SBDC, he consults daily with companies which have cash flow problems.

Long has 18 years of experience as the director of purchasing for Wicomico County and 12 years in general services. He is an active member of the National Institute of Governmental Purchasing and received his Certified Public Purchasing Officer title in 1980.

The registration fee is $95, which includes a continental breakfast, refreshment breaks, lunch and course materials. The registration deadline is November 11.

For more information call 548-4505.

Plan on Getting Old?

Plan on getting old? Know someone who is? Want to know what happens? Then register for Biology of Human Aging.

Biology of Human Aging (BIOL 219) is a new course that will be offered in the spring semester. This course is designed for students who have a personal interest in the aging process or who plan to pursue careers where knowledge of the physical changes occurring in older adults may be important. Examples include careers in health care, sociology, social work, recreation, education and psychology. Though the course is designed for non-biology majors, either Biology 101 or Biology 215 or 216 are prerequisites. This course can apply towards a minor in biology, and it is required for a minor in gerontology.

Biology of Human Aging will concentrate on what happens as people grow older, and will carefully distinguish between inevitable age changes and avoidable abnormal and disease changes. Some common abnormal and disease conditions also will be explored. Other topics will include the reasons and methods for studying aging and the interrelationships between biological age changes and other types of changes, such as psychological, social and economic changes. The text will be a pre-publication edition of a book being written by Dr. Augustine DiGiovanna, the course's instructor.

Returning to Career Day, Mary Wolf, a chemist with the E.I. Du Pont Company, will be able to answer students' questions about securing a successful career and integrating it with a busy private life as a wife and mother.

"We are most grateful to all the panelists for their enthusiastic support," said Judy Pielemeier, executive director of the Alumni Office. "On-the-job experience is the most valuable resource a graduate can share with us."

A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

NOVEMBER 7, 1991 VOL. XIII NO.11

'Battle of Sexes' Comedy Comes to Stage Nov. 20

"Boy's Life," an acerbic adult comedy which was nominated for the Pulitzer Prize is the next production of the Salisbury State Theatre season.

Opening Wednesday, November 20, for five performances in Holloway Hall on stage, "Boy's Life" was written in 1988 by Howard Korder, described as "a very interesting new playwright with a thoroughly contemporary sensibility" by The New Republic magazine.

The New Yorker critic Mimi Kramer called "'Boy's Life' the most balanced and intelligent comment on the battle of the sexes I've seen in a long time."

Korder's play consists of "a series of vignettes revolving around three...young studs motivated exclusively by sexual desire" for women, said New Republic.

Silhouetted against the greed and self-indulgence of the '80s, "these are the sort of men who try to seduce women by telling them how much they want or need them. When the women point out how piggishly they have behaved, (the men) reason, 'I just think you should realize that I've been under a lot of strain lately.' These guys don't mind doing unforgivable things so much as hearing them described," said Kramer.

"Boy's Life" is about the thinking that shapes men's behavior, and their shared notions of manhood, she continued. "The joke here is that the women turn out to be the best 'men.'"

In the role of the three protagonists are SSU students Joseph Senseman, O'Neill Henain and D. Brad Campbell. The women in their lives are Laura Hadley, Amy Black, Jeannine Oliver and Valerie Slunt. Rounding out the cast is R. Michael Walsh III in a cameo role.

Robert Smith of the Department of Communication Arts directs. Sets and lighting design are by Jerry Patt, and costume design is by Paul Pfeiffer. Tickets are $5 general admission, $3 for senior citizens.

Performances run through Monday, November 25, at 8 p.m. except Sunday, November 24, which is a 2 p.m. matinee. "Boy's Life" addresses adult themes and contains explicit language. For ticket reservations call the Theatre Box Office at 543-6228.

Eastern Shore Authors Gather At Book Rack for Holiday Open House

"Published writers are perceived as mysterious beings who always live 'away.' Yet we have an impressive number of respected authors in this area. I think getting them together will be inspiring for anyone who wants to write. And who knows, maybe they'll have some practical tips on getting published," said Kaaren Kundell, one of the managers of the Book Rack.

On Saturday, November 16, from noon to 4 p.m., the Book Rack is gathering some half-dozen writers from the lower Eastern Shore to sign their books and kibitz with the public during a "Holiday Open House." These writers represent fields as far flung as literary criticism and romance novels.

They include Cynthia Bailey-Pratt of Upper Fairmount who writes Regency Romances; Mary Corddrey, a retired Baltimore Sun correspondent and formerly of Salisbury who is the first professional writer to pen a history of Ocean City; Dr. Robert Hedeen, professor emeritus at Salisbury State, author of two Chesapeake Bay natural histories; Dr. Frances Kendall, an SSU communication arts professor who has created a natural foods dessert cookbook; Janie Meneely, an author of children's books with a Chesapeake Bay flavor; Dr. Jack Wenke, an SSU English professor who has published the first book-length study of J.D. Salinger's short stories; and Linda Windsor, an SSU alumna who writes historical romances.

"I've done book signings in Baltimore and other areas," said Corddry, "but the signing I'm looking forward to the most is at the University. I hope to see everyone I know, whether they buy my book or not." Corddry finished "City on the Sand" shortly before relocating to Harford County. "A fascinating history of the state's premier resort," wrote Wilbur Preston in the Baltimore Evening Sun. "Written ...with admirable style and grace," said John Goodspeed of the Whitney papers.

Just published is Wenke's work on Salinger, part of the acclaimed Twayne's Studies in Short Fiction series. "Handsome," "concise," "sensitive," and "highly recommended" are some of the comments by national critics on the Twayne series, to which Salinger is the latest addition.

About Hedeen's "Naturalist on the Nanticoke" Pulitzer Prize-winning author William Warner wrote, "Delightful observations on what makes the Chesapeake tick.... Do you know what a jug-stopper is? How to deal with a toadfish? What good are mosquitos? ...Robert Hedeen has the answers. They are accurate, lively and far more engaging than you might suspect."

Kendall was at one time a master chef at the Hippocrates Health Institute in Boston. There she became famous for her particularly healthy and innovatve desserts which have been cleverly anthologized in "Sweet Temptations." "This is the best dessert book to cross my desk in recent years," said alive (sic) magazine of Canada. "I admire the author's approach...real food for everyone...a good collection of recipes," according to Cookbook Digest.

Santa shanghais a skipjack moored off Tilghman Island after his sleigh gets stuck in the mud during his Yule visit, in Meneely's "Santa and Skipjack." "The result," said Daily Times of Salisbury book reviewer Tracy Myrup, "is a winner as we get an unauthorized view of Father Christmas, his elves and their antics." Menelly, of Royal Oak, is a publisher, poet and performer with the popular folk group, Crab Alley.

Windsor and Bailey-Pratt have each written four novels in the last two years. Each lives in a 19th century farmhouse, is a member of the Delaware Chapter of Romance Writers of America and has carved a solid niche in the lucrative romance trade:

Ethnic Conflict in U.S.S.R. Studied

Recent processes undermining the old world order have accelerated at a breathless pace in the Soviet Union. As the Union unravels to reflect the national aspirations of its constituent populations, issues of national identity rise to the fore.

Dr. Juliette Stapanian, associate professor and chair of the Department of Russian Studies at Emory University, GA, will deliver a lecture titled "Ethnic Conflict in the Soviet Union: The Case of Armenia and Azerbaijan" on Monday, November 18. Her presentation is part of the "Images of the Soviet Union" series which is taking place at the University this fall.

"Comprised of 15 national republics and more than 100 different ethnic groups, the Soviet Union defined a huge land mass, spanning the continents of Europe and Asia," said Stapanian. "A highly diverse peoples brought together by a centralized political and economic system, the Soviets have undergone a radical transition, with power shifting from the Kremlin to the republics.

"New matters of sovereignty for the republics involve not only their hopes for the future but also the resolution of old injustices," she said. "Tragically, efforts to address these problems often have led to ethnic conflict. Among the most complex and violent of these conflicts concerns Christian Armenia and Moslem Azerbaijan, two republics on the Soviet threshold to the Middle East."

Drawing upon experience in the Soviet Union, including a recent trip to Armenia at the invitation of the Supreme Soviet of the republic, Stapanian will examine some of the many aspects of this volatile situation. She will explore emerging national concerns underlying the conflict in the light of a failed Union and the survival of nations.

Stapanian earned her Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin in Madison and has been teaching at Emory since 1980. She has received grants to conduct research in the Soviet Union and has lectured extensively on national identity and cultural survival. Her publications include "Eyewitness in Armenia" for the Washington Post and "The Cubo-Futurist 'Vision' of V. Mayakovsky" for Rice University Press.

The lecture will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri University Center. For further information about the program, please call 543-6100.

Wednesday High Tea: Something Fun

Stressed out by bad news? Get over the "hump" in the work week and enjoy some convivial company on Wednesday from 3-4:30 p.m. when the Office of Institutional Advancement (HH232) sponsors its "Humpday High Tea" for faculty and administrators.

Bob Gearhart, executive director of the SSU Foundation, and Karin Johnson, new director of Grants and Research, invite you to discuss creative ideas and funding with them and your colleagues.

It's a tradition Johnson discovered in Africa when working there and it's a good way to touch base with members of the campus community you may not ordinarily see.

Leave stress at the door at Humpday High Tea.

Accelerated Learning

The Center for Personal and Professional Development will be offering a two-session seminar in November designed to teach participants to use more of their brains' power when they study. Dr. Robert McBrien, CPPD director, will teach students how to use quick stress-releasing methods to get "centered," develop a positive mindset for study concentration, and study while listening to Superlearning music.

There will be two separate sections of the seminar. Offered on consecutive Mondays, the dates are November 11 and 18. One section is noon - 1 p.m. in the Choptank Room of the Guerrieri University Center; the second session is from 6:30-7:30 p.m., also in the Choptank Room.

Persons wishing to register for either the daytime or evening section should stop by the CPPD or call 543-6070.

Attention December Graduates

Commencement exercises will be held on Sunday, December 15, at 3 p.m. in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center. Detailed information will be mailed at a later date.

SSU Newsletter Guidelines

The SSU News is a newsletter for the campus community published each Thursday during fall and spring semesters, unless noted. The deadline is 4 p.m. Friday.

Any story relating to the life of the campus is welcomed. Newsletter items should be typed and double-spaced.

Because stories are proofed and typeset on a first come, first served basis, don't feel you have to wait until Friday to get your article to public relations (HH 264).

For more information call 543-6030.

United Charities Campaign Pledge Cards

Pledge cards were mailed to all University State employees for a voluntary contribution to the 1991 United Charities Campaign on Thursday, November 1. A brochure, which lists all participating agencies, also was mailed to all state employees.

The agency listing is helpful for those who wish to designate a specific agency to receive contributions or require the services of one of the agencies. This year as an incentive for employees to support the campaign, the SSU Foundation has donated a CD player; employees will be eligible to win if they give at least $1.50 per pay period. Also, University Dining Services has donated free passes to the annual Christmas dinner, Friday, December 11, and the Book Rack has donated some items. The drawing for the CD player and the other prizes will take place on Monday, November 25. The winners will be contacted immediately.

When considering whether to contribute please consider that the agencies which recieve funds from United Charities depend on generous support to continue to function. Emergency assistance, vocational training for the handicapped and disabled, counseling and educational programs are just a few of the services offered.

"Perhaps that which you give today may some day come back to you," said campaign co-coordinator Gains Hawkins, director of public relations. "Be as generous as you can be."

Campaign coordinators at the University this year are Debbie Merryweather (543-6050) and Hawkins (543-6030). Call one of them if you have any questions.

Both the Australia/New Zealand and London travel courses are taught by Quinn, Ph.D., C.N.M., R.N., and require study prior to travel. A $500 deposit is due now, with the balance required by November 15. For further information, contact Quinn at 742-7963.

Open Enrollment

Open enrollment for benefits is fast approaching. State employees will have from Monday, October 14, to Friday, November 15, to make any changes or select any additional benefits for 1992. Watch for packets in the mail.

Pay particular attention to the Prescription Drug Plan, which is changing, and to the rates, which are increasing. Those currently enrolled in the Blue Cross/Blue Shield Traditional Plan may want to make appointments to discuss options.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Sexual Harassment Among Issues Discussed By Howard Professor

Attorney Sandra C. Ruffin, a teaching fellow at Howard University School of Law, will conduct a lecture and discussion on the topic of "Communication and Current Issues in Employment Law," on Wednesday, November 6, at 7 p.m. in the Pocomoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center. Excerpts from the material also will be presented on Thursday, November 7, at 2 p.m. in room 116 of Caruthers Hall. The activities are free and open to all members of the University community and the general public.

Professor Ruffin received her J.D. from Harvard University Law School in 1985. She completed the Bachelor of Arts with honors in English and history from the University of Maryland College Park, in 1976. In addition to her teaching responsibilities in legal writing, research and analysis, she is involved in private practice as a sole practitioner. She was formerly an associate with the law firms of Golden, Freda & Schraub, P.C., Washington, D.C., and Mitchell, Silberberg & Knupp, Los Angeles. Her work includes substantive legal practice in the areas of employment law and personnel policies, civil rights law, general corporate and partnership, commercial lending and real estate, securities, intellectual property and entertainment. She has conducted legal analysis and writing seminars for the D.C. Bar continuing legal education and the equal employment opportunity managers.

During her colloquium on "Communication and Current Issues in Employment Law," Ruffin will focus attention on Title 7, the portion of federal law that deals with equal employment rights under the Civil Rights Act of 1964. This act covers such controversial issues as sexual harassment, equal pay, drug testing and protection for handicapped persons. Ruffin's presentation will explore how the lack of effective verbal and nonverbal communication skills can result in Title 7 litigation. "Students and people in general should be educated to resolve communication issues before disputes end up in court rooms," she said.

Ruffin's two-day residency on the campus is sponsored by the Visiting Professors Program of the Office of Minority Affairs. The program is produced in cooperation with the Fulton School of Liberal Arts, the Center for Personal and Professional Development, and the Departments of History and Communication Arts.

Pfeiffer—Shakespeake to Boardwalk Cabaret

T. Paul Pfeiffer, director of theatre, appeared in the Riverside Shakespeare Company's August production of "Much Ado About Nothing."

Pfeiffer played the supporting role of Antonio, and was asked by Riverside Shakespeare, whose home is Manhattan, New York City, to act in its upcoming off-Broadway production of "Macbeth." Because of teaching conflicts, however, Pfeiffer declined that invitation.

Riverside Shakespeare is a respected New York City producer of classical theatre, often performing in Riverside Park on the Hudson River.

Following his work in New York, Pfeiffer returned to Ocean City, where he played a leading role in the Commander Hotel's Boardwalk Cabaret production of the comedy, "My Fat Friend."

Pfeiffer, who will direct "The Grapes of Wrath" at SSU this spring, the inaugural production of the new Fulton Hall theatre, is also scheduled to perform a solo drama on England's popular 18th century actor, Colley Cibber.

The SSU drama professor is working toward his doctoral degree with a concentration in the classics. Last fall he studied classical interpretation at the Folger Shakespeare Theatre in Washington, D.C. The Cibber mono-drama, which he also must write, is a performance requirement for the doctorate.

Pfeiffer's appearance with Riverside Shakespeare was made possible, in part, by a grant from the Salisbury State University Foundation. "The grant made the cost of living in Manhattan manageable and while there I was able to meet and share ideas with other actors and directors. Among them was Jo Sullivan , the widow of Frank Loesser. (She is about to produce a revival of her late husband's classic musical, "Guys and Dolls," on Broadway.) The whole experience not only helped me grow as an actor and director, but enables me to give my theatre students a more realistic picture of what it is like to work professionally in one of the world's toughest professions."

Health Insurance Open Enrollment Ends Next Week

Open enrollment for health insurance ends next week (November 15)!

State employees must complete a health insurance form only if making a change to current programs or participating in the spending accounts.

Members of the Traditional Blue Cross/Blue Shield program are encouraged to examine the other insurance plans that are available on the Eastern Shore, due to the possibility that the Traditional program will not be available in 1992. If the Traditional Plan is not offered, individuals still enrolled in it will automatically be placed in the Comprehensive program. While state employees will have 10 days to accept or reject that automatic placement, the Personnel Office recommends exploring alternatives now.

Individuals desiring to change plans now must complete an enrollment form.

Contact the Personnel Office (HH 222) at 548-4755 for more information or for help completing the form.

Remember, the deadline for open enrollment is Friday, November 15.

Senior co-captain David Kidd was recognized for the second consecutive season, while two other members of the Sea Gull midfield, Kevin Darcy and Jim Wakefield, were also selected. Kidd, who scored both SSU goals in the game against Methodist, finished the season with three goals and four assists. Darcy had one goal and three assists this year, while Wakefield recorded four goals and one assist. The Gulls finished 8-9 overall and 3-2 in ESAC games.

The volleyball team closed out an 18-21 campaign by splitting its last two matches. SSU defeated Christopher Newport but lost to Mary Washington in a tri-match at home last Saturday. Senior Heidi Smid registered a team-high 16 kills and five service aces on the day. Jenean Plumley contributed 11 kills, five aces and four blocks.

Paced by Erin Green (second), Cathy Emerson (fourth) and Dorothy Dean (seventh), the Sea Gull women captured the ESAC's cross country championship last weekend. All three runners earned all-conference honors. The SSU men finished in a tie for second place, although Tim Smith (fifth) and David Atlas (seventh) also earned all-ESAC honors based on their individual performances.

Freshman Eileen Messenger had a record-breaking day in her first collegiate meet as the women's swim team downed St. Mary's 143-105 in its season opener. Messenger shaved two seconds off the team record in the 50-meter backstroke with a first-place time of 34.1. She also bettered the 100-meter backstroke record by five seconds with a winning time of 1:14.41. Senior co-captain Mary Jo Tantalo added three individual first place finishes and Lisa Kidd won two events.

The football team (1-7) finished out the home portion of its schedule with a narrow 20-18 loss to Albany State last Saturday. RB Pierre Copes totalled 295 all-purpose yards, including the team's first 100-yard rushing performace of 1991 with 125 yards. He also accounted for one of the team's two TDs with a 17-yard fourth quarter reception. The Gulls visit Newport News Apprentice this Saturday.

On the cover is a tall dark-haired man holding a riding crop and embracing a scarlet-haired beauty, both dressed in Napoleonic costume. "She danced to desire's seductive melody!" sings the cover of Windsor's "Texas Lovestorm," where a blonde-haired hunk embraces an equally blonde beauty on a bear-skin rug, both half in and half out of Civil War garb.

A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

NOVEMBER 14, 1991 VOL. XIII NO. 12

Skoyles Reads November 18

"John Skoyles is one of the most heartachingly funny poets we have writing right now," said Dr. Michael Waters, SSU creative writing professor. "He writes about relationships between men and women that are so true and so absurd at the same time."

Skoyles, praised by the Associated Press as a young poet with an original voice, will read from his new volume, "Permanent Change," on Monday, November 18.

Part of the Department of English's Writers-on-the-Shore series, Skoyles's reading is at 8 p.m. in Nanticoke Room B of the Guerrieri University Center. Admission is free and the public is cordially invited.

"Permanent Change" was published this year by Carnegie-Mellon University Press. "His is an important new voice in American poetry," wrote Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Alan Dugan.

Skoyles last read at SSU more than a decade ago shortly before the publication of his first book, "A Little Faith." That was praised in The American Book Review as "...Poems written with a receptive ear for music, a visceral sense of rhythm, and a penetrating vision through the ordinary...." Booklist said, "In short lyrics that waste not a word, Skoyles reflects on death, guilt, religion and other central topics, with metaphors as unusual as they are utterly right."

Skoyles has twice received fellowships in creative writing from the National Endowment for the Arts, and has also been the recipient of fellowships from the New York State Foundation for the Arts, the North Carolina Arts Council and Yaddo. The former chair of the writing committee at the Fine Arts Work Center in Provincetown, MA, he currently directs the MFA Program for Writers at Warren Wilson College in North Carolina.

His poems have appeared in The American Poetry Review, The Yale Review, The Virginia Quarterly Review, The Georgia Review, The Ohio Review, The North American Review, The Iowa Review, The Missouri Review, Ploughshares and numerous other journals.

For more information on Skoyles and the Writers-on-the-Shore series, contact the Department of English at 543-6445.

'Happy Holidays' From the SSO

Imagine your favorite holiday music performed by a full symphony orchestra: the rich tones of the brass section, the sweet sound of the strings.

The musicians of the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra at Salisbury State University have done just that and are planning a concert sure to put us all in the holiday spirit.

While lovers of classical music have held Salisbury Symphony Orchestra concerts in high regard, this is the first time so-called "popular" music has been woven into the concert program.

"This is our gift to the community," says Dr. Thomas G. Elliot, music director of the Symphony. "We will be performing some of the classical pieces associated with the season: excerpts from "The Nutcracker Suite," the prelude from "Hansel and Gretel," "Judas Maccabäus," and "Sleigh Ride." But we're also going to have an old-fashioned Christmas carol sing-along."

A highlight of the concert will be a pair of musical Christmas stories to be narrated by a special guest. The concert version of "Amahl and the Night Visitors," by Gian Carlo Menotti and Rimsky-Korsakov's suite from "Christmas Eve" will add to the holiday mood.

The popular music on the program isn't the only "gift" the Symphony will be unwrapping for the community this year. "We know that senior citizens would love the concert," notes Dr. Elliot. "In the past, they have been unable to attend our Saturday night performances."

"So this year, we're adding a Sunday matinee, with the seniors in mind," he says.

These special holiday concerts will be performed in the Holloway Hall Auditorium on Saturday, December 7, at 8 p.m., and at 2 p.m. on Sunday, December 8. Tickets are $6, but there is a special discount for senior citizens: their tickets will be just $4. Salisbury Symphony Gold Pass patrons will not be charged.

For more information on the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra at Salisbury State University, please contact Maureen McNeill at 749-1064.

Ference at History Forum

Dr. Gregory Ference, assistant professor of history in the Fulton School of Liberal Arts, recently presented a paper at the silver anniversary meeting of the History Forum. The History Forum, held at Duquesne University in Pittsburgh, is the largest annual meeting of the profession on the East Coast.

Ference, who put together the panel, "Great Estate Management in England, Bohemia and Italy in the Early Modern Era," spoke on "Land Administration in the Wake of the Hussite Wars in Bohemia." The paper disproves the accepted theory that Neo-Serfdom occured in Bohemia in the 15th and 16th centuries as was the case in other sections of Eastern Europe.

The Thirty Years War, rather than profiting from the selling of grain to Western markets, was the impetus for the re-enserfment of the peasantry in Bohemia at a much later date than was previously thought.

Other members of the panel included experts in the fields of East European, English and Italian Renaissance history from Georgia, North Carolina and Ohio.

Decker Published

Dr. Wayne H. Decker, professor of management, acting chair of the Department of Management/Marketing and director of the graduate program in the Perdue School of Business, recently published "Styles, Gender and Humor Effects in Evaluating Leaders" in the summer edition of The Mid-Atlantic Journal of Business.

Stapanian earned her Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin in Madison and has been teaching at Emory since 1980. She has received grants to conduct research in the Soviet Union and has lectured extensively on national identity and cultural survival. Her publications include "Eyewitness in Armenia" for the Washington Post and "The Cubo-Futurist 'Vision' of V. Mayakovsky" for Rice University Press.

United Charities Campaign Pledge Cards

Pledge cards were mailed to all University State employees for a voluntary contribution to the 1991 United Charities Campaign on Thursday, November 1. A brochure, which lists all participating agencies, also was mailed to all state employees.

The agency listing is helpful for those who wish to designate a specific agency to receive contributions or require the services of one of the agencies. This year as an incentive for employees to support the campaign, the SSU Foundation has donated a CD player; employees will be eligible to win if they give at least $1.50 per pay period. Also, University Dining Services has donated free passes to the annual Christmas dinner, Friday, December 11, and the Book Rack has donated some items. The drawing for the CD player and the other prizes will take place on Monday, November 25. The winners will be contacted immediately.

When considering whether to contribute please consider that the agencies which recieve funds from United Charities depend on generous support to continue to function. Emergency assistance, vocational training for the handicapped and disabled, counseling and educational programs are just a few of the services offered.

"Perhaps that which you give today may some day come back to you," said campaign co-coordinator Gains Hawkins, director of public relations. "Be as generous as you can be."

Campaign coordinators at the University this year are Debbie Merryweather (543-6050) and Hawkins (543-6030). Call one of them if you have any questions.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Attention December Graduates

Commencement exercises will be held on Sunday, December 15, at 3 p.m. in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center. Detailed information will be mailed at a later date.

Bermuda Triangle

One of the college circuit's most fascinating and successful groups, Bermuda Triangle, will be appearing in the Gull's Nest on Friday, November 15, at 8 p.m. "Their high comedy, low volume rock is an irrestible mix of superb musical artistry and epidemic insanity," said Jodie Pelman of the Salisbury State Program Board.

Two of Bermuda Triangle's instruments were invented and patented by the group's Roger Becket, a former engineer who now sings, composes and plays keyboard, electronic autoharp and drums. Wendy Becket, lead vocalist, keyboardist and "ethereal and beautiful bass guitarist, mesmerizes with a crystal clear soprano that's got to be one of the best in the business," according to Entertainment New York.

To all this, add rousingly wacky audience interaction songs, free kazoos for everyone, TV trivia contests with valuable prizes, three albums, and more than 1,000 succesful college performances and you have the Bermuda Triangle Band—a genuine crowd-pleaser. "Another must see from Spotlight Cafe and the SSPB," said Pelman.

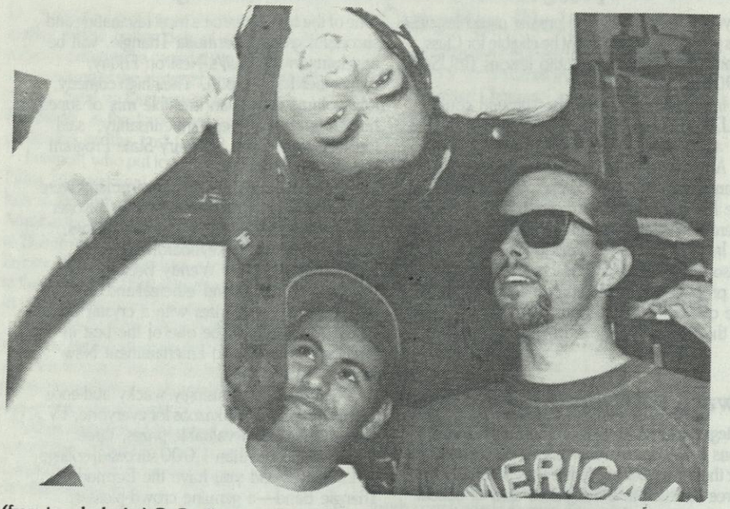
'Boys' Life'



(from top clockwise) D. Bradley Campbell, Joseph Senseman and O'Neill Henain play Phil, Jack and Don, three buddies always on the make in Howard Korder's "Boys' Life," opening November 20 at SSU.

Huckleberry Finn and Jim, his runaway friend, floated down the Mississippi on a raft experiencing different visitors and adventures. So the three male protagonists in "Boys' Life," a contemporary comedy by Howard Korder, float through their world. But their raft is an urban apartment—and their visitors and adventures always involve sexual forays with women—seductions which never anchor them ashore. Like Huck and Jim, Korder's men are cut off from family, and any other attachment that is meaningful or adult.

"Boys' Life," a very sexual, and acerbic variation on a theme as old as American literature—young men trying to come of age—is the subject of this Pulitzer Prize-nominated comedy opening November 20 in Holloway Hall on stage. Its director, Robert Smith, thinks it will resonate with audiences. "For these three men, sex is a sport to be discussed in post-game summary," he said. "It will sound as familiar to audiences as Monday night football."

Phil, one of the leads, laments as he again fails with a woman, "You know what's really terrifying? Everyone's worried about the world getting blown up or something, right, but...what if it doesn't? What if it just goes on like this, forever. What are we going to do then?" It's a losing season with no end game in sight.

"Fortunately, the three men have great senses of humor—a strong survival skill," Smith said.

The SSU director picked the play for several reasons. "Although the fundamental theme isn't new, the script is fresh in its point of view," he said. In the Irish comedy, "The Playboy of the Western World," which opened the SSU theatre season, a young man's bad relationship with his father affected his rapport with women. In "Boys' Life," men's relationships with one another shape their response to the opposite sex. For example when Don, one of the principals, cheats on his girlfriend and she confronts him with his infidelity, he replies, "I wanted to see...if I could get away with it.... Because that's what a man would do."

Many of the issues are a part of the college environment, Smith believes, and they have captured the attention of his student cast. The characters, Don, Phil and the third, Jack, are former college buddies now in their mid-twenties who seem to constantly hang out in Don's apartment. Beneath their jokes and insults lurks a desire for connection, to be a part of something. They are three interesting guys, only half-baked, stuck in a suspended state of arrested adolescence, Smith said.

"The play is insightful and eminently quotable," said The New Yorker magazine. The situations are adult and the language is explicit.

Performances are Wednesday-Monday, November 20-25, at 8 p.m. except Sunday which is a 2 p.m. matinee. Admission is free to SSU students, faculty and staff.

For reservations call the Theatre Box Office at 543-6228.

American Pictures

The Salisbury State Program Board's Variety Showcase is sponsoring a multi-media presentation of a Danish vagabond's personal journey through the American underclass.

Jacob Holdt spent five years hitchhiking over 100,000 miles in the United States. He documented American society from the richest families to the poorest. He joined the rebellion in Wounded Knee, followed criminals in the ghettos during muggings and worked under feudal conditions in Louisiana with migrant farm workers. These powerful experiences were translated into music, words and 3,000 slide pictures. "What is seen and heard captures and enthralls diverse audiences from beginning to end," said Mary Mattox, SSPB Variety Showcase chair.

Holdt started out with only $40 and sold blood twice a week to buy film for his camera. As an outsider having grown up in a European social welfare state, he challenges established American thought patterns by demonstrating the enormous financial and human costs of life without some kind of public support for the poor. "Holdt shows that it is absolutely unconscionable that there are U.S. citizens who live in such deplorable conditions when America is such an affluence country," said Mattox. The presentation is said to be as moving as it is graphic.

This multi-media display has received critical acclaim and has been shown all over the world, including more than 100 American colleges. "American Pictures" has been used in social science teaching and has been adopted by many high schools and colleges as part of the curriculum.

This remarkable event is coming to SSU on November 22, at 7 p.m. It will be shown in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri University Center.

Admission is free and the public is cordially invited. Seating is limited and first come first served.

Woods Scholarship Awarded

Kathy L. Peterson, a junior in the Perdue School of Business, recently received the Richard N. Woods Purchasing Management Association Scholarship. The award is made by the Delmarva chapter of the Purchasing Management Association of Maryland (PMAM).

The $750 scholarship is named in honor of Woods, a retired certified purchasing manager (CPM) now living in Ocean Pines. The award goes annually to a full-time junior or senior in the Perdue School who has an interest in purchasing management and a cumulative grade point average of at least 2.7 (out of a possible 4.0). Delmarva residency and financial need may also be considered.

Peterson, daughter of David and Alice Peterson of Churchville, MD, has dual majors, business administration and leisure studies. She is active in numerous extracurricular activities including student disc jockey at the student-run radio station, WSUR, freshman representative to the Perdue Scholars Association (1989-90), member of Phi Eta Sigma honor society, member of the Newman Club and student representative to the Delmarva Organization of College Students. She is the IBM sales representative for SSU, a volunteer firefighter and active in the intramural sports of racquetball, softball, indoor lacrosse, floor hockey and volleyball.

Woods moved to Ocean Pines three years ago after a 46-year career with Allied Signal, a micro-chip manufacturer in Columbia, MD. A member of PMAM since 1969, he has a lifetime certification with the organization. He has been chairman of the Delmarva chapter of PMAM's education committee for the past three years and earlier started a scholarship program supported by PMAM at Catonsville Community College.

This marks the sixth year the Delmarva chapter of PMAM has awarded a scholarship to an SSU student. The 65-member group raises scholarship funds through a vendor expo it sponsors each year.

Sea Gull Sports Roundup

by Paul Ohanian

Playing the undefeated, defending national champion on its home field, the field hockey squad nearly pulled off the upset, losing to Trenton State 1-0 in overtime last Saturday in the NCAA Division III Tournament. The Sea Gulls finish the season at 11-6-1, while Trenton advances to this weekend's Final Four. The Gulls had advanced to Saturday's regional final with a 3-2 victory over Messiah in Friday's opening round.

Salisbury controlled play for much of the contest against Trenton, outshooting the home team 13-10 on the artificial turf surface. Junior forward Kristen Guttilla nearly converted a game winning deflection in the final seconds of regulation. Goalie Cindi Smith registered eight saves.

Edie Matthews, Diane Bondulich and Cheryl Ish tallied second half goals in Friday's game against Messiah to help rally the Gulls from a 1-0 deficit. Regina Zippel, Tara Savage and Ish each had an assist.

Ish, a two-time All-America forward, finishes her four-year career with 60 goals, second most in school history. Terri Timmons (1983-85) remains the all-time leader with 61. Ish's 24-goal senior campaign is also the fourth-best single-season performance in Salisbury's 40-year field hockey history.

Meanwhile, playing in rainy and windy conditions, the football team dropped a 16-10 decision at Newport News Apprentice last Saturday. Pierre Copes highlighted SSU's offense with a career-best 147 yards rushing on 26 carries. He also accounted for the team's touchdown with a four-yard fourth quarter run. Rob Grande added a 20-yard field goal for the Gulls. Salisbury, 1-8 overall, closes out the season this Saturday in Union, NJ against the Cougers of Kean College.

Tim Smith and Erin Green will lead the cross country teams in this Saturday's NCAA Mideast Regional in Allentown, PA. Top individuals and teams will qualify for the 1991 Division III National Championship Meet on November 23. Smith has been SSU's top runner throughout the season, registering the team's top seven individual times this year. Green has recorded the top four times on the women's team.

Chi Alpha's 'Truthquest'

Is the truth relative? Do all paths lead to God? Is reincarnation in the Bible? Are all world religions compatible? What is the source of the force?

These are among the questions that will be addressed during a conference on the New Age, featuring guest speakers Tal Brooke and Bill Alnor and sponsored by Chi Alpha, a Christian fellowship at SSU. It will be conducted Friday and Saturday, November 22-23. Friday's session, from 7-9 p.m. is in Caruthers Hall Auditorium. Saturday's is in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri Universtiy Center.

Called Truthquest, and subtitled "Exploring Spiritual Counterfeits," the conference will provide participants with an opportunity to evaluate and compare their beliefs by examining the influence of New Age philosophy and practices on our culture.

Saturday's meeting will be open to the public. Registration begins at noon in the Wicomico Room. From 1-5 p.m., workshops will deal with reincarnation, holistic health, crystals, inner healing, channeling, Atlantis, and ancient astronaut theories. The conference will conclude at 7 p.m. that night with Brooke's keynote address, followed by a question and answer session.

Students are invited to both sessions. The public is invited to the Saturday meeting.

Heidlers at Auburn

This October the Auburn History Department celebrated its centennial with a conference which featured papers delivered by graduates of the department's doctoral program. SSU assistant professors David S. Heidler and Jeanne T. Heidler presented papers at the conference. Dr. David Heidler's presentation, "The United States Government in the Aftermath of the First Seminole War," dealt with the political ramifications of Andrew Jackson's illegal invasion of Spanish Florida in 1818. Dr. Jeanne Heidler's paper, "Provoking a Conquest: The United States Army and the Origins of the First Seminole War," demonstrated that the U.S. Army rather than the depredations of Florida's Seminoles precipitated the crisis which led to the war.

The Heidlers' current research, supported in part by the SSU Foundation, will produce a comprehensive study of the causes, events and repercussions of the First Seminole War. Because it will be the first work to examine the war from the viewpoints of the Native American, African-American and white participants, the Heidlers' study will provide a revision of interpretations of this period in American history.

National Expert On Human Relations

Dr. Crystal A. Kuykendall will be the guest lecturer for the Union of African-American Students on Thursday, November 21, at 7:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri University Center. The fall lecture topic is "Improving Black Student Achievement through Enhancing Self-Image." The Fall Lecture Series is an annual event planned and implemented by the Union of Afro-American Students with an overall goal of enhancing the diversity of the University's campus community.

Kuykendall is currently the president and general counsel of her own firm, K.I.R.K. Inc., a firm established to provide "Kreative and Innovative Resources for Kids." K.I.R.K. produces superior quality audio and video tapes, products, publications, workbooks and learning-teaching tools which can be used by educators, counselors, administrators, parents, students and concerned citizens to enhance student motivation, discipline, achievement, self-image, teacher expectations, school climate and parenting skills.

A human relations and education expert, Kuykendall has gained national recognition for her talent and expertise in promoting problem resolution. Former executive director of the National Alliance of Black School Educators, she has provided leadership and services for a growing national and international constituency.

Kuykendall has served as director of the Educational Development Institute of PSI Associates and director of the Urban Minority Relations Department of the National School Boards Association. Born in Chicago, IL, she received her B.A. from Southern Illinois University, her M.A. from Montclair State College in N.J. and her Doctorate in Educational Administration from Atlanta University as a result of a Ford Fellowship. Mental Health, Addictions Committee Meets Here

The Mental Health and Addictions Committee, a subcommittee of the Maryland Health Resources Planning Commission, will meet from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. on Thursday, November 21, in Holloway Hall Auditorium. The public is invited to attend.

"Our function is to look at the needs of and regulate all health, mental health and social services' programs throughout the state," said Dr. Brennen Taylor, a member of the subcommittee and an assistant professor of social work in SSU's School of Education and Professional Studies.

Committee members will concentrate on determining how many beds are needed statewide to serve people with mental disorders. "Bed needs are important," Taylor said, "because we want everyone in the state who needs help to receive quality care."

The agenda will also focus on utilization reviews which determine the most cost effective ways to treat people with addictions. Information obtained from utilization reviews will show how people with addictions use health services and will also help committee members understand how different types of treatment require different medications and varying lengths of stay.

At 11 a.m. Dr. Eric Wish, executive director of the Center for Substance Abuse Research at the University of Maryland College Park, will discuss the "Prevalence of Drug Use in the Criminal Justice System."

The afternoon presentation will be given by Sally Dolch, executive director of the Mid Shore Council on Children, Youth and Families Inc., the voice for at-risk families' issues in the region. She will talk about "Local Governance for Child and Family Services."

"We are working for a statewide reform of children's services. We cross paths with the Mental Health and Addictions Committee through the development of continuing services to children. We are both looking at institutional and community-based services," Dolch said. "We want to identify the strengths and weaknesses of prevention programs and close the gaps in the services."

Dolch applauds the committee's public meetings saying that it is very beneficial to get out of the office now and then and "get a real perspective" of the health care environment.

"We are all working to keep the family alive. The problems are out there," she said, "but we are trying to make them easier on all of us."

For more information call Dr. Brennen Taylor at 543-6513.

United Charities Campaign Pledge Cards

Pledge cards were mailed to all University State employees for a voluntary contribution to the 1991 United Charities Campaign on Thursday, November 1. A brochure, which lists all participating agencies, also was mailed to all state employees.

The agency listing is helpful for those who wish to designate a specific agency to receive contributions or require the services of one of the agencies. This year as an incentive for employees to support the campaign, the SSU Foundation has donated a CD player; employees will be eligible to win if they give at least $1.50 per pay period. Also, University Dining Services has donated free passes to the annual Christmas dinner, Friday, December 11, and the Book Rack has donated some items. The drawing for the CD player and the other prizes will take place on Monday, November 25. The winners will be contacted immediately.

When considering whether to contribute please consider that the agencies which recieve funds from United Charities depend on generous support to continue to function. Emergency assistance, vocational training for the handicapped and disabled, counseling and educational programs are just a few of the services offered.

"Perhaps that which you give today may some day come back to you," said campaign co-coordinator Gains Hawkins, director of public relations. "Be as generous as you can be."

Campaign coordinators at the University this year are Debbie Merryweather (543-6050) and Hawkins (543-6030). Call one of them if you have any questions.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

American Pictures

The Salisbury State Program Board's Variety Showcase is sponsoring a multi-media presentation of a Danish vagabond's personal journey through the American underclass.

Jacob Holdt spent five years hitchhiking over 100,000 miles in the United States. He documented American society from the richest families to the poorest. He joined the rebellion in Wounded Knee, followed criminals in the ghettos during muggings and worked under feudal conditions in Louisiana with migrant farm workers. These powerful experiences were translated into music, words and 3,000 slide pictures. "What is seen and heard captures and enthralls diverse audiences from beginning to end," said Mary Mattox, SSPB Variety Showcase chair.

Holdt started out with only $40 and sold blood twice a week to buy film for his camera. As an outsider having grown up in a European social welfare state, he challenges established American thought patterns by demonstrating the enormous financial and human costs of life without some kind of public support for the poor. "Holdt shows that it is absolutely unconscionable that there are U.S. citizens who live in such deplorable conditions when America is such an affluence country," said Mattox. The presentation is said to be as moving as it is graphic.

This multi-media display has received critical acclaim and has been shown all over the world, including more than 100 American colleges. "American Pictures" has been used in social science teaching and has been adopted by many high schools and colleges as part of the curriculum.

This remarkable event is coming to SSU on November 22, at 7 p.m. It will be shown in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri University Center.

Admission is free and the public is cordially invited. Seating is limited and first come first served.

Attention December Graduates

Commencement exercises will be held on Sunday, December 15, at 3 p.m. in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center. Detailed information will be mailed at a later date.

Index by Ference In Czech Newsletter

Dr. Gregory C. Ference, assistant professor of history in the Fulton School, recently had an index published in the Czechoslovak History Newsletter: Bulletin of the Czechoslovak History Conference.

The index covers the entire 15-year life span of the publication of the only international organization devoted strictly to the study of the peoples and culture of Czechoslovakia. The index, located in the latest issue of the newsletter, bears its own page numbering for further reference.

The editor of the publication writes in the current issue, "On behalf of the entire membership, I should like to extend heartfelt gratitude to Professor Gregory C. Ference of Salisbury State University in Maryland. He did this work in a rigorous, systematic and timely fashion."

Armstrong, Stitcher Give Recreation Paper

Grady Armstrong of the leisure studies faculty and Tom Stitcher of the physical education staff presented a paper concerning risk management and its impact on campus recreation and facilities at the National Intramural Recreation Sports Association Northeast Region Conference held in Towson recently.

The conference was attended by campus recreation and facilities professionals from a number of universities and colleges on the East Coast.

Stitcher also presented a paper, "The Effects of Goal Setting on Performance Enhancement in a Competitive Athletic Setting," at the national conference of the Association for the Advancement of Applied Sport Psychology in Savannah, GA, recently.

The conference was attended by the top sport psychologists throughout North America.

Perdue School Student Gets Loyola Scholarship

Richard Fatzyntz, a junior business administration major in the Perdue School of Business, recently received the Loyola Federal Savings and Loan Association Scholarship.

The $1,000 award for the 1991 fall semester is based on the student's volunteer work, community service, grade point average and financial need.

Fatzyntz, 21, a graduate of Vernon Township High School, is the son of Audrey C. Fatzynytz of Highland Lakes, NJ.

His extracurricular activities are extensive. He has been community service chairman of the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity for the last two years; has participated in canned food and clothing runs; has collected for UNICEF. He has coordinated with his fraternity and the Holly Center's staff two successful spring fairs and horseback riding trips. (The Holly Center is a state-run residential facility for the mentally and physically handicapped.) Fatzyntz also recently volunteered his time with the Salisbury Jaycees by working at the Halloween haunted house and is planning to shop with needy children at Christmastime. He also collected and organized care packages of assorted items for the men and women in Saudi Arabia during the Gulf War.

"As in the past, Loyola Federal feels compelled to help deserving students who will become our future business leaders. As our present economic situtation shows, the need for people with good business training is more important than ever. Further, with the rapid changes ongoing in the world, we need business people who can take advantage of the opportunities presented to us," said Loyola Federal regional vice president, Terry Daly.

Perdue Faculty Publish Paper

Two faculty members in the Perdue School were recently published. Dr. M.F. Diriker, assistant professor of marketing, has been invited to edit two special issues of the Journal of International Food and Agribusiness Marketing. Diriker will write the lead article in each of the special issues.

Diriker's article, "An Involvement-Oriented Approach to Teaching a Medium-Sized Marketing Principles Class," has been accepted for publication in a forthcoming issue of the Journal of Education for Business.

Additionally, Diriker has been notified the article, "Developing Self-Marketing Skills for Student Career Success," which he co-authored with Dr. Denny E. McCorkle and Dr. Joe F. Alexander, both assistant professors of marketing at the University of Colorado, has been accepted for publication and will appear in a forthcoming issue of the Journal of Marketing Education.

Dr. Benjamin B. Greene, Jr., associate professor of economics and acting chair of economics/finance, had his article "A Survey of Computer Integration into College Courses," published in the July 1991 edition of Educational Technology.

Also, Warren Keller, director of the Regional Technology Council grant awarded to the Perdue School, has accepted the invitation of Maryland State Department of Education to serve as a member of a "Maryland Task Force on Outcome-based High School Graduation Requirements."

Austin, Moazzam Present Joint Paper

Drs. Homer W. Austin and Mohammad Moazzam recently presented a joint paper to the seventh annual Colloquium on Assisting Underprepared Students held at Goldey-Beacom College in Wilmington, DE.

Austin and Moazzam are members of the Mathematics and Computer Science Department in the Henson School of Science and Technology. Their paper, "Tutorial Math Program at Salisbury State University," describes the successful math tutoring program at SSU, where advanced undergraduates and faculty have joined forces to help other students succeed in lover division mathematics courses.

The department's program was initiated in the fall of 1987 and has led to improved success in mathematics.

There was much interest in this paper at the conference because few mathematics departments have instituted programs such as Salisbury State's. Usually, when such programs are available, they are offered outside the mathematics department.

The game will be played this Saturday at Villanova University as part of the Division I Final Four weekend. SSU's Dawn Chamberlin will also serve as co-head coach of the South squad. Symphony Orchestra To Feature Soviet Viola Player

The musicians of the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra at Salisbury State University are putting the finishing touches on what promises to be a delightful concert. A program that blends classical and traditional holiday music is planned for two Holloway Hall Auditorium performances: Saturday, December 7, at 8 p.m. and a Sunday matinee, December 8, at 2 p.m.

The performers are happy to have a special guest sitting in. Svetlana Batusova is visiting this country from the Soviet Union. While her English may be a little rusty, her mastery of the viola has opened a door for her in Salisbury. Together, she and the members of the Symphony share the international language of music.

Batusova is visiting a friend in Laurel, DE, until her six-month visa expires. Her host, Kirk Whaley, knew of a musician who performs with the Symphony and made arrangements for her to join. A professional musician at home, Batusova is looking forward to the Holiday Concert—her American debut, so to speak.

In addition to meeting the needs of a growing group of listeners, the Symphony also provides a venue for the cream of a considerable crop of area musicians. Members travel from as far as Rehoboth Beach and Easton for the opportunity to rehearse and perform here. Cecil Yates makes the drive from Easton each week. "The Orchestra affords us an opportunity that we otherwise wouldn't have," he said. "I enjoy performing with these excellent musicians."

Young Alexia Luscher joined the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra when her family moved here last March. At 16, she is not only the newest member, but one of the youngest. Luscher began playing the violin at age 4, when her parents enrolled her in a Suzuki program.

A veteran of many concerts already, Luscher says one of the pieces the Symphony is rehearsing for the Holiday Concert is an old favorite of hers. One of her fondest performance memories is of playing with the pit orchestra of the New York Opera Company when it took its production of "Hansel and Gretel" to her Pennsylvania hometown.

Along with the Prelude to "Hansel and Gretel," the program for the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra's Holiday Concert includes selections from the "Nutcracker Suite," Act III from Handel's "Sinfoinia" and a traditional Christmas carol sing-along.

Admission is free for SSU students, faculty and staff. Tickets are $6; discount tickets for senior citizens and children are $4. Tickets are available at all Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council outlets (543-ARTS), at Salisbury Music and Instrument Repair on Eastern Shore Drive, and by calling the Music Department at SSU, 543-6385.

Carnegie Foundation President To Deliver Commencement Address

Dr. Ernest L. Boyer, who has been called "the nation's leading educator," will deliver the Commencement address at the University's 67th year winter graduation on Sunday, December 15, at 3 p.m, in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center.

Boyer is president of The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, the nation's leading educational think tank. He is also Senior Fellow at the prestigious Woodrow Wilson School at Princeton University and is education columnist for The London Times.

In 1990 U.S. News and World Report honored him as Educator of the Year. In 1983, in a national survey, he was selected by his peers as the leading educator in the nation. In 1987 he was chosen as the man of the year in higher education.

He holds honorary degrees from over 100 U.S. colleges and universities and was awarded the President's Medal from Tel Aviv University.

Said Dr. Maurice Bozman, Riall Lecturer of Education at SSU, "Dr. Boyer is a national leader who not only has published extensively but is active in promoting excellence in all levels of education." Boyer initiated SSU's E. Pauline Riall Lecture Series.

Dr. Sharon Rubin, dean of the Charles R. and Martha N. Fulton School of Liberal Arts, praised Boyer as both a researcher and speaker.

"His work is taken extremely seriously by people, not only in education, but in politics. He is an excellent speaker...who says important things."

The Center for Personal and Professional Development will offer a seminar in early December to help participants learn to reduce the stress associated with test-taking. Dr. Robert McBrien, CPPD director, will teach students effective stress management methods to help reduce test-taking stress. Participants will learn how to replace performance-based anxiety with calmness and clear thinking.

Offered in the Guerrieri University Center on Monday, December 9, one section is noon-1 p.m., the second session is from 6:30- in the Pocomoke Room.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m.
Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Jazz Ambassadors Performance Benefits Maryland Food Bank

The Jazz Ambassadors of the world-travelled U.S. Army Field Band will present a free concert on Thursday, December 12, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall. Sponsors are the Salisbury Daily Times, Salisbury State and the University's ROTC detachment.

The Jazz Ambassadors from Washington, D.C. is a select group of military musicians who use their talents to bring the Army image to the American public.

Although admission to the concert is free patrons are asked to bring a donation of nonperishable food or a monetary donation to the capital fund of the Maryland Food Bank, Salisbury Chapter.

Created in 1969, the Jazz Ambassadors is a component of the United States Army Field Band. Each year this elite big band travels thousands of miles throughout the nation to perform free concerts.

The musicians of the Jazz Ambassadors have earned widespread acclaim with their distinctive musical styling. They show remarkable versatility in their handling of tunes ranging from the swing sounds of the '30s to the popular songs of today's youth.

Many of these performers are also adept composers and arrangers. Their original compositions are sprinkled throughout each program. This arranging dexterity helps to give the band its unique sound.

All the members of the Jazz Ambassadors are chosen by competitive audition. They come from the country's leading universities such as North Texas State, California at Berkley, Towson State and Miami. These performers have achieved national recognition through the superior standard of musicianship they maintain during hundreds of concerts before the public and on radio and television.

Audiences and critics alike have praised this organization as one of the finest performing groups in America. The Jazz Ambassadors present the music of yesterday and today in a program that young and old alike will enjoy.

Free tickets are available, beginning Tuesday, December 3, at the Salisbury Daily Times, the Army Recruiter in the Twilley Centre, Salisbury, and the Guerrieri University Center information desk.

For additional information call the Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

2. The Commencement speaker will be Dr. Ernest L. Boyer, president of The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

3. Physically Disabled Guests—Accessible seating is provided on the main floor of the arena. Ask an usher for the location as you enter the Civic Center.

4. Hearing Impaired—Signers are present for the entire graduation ceremony. Seating for an optimum view of the individual(s) signing is in the first level of the grandstands close to and on either side of the stage. Seating is not reserved, therefore, early arrival is suggested. Ask an usher for the location as you enter the Civic Center.

5. Caps, gowns and master's hoods and announcements (quantities are limited) will be distributed through the University bookstore beginning November 21. These may be retained by the graduates and need not be returned following the ceremony. Problems with caps and gowns will be corrected prior to the ceremony by the bookstore employees at the Civic Center, in the Flanders Room #1 near the snack bar to the left of the arena entrances. Bookstore hours Monday-Thursday are 8:30 a.m.-6 p.m. Bookstore hours on Friday are 8:30 a.m.- 4 p.m. The bookstore will be open on Friday, December 13, from 8:30 a.m.- 3 p.m. Graduates must pick up the necessary items before 3 p.m. on that date.

6. Students will be awarded degrees by school (e.g., Fulton School of Liberal Arts), and will be asked, by Dr. Bellavance, to stand and remain standing until all degrees have been awarded for that school. Bellavance will then signal graduates to move the tassel from the right side to the left side of the mortarboard, and then to be seated.

7. The faculty marshals will give each graduate a 3x5 card containing his/her name and the school, (e.g. Perdue School of Business). The card then is to be given to Dr. Nelson Butler when the graduate reaches the stage, and at the same time, the graduate is to announce his/her name. Butler will then know who the person is and how to pronounce the name correctly. The name on the card must not be changed for any reason.

8. During the recessional graduates and faculty are to return to the area where they assembled prior to the ceremony. They should not stop or congregate in the lobby.

9. Degree candidates who do not plan to participate in the Commencement exercise must notify the Registrar's Office by calling 543-6150 no later than Monday, December 9. 19. Dress Code

This is a formal academic occasion and should be viewed as such in dress and demeanor.

The academic robe is black and the recommended dress, therefore, is:

A. Women

1. Black dress shoes (or some other dark color) - no white or other light color.

2. Dress hose, preferably not white or a light color.

3. A dress which does not have a high neckline or stand-up collar. It should not show above the V-neckline on the robe.

Since the academic robe has a zipper front closing, the dress will show only near the lower hem and, therefore, preferably should be a dark color, rather than white or very light.

4. No visible jewelry. Fraternity or sorority pins/ribbons may be worn; these are academic emblems and are not considered jewelry as such.

5. No flowers on the academic robe, and no flowers are to be carried to the stage.

B. Men

1. Black dress shoes (or some dark color) - no sneakers or light color sport shoes with thick rubber soles.

2. Dark color socks - no white athletic socks.

3. Dress slacks, preferably a dark or neutral color.

4. Dress shirt, preferably white, or a light color.

5. Dress tie (four-in-hand tie with windsor knot). (Shirt collar and tie will show above the V-neckline of the academic robe.)

6. Suit coat or sport coat will not be seen under the robe and is, therefore, optional.

7. No visible jewelry. Fraternity pins/ribbons may be worn; these are academic emblems and are not considered jewelry as such.

C. Both

1. The mortarboard (academic hat) is to be worn with the front point over the forehead below the front hairline, so the flat board is parallel to the floor. (Not worn on the back of the head with the board pointing upward.) No decoration of any kind is to be placed on the mortarboard.

2. Candidates for the bachelor's degree should come into the auditorium with the tassel on the right, hanging near the right eye. After the degrees are conferred, the tassel is shifted to the left side. The signal for shifting the tassel will be given by President Bellavance and Vice President of Academic Affairs Butler when they touch their mortarboards.

3. Candidates for the master's degree should place the tassel at the left front of the mortarboard prior to entering the auditorium and should not shift it.

4. Master's degree candidates will wear the robe, but will carry the hood over the left arm until they reach the stage, where it will be placed on the candidate. Faculty marshalls will give you more specific information.

5. Graduates will receive graduation picture information from Market South/Specialists in Graduate and Event Photography. This information will arrive at your permanent address in the near future.

20. Graduation Decorum

Graduation ceremonies are by their very nature festive occasions. The festivity manifests itself in many ways including the dress of the students and faculty adorned in academic regalia and the warmth, joy and satisfaction of accomplishment. The ceremonies are also marked by seriousness where the actual conferring of degrees signifies long hard work on the part of everyone involved: students, faculty, administrators, parents and spouses. As a consequence of the serious nature of the ceremony, students are expected to maintain a measure of decorum consonant with the occasion. Applause and other recognition of the conferring of degrees should be limited to a joint effort at the conclusion of each graduation group, (e.g., B.S., B.A., etc.).

Personal Privacy New WSCL Program

WSCL-FM 89.5 will begin broadcasting a new 13-part program beginning on Tuesday, December 10, at 6:30 p.m. The half-hour programs will address important issues regarding new telecommunications technologies as Caller-ID, cellular phones, 800 numbers and electronic messaging.

Executive Producer Gregg McVicar of Pacific Multimedia said, "Privacy issues have many facets; wireless technologies, credit reporting, marketing lists, constitutional law and network security. As the evolving telecommunications network transforms the ways we interact and do business, these new systems can pose serious risks to our personal privacy, leading to a gradual erosion of our personal freedoms. As the country celebrates the 200th anniversary of the Bill of Rights, it's time to expand the dialogue about what it means to be a free person in our high-tech interconnected society. The Privacy Project will move the discussion forward for average listeners and policymakers alike."

Middle School Students See Philly Via SSU

Students from the Eastern Shore filled Halloween bags with facts and dates from American history when they joined students from Salisbury State for a field trip to the historic sites of Philadelphia on October 30.

Approximately 130 middle school students along with teachers and guidance counselors from Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset counties participated. The trip included stops at the Philadelphia Visitors' Center, Independence Hall, the Liberty Bell and Franklin Court. According to some students, the most important fact they learned on the trip is that Independence Mall is not a shopping mall.

The middle school students are part of the "Shore Future" project, a cooperative effort of local schools and Salisbury State to encourage students to develop positive attitudes toward school, set goals for graduation from high school and start thinking about the possibility of attending college.

Students from Woodson Middle School in Marion also went along. These students are part of the STEPP program—Students "Striving to Excel Personally and Professionally." They are part of an SSU initiative to encourage middle school students to consider careers in education.

The trip was organized by Dr. Ellen V. Whitford and Mrs. Judith Kennan who coordinate the Shore Future project and the STEPP program for the SSU Education Department. Salisbury State students majoring in secondary social studies planned lessons and activities which highlighted this educational experience. The students planned and taught lessons before the trip and developed activities—such as a scavenger hunt—which focused on the important lessons to be learned during the trip. After the trip several groups of students wrote school newspaper articles describing what they had seen and learned.

The SSU students who volunteered to teach lessons and chaperone the trip are: Diane Herz, Katherine Jones, Jeff Payne, Dawn Sheetz and Ted Steels. Also, SSU education majors Marie Rottiers, Melissa Thomas and Tracy Slezak chaperoned.

By Paul Ohanian

Basketball dominates the sports scene at SSU this week as the annual Gull Classic Tournament takes to the court on Friday and Saturday. Four games, two men's and two women's, are scheduled for both Friday and Saturday. The men's field includes Wilmington, Western Connecticut State and City College of New York, while the SSU women welcome Neumann, Holy Family and Wilmington. Coach Ward Lambert's men's team meets CCNY in its first round game at 9 p.m. on Friday, with the Salisbury women hosting Neumann in its first round contest at 7 p.m. on Friday.

The SSU men improved their record to 2-1 on the young season with a 107-85 victory at home over Christopher Newport two days before Thanksgiving. Trailing 53-47 at half, Andre Foreman led SSU's second-half comeback as he finished with a game-high 33 points. Four other Gulls reached double-figures, led by Dameon Ross' 19 and Ed Farrell's 16 points off-the-bench. Salisbury outscored Christopher Newport 60-32 in the second half.

Meanwhile, despite a career-high 38 points from junior guard Jen Boone, Coach Bridget Benshetler's women's squad fell in double overtime to Christopher Newport, 104-101. Salisbury forged back from a nine-point halftime deficit to tie the game at 78 after regulation time, and was tied at 90 after the first overtime period. Senior Jeannie Daly added 33 points for the Gulls, while freshman Amy Fenzel scored 10 points and grabbed a game-high 15 rebounds. SSU, 1-2 overall, travels to Mary Washington before beginning play in this weekend's tournament.

The women's swim team, 3-2 on the season, returns to action this week with a home meet against Gallaudet. Senior captain Mary Jo Tantalo, Lisa Kidd and Kelly Flynn led the Gulls in their most recent outing, a 117-88 loss at Goucher. Flynn registered the team's only individual first place by winning the 50 freestyle. Tantalo won second place in the 200 individual medley and also swam on the first-place 200 medley relay team. Kidd captured a pair of seconds in the 200 and 1000 freestyle.

The wrestling team takes its 2-0 record into Saturday's tournament at York (PA) College. The Gulls swept Newport News Apprentice, 30-16, and Gallaudet, 54-3, in their season opener last week. Darren Archangelo, Sam Gardner, Tim Ammon and Ron Rossi were the double-winners for the Sea Gulls.

Boykin Presents At Psychology Workshop

Dr. Ronald Boykin, assistant professor in the Psychology Department, recently presented a workshop at the annual Eastern Conference on the Teaching of Psychology.

Held at James Madison University in Harrisonburg, VA, Boykin's workshop, "The Role of Emotions in Teaching Students to Think," focused on providing instructors with strategies to help students overcome emotional barriers to critical thinking.

"Students' critical thinking can be impeded by anxiety, fear, anger and depressed mood," Boykin explained. "It's important for instructors to understand the sources of these emotional barriers. Understanding these sources can help teachers develop effective classroom approaches to helping students learn critical thinking skills."

Boykin's workshop emphasized three major psychological sources of student emotions: self-esteem, attributions (student perceptions of the causes(s) of their academic successes and failures), and self-efficacy (students' beliefs concerning their academic abilities and the likelihood of their being rewarded for learning new skills). Helpful strategies were presented collectively as student empowering strategies and included demonstrating respect for students as persons, encouraging students to internalize (take personal credit for) academic successes and providing "high-probabiltity of success" experiences for students.

Attending Boykin's workshop was University of Michigan Professor Wilbert J. McKeachie, noted expert on college teaching and author of the classic "Teaching Tips: A Guidebook for the Beginning College Teacher."

Literature/Film Quarterly, a publication of SSU, was one of 12 film journals to receive a $4,000 grant from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences (the organization that awards the Oscars). Letter Worth Reading

Dear Public Relations:

In this era of financial difficulty, stress and tension, one may expect to encounter gloomy attitudes and mediocre performance. Frequently, we feel so sorry for ourselves that we bury our heads in the sands of our own inadequacies and fears. We almost never find the time to look around and remind ourselves how fortunate we really are.

Throughout this semester, I have continually noticed that the work completed by Duplication Services has been exemplary. Interactions have been cheerful. Completed jobs are always delivered significantly earlier than desired. No errors have been noted. It seems that when there are budget problems, significant readjustments must be made within academic departments. Although I try to meet deadlines in a timely manner, they have crept up on me to the point that "date needed" is, sometimes, close to "date requested." Fortunately, thanks to the people in Duplication Services, I have never missed a deadline because my necessary materials were not reproduced. Never have I distributed material that was printed or collated incorrectly.

Thus, I thought it appropriate to let you know how supportive that division of Salisbury State University has been to the Department of Medical Technology. We are, indeed, very fortunate to have such an excellent support staff working with our institution.

Travel Interest Meeting

Another interest meeting for a summer term 1992 travel course to England, Scotland and Wales will be held on Monday, December 9, at 7:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall, room 102.

The final meeting for the semester, it will feature further details on the trip, as well as a slide show of some of the sites to be visited. Wayne Ackerson, history faculty member and sponsor of the travel course, said "the response has truly been overwhelming, and there is still plenty of time to get involved."

Some of the sites to be visited include Stratford-on-Avon, York, Edinburgh and London. "There are many other places that we will stop as well, so this trip holds something for everyone," said Ackerson.

The tour will cost about $1,600 which includes air travel, tour by private motor coach, all lodging in three-star hotels, most meals and all admission charges.

For more information, attend the meeting or call Ackerson at 543-6527 or 543-6245.

DiGiovanna Lectures On Aging Trends

Dr. Augustine DiGiovanna, associate professor of biology in the Henson School of Science and Technology, recently presented a lecture and led a discussion about aging for the Golden de Salers of St. Francis de Sales Catholic Parish in Salisbury.

DiGiovanna began the program by describing general features about aging including population trends among the elderly and descriptions of what aging is and what it is not. The program then shifted to how and why individuals can prevent or reduce many of the adverse changes and diseases that accompany aging. The last part of the program concentrated on preventing bone deterioration and osteoporosis.

These are a few of the topics to be included in DiGiovanna's new course, Biology of Aging in Humans (Biol 219).

Senkbeil Conducts Lab Safety Workshop

Dr. Edward Senkbeil, associate professor of chemistry in the Henson School of Science and Technology, recently conducted a half-day workshop on laboratory safety to Accomac County, VA, science school teachers. The workshop was part of an in-service day program for professional development of science teachers.

At the request of the Accomac County secondary school supervisor, Senkbeil discussed the responsibilities and liabilities of the science teacher in the laboratory, as it pertained to safety. With the ever increasing possibility of being sued, this area is of much interest to science teachers.

Using decisions from previous court cases of negligence in the science laboratory as references, Senkbeil provided science teachers with guidelines for prudent behavior in the laboratory setting. The design of safety programs and common hazards in the laboratory were also discussed.

Boyer is not afraid of controversy. For example, in his book, "High School," published in 1983, he advocated community service by teenagers as a curriculum requirement.

He also has advocated more autonomy to teachers and principals. "Excellence," said Boyer, "is what happens between the teacher and the student in the classroom. And that's where my confidence and hope are greatest. I am most discouraged when I'm talking to people who don't meet with students every day, but I'm most encouraged when I meet with teachers and students. They have a better fix on what's needed than all the experts on leave from Mt. Olympus."

Before joining the Carnegie Foundation in 1979, he served as the 23rd U.S. Commissioner of Education, administering a $12 billion federal budget. As commissioner he emphasized excellence in education and the centrality of language. During this period federal support to education increased 40 percent.

From 1970-77, he was chancellor of the State University of New York (SUNY). As head of the largest university in the United States, he directed a system of 64 institutions with over 350,000 students.

His book, "College: The Undergraduate Experience," published in 1987, has been widely acclaimed in educational circles. It argues that it's time to reaffirm the spirit of community at colleges and universities, and that the total campus, not just the classroom, should be viewed as a place of learning.

"So much of what a student learns happens outside the classroom, teachers and administrators must take seriously what is or is not happening there," Boyer said.

"Today's students have been labeled the 'me generation' concerned only about private ends. But we found that this generation of undergraduates has hopes and aspirations that reach beyond themselves," he wrote. "A good college affirms that service to others is a central part of eduation."

As a college administrator, Boyer introduced the experimental mid-year term—the nation's first, which subsequently was adopted by many other colleges. He also initiated a five-year review of college presidents, developed an experimental three-year A.B. program, established a new rank of Distinguished Teaching Professor and negotiated the first undergraduate exchange program with the Soviet Union.

Boyer has been named by three presidents of the United States to national commissions. He also is deeply committed to the arts in education. He has been a member of both the Saratoga Performing Arts Center and the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. Currently he is a member of the Council of Foreign Relations and a trustee of The Aspen Institute, Haverford College, the University of Pennsylvania Medical Center and the Museum of the American Indian.

Boyer will receive an honorary doctor of Humane Letters at the Commencement ceremony. Beulah Dixon Bartholomew, a graduate of SSU's class of '29, will receive the Alumni Appreciation Award.

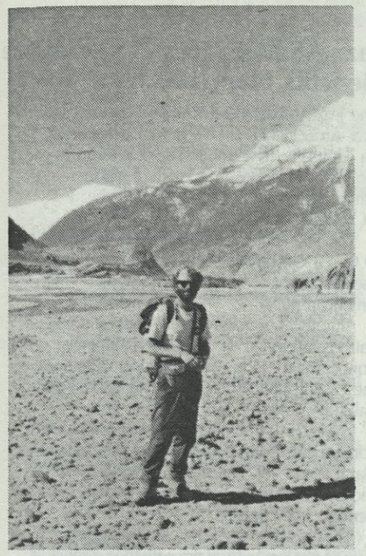
A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

DECEMBER 12, 1991 VOL. XIII NO. 15



Chris Clifford, on location on the Tibetan plateau in India

SSU Student's Photos At AI&G

Chris Clifford, a biology student at SSU, doesn't consider himself an artist; he considers his subjects the artists. "Looking at my photographs," he says, "I hope makes one aware that the real art is in the timeless expressions of the people, the landscapes and the diversity of cultures around the world." Those people and cultures will be on display beginning December 9 at the Art Institute & Gallery in Salisbury. The public is invited to a free reception on Thursday, December 12, from 5-7 p.m.

Black and white and color photography, as well as a number of artifacts from Pakistan, India, Thailand and Egypt are part of this exhibit, the results of Clifford's explorations during three years of travel around the world.

With backpack in hand, and no plans whatsoever, he ventured into the world's most remote regions. His photographs, while "other worldly" and extraordinary to local viewers, captured his daily, ordinary encounters as he traveled by train across India, on foot through the Himalaya's and by motorcycle through the outback of Australia. "After traveling for three years, I feel as if I have barely scratched the surface," he says.

On one large wall in the exhibit there are portraits and faces. A bust of Ramses II appears in one photograph. In another Buddest monks blow their giant ceremonial horns on the Tibetan plateau. The sounds reverberate across the valley, and the monks send their message to the Graduation Sunday!

Three hundred twenty-one bachelor's degree and 89 master's degree candidates will be recognized for their academic achievements at the University's 67th year graduation ceremonies on Sunday, December 15, at 3 p.m. in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center.

The class of 1991 includes 211 receiving the Bachelor of Science, 107 receiving the Bachelor of Arts, one the Bachelor of Fine Arts, and two receiving the Bachelor of Arts in Social Work. In addition 89 students will receive master's degrees: 54 the Master of Education, 21 the Master of Arts, 13 the Master of Business Administration and one the Master of Science.

On Saturday, December 14, at 1 p.m., a pinning ceremony will honor the University's nursing graduates in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

Dr. Ernest L. Boyer, who has been called "the nation's leading educator" and in 1990 was honored by U.S. News and World Report as "Educator of the Year," will deliver the Commencement address. The president of one of the nation's leading educational think tanks, The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, Boyer has a preeminent reputation. In 1983 he was chosen by his peers as the nation's leading educator. In 1987 he was selected man of the year in higher education. He holds honorary degrees from over 100 U.S. colleges and universities and was awarded the President's Medal from Tel Aviv University.

He is Senior Fellow at the prestigious Woodrow Wilson School at Princeton University and is education columnist for The London Times. Boyer is author of two highly praised and influential books, "High School" and "College: The Undergraduate Experience."

Before joining the Carnegie Foundation in 1979, he served as the 23rd U.S. Commissioner of Education, administering a $12 billion federal budget. As commissioner he emphasized excellence in education and the centrality of language. During this period federal support to education increased 40 percent.

He is also committed to the arts in education.

From 1970-77, he was chancellor of the State University of New York (SUNY). As head of the largest university in the United States, he directed a system of 64 institutions with over 350,000 students.

Boyer will receive an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters at the Commencement ceremony.

SSU Horticulture: Victory Gardens and More

During World War II it was a symbol of determination in the face of adversity. At SSU, it is an idea whose time has come—again. Starting next spring, the University will be offering its 700 faculty and staff members plots of land for victory gardens.

"We had some nine acres of land that were originally purchased for athletic fields but we can't afford to clear and sod them with the current state budget crisis," said Vice President of Administration Joseph Gilbert. "Still, we can easily provide compost and water to the fields. Since faculty and staff are having to take pay cuts and furloughs, we thought we could help them and put the land to good use." "It's a misconception that here on the Eastern Shore everybody has a garden," Gilbert added. "A lot of our younger faculty and staff, for example, live in apartments."

The victory gardens are just the latest in a series of projects by SSU's Horticulture Department which not only oversees grounds on the 120 acre campus, but handles solid waste disposal for 6,000 students and staff, and maintains extensive athletic fields in use three seasons a year. Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Beulah Bartholomew To Be Honored Sunday

Beulah Dixon Bartholomew, an early graduate of Salisbury State University, will be presented the Distinguished Alumni Award at the University's winter commencement on Sunday, December 15, in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center.

This is the highest honor given to alumni at Salisbury. The award honors a teaching career which began in 1929 with her graduation from Salisbury Normal School and culminated with retirement in 1967 as vice principal of Stoneleigh Elementary School in Baltimore County.

"Beulah Bartholomew has all the qualities that make us feel so good about alumni," said Judy Pielemeier, executive director of SSU Alumni Relations. "She has remained loyal to Salisbury State throughout her long career and has always been positive and ready to serve the University. Her enthusiasm enriches us today as it enriched the lives of her pupils."

Bartholomew, who grew up in Pocomoke City, MD, inherited her lifelong love of learning from her late parents, Aimee and Raymond Dixon. "They made great sacrifices to send me to school to study and do all that I could in the field of education," she said. "I had their support in every way." In their honor Bartholomew endowed the Aimee and Raymond Dixon Distinguished Educator lecture series which has attracted nationally-known educators to the campus of Salisbury State since 1984.

"I have always loved the school and always feel welcome, even though it has changed in size and curriculum," said Bartholomew, who credits the school with giving her "an excellent foundation on which to build."

A past board member of the SSU Alumni Association, she returns to the campus as often as possible from her home on the western shore, and gets as much pleasure from recent additions, such as the University Center and Fulton Hall, as she does from the places she remembers from her youth. Always forward-looking, she also enjoys the lively interaction she finds with current students and faculty.

Bartholomew's happiest career memories are when she taught all subjects including music, art and physical education to fifth graders. She enjoyed the pupils' impishness and saw it as their eagerness to learn. "They stimulated me, and I stimulated them," she says with characteristic modesty.

Bartholomew continues to lead an active life with her husband, Wilmer. They live in Asbury Methodist Village Retirement Center in Gaithersburg, MD, where they and fellow retired academics have organized the School of Continuing Education. Since their marriage on Valentine's Day in 1981, the Bartholomews have also travelled extensively in Europe and Australia.

SCS Concert Dec. 17

The Salisbury Choral Society presents a holiday choral concert featuring music by three British composers on Tuesday, December 17, at 8 p.m. at Asbury United Methodist Church in Salisbury.

The guest accompanist and organist for the concert is Taylor Harvey, director of music at Asbury. Harvey, a graduate of the Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore, is well-known in the Salisbury area.

The conductor and music director of the Salisbury Choral Society is Dr. Duane R. Karna, director of choral activities and assistant professor of music at SSU. In his first season with the SCS, Karna is "excited about the upcoming choral concert and proud of the fine singing which the audience is sure to enjoy." The 60-voice choir will combine with the SSU Concert Choir and the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra in April for a performance of Johannes Brahms' "German Requiem."

Tickets are $6 for adults and can be purchased from any Choral Society singer and at the door the evening of the performance. The concert is sponsored by the SSU's Department of Music, Asbury United Methodist Church and, in part, by the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council.

O'Mara Works To Be Sold

The works of Ruth O'Mara will be on sale at the University's Holiday Art Sale through December 13.

O'Mara, 21, a senior Bachelor of Fine Arts student majoring in painting, had her artwork displayed in the Sorrento Gallery in Italy this past summer. The previous two summers her paintings had been exhibited in the Rosenburg Gallery at Goucher College.

In 1988 O'Mara was the first student to receive SSU's Art Scholarship Award, which is funded by profits from the Holiday Art Sale.

She previously worked behind the scenes for the sale; this is the first time her art has been available to the public here. "I enjoy the human interaction, seeing works sold that people like," O'Mara said about the annual event.

Following graduation she would like to teach for a year in the Teaching for America program, possibly at an Indian Reservation, and then continue graduate study.

O'Mara is one of several artists, student and professional, whose works are being sold for scholarships. Prices have ranged from one dollar to several hundred, on everything from ceramics to photography to oils. The sale is in the Atrium Gallery of the Guerrieri University Center.

2. The Commencement speaker will be Dr. Ernest L. Boyer, president of The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

3. Physically Disabled Guests—Accessible seating is provided on the main floor of the arena. Ask an usher for the location as you enter the Civic Center.

4. Hearing Impaired—Signers are present for the entire graduation ceremony. Seating for an optimum view of the individual(s) signing is in the first level of the grandstands close to and on either side of the stage. Seating is not reserved, therefore, early arrival is suggested. Ask an usher for the location as you enter the Civic Center.

5. Caps, gowns and master's hoods and announcements (quantities are limited) will be distributed through the University bookstore beginning November 21. These may be retained by the graduates and need not be returned following the ceremony. Problems with caps and gowns will be corrected prior to the ceremony by the bookstore employees at the Civic Center, in the Flanders Room #1 near the snack bar to the left of the arena entrances. Bookstore hours Monday-Thursday are 8:30 a.m.-6 p.m. Bookstore hours on Friday are 8:30 a.m.- 4 p.m. The bookstore will be open on Friday, December 13, from 8:30 a.m.- 3 p.m. Graduates must pick up the necessary items before 3 p.m. on that date.

6. 19. Dress Code

This is a formal academic occasion and should be viewed as such in dress and demeanor.

The academic robe is black and the recommended dress, therefore, is:

A. Women

1. Black dress shoes (or some other dark color) - no white or other light color.
2. Dress hose, preferably not white or a light color.
3. A dress which does not have a high neckline or stand-up collar. It should not show above the V-neckline on the robe.

Since the academic robe has a zipper front closing, the dress will show only near the lower hem and, therefore, preferably should be a dark color, rather than white or very light.

4. No visible jewelry. Fraternity or sorority pins/ribbons may be worn; these are academic emblems and are not considered jewelry as such.
5. No flowers on the academic robe, and no flowers are to be carried to the stage.

B. Men

1. Black dress shoes (or some dark color) - no sneakers or light color sport shoes with thick rubber soles.
2. Dark color socks - no white athletic socks.
3. Dress slacks, preferably a dark or neutral color.
4. Dress shirt, preferably white, or a light color.
5. Dress tie (four-in-hand tie with windsor knot). (Shirt collar and tie will show above the V-neckline of the academic robe.)
6. Suit coat or sport coat will not be seen under the robe and is, therefore, optional.
7. No visible jewelry. Fraternity pins/ribbons may be worn; these are academic emblems and are not considered jewelry as such.

C. Both

1. The mortarboard (academic hat) is to be worn with the front point over the forehead below the front hairline, so the flat board is parallel to the floor. (Not worn on the back of the head with the board pointing upward.) No decoration of any kind is to be placed on the mortarboard.
2. Candidates for the bachelor's degree should come into the auditorium with the tassel on the right, hanging near the right eye. After the degrees are conferred, the tassel is shifted to the left side. The signal for shifting the tassel will be given by President Bellavance and Vice President of Academic Affairs Butler when they touch their mortarboards.
3. Candidates for the master's degree should place the tassel at the left front of the mortarboard prior to entering the auditorium and should not shift it.
4. Master's degree candidates will wear the robe, but will carry the hood over the left arm until they reach the stage, where it will be placed on the candidate. Faculty marshalls will give you more specific information.
5. Graduates will receive graduation picture information from Market South/Specialists in Graduate and Event Photography. This information will arrive at your permanent address in the near future.

20. Graduation Decorum

Graduation ceremonies are by their very nature festive occasions. The festivity manifests itself in many ways including the dress of the students and faculty adorned in academic regalia and the warmth, joy and satisfaction of accomplishment. The ceremonies are also marked by seriousness where the actual conferring of degrees signifies long hard work on the part of everyone involved: students, faculty, administrators, parents and spouses. As a consequence of the serious nature of the ceremony, students are expected to maintain a measure of decorum consonant with the occasion. Applause and other recognition of the conferring of degrees should be limited to a joint effort at the conclusion of each graduation group, (e.g., B.S., B.A., etc.).

Miller Elected To Byzantine Post

At its November meeting in Boston, Dr. Timothy S. Miller of the Department of History in the Fulton School of Liberal Arts, was elected vice-president of the Byzantine Studies Conference, the nation's only learned society devoted solely to Byzantine studies.

The international conference has 350 members most of whom teach either in the United States or Europe. Although most members are historians or archaeologists, some come from schools of theology or philosophy and even from faculties of architecture and law. The conference has one annual meeting, held each fall.

During the opening session, he gave a paper, "The Leprosarium of Saint Zotikos, Khazars, and the Jewish Quarter of Constantiople," which presented the fruits of his research this summer in Rome and revealed for the first time the existence of Jewish Khazars (a tribe of Turks who coverted en masse to Judaism during the early Middle Ages) in the Byzantine capital.

At the business luncheon Miller was elected to the governing board of the conference. That evening at the first executive session of the board, Miller was elected vice president succeeding the well-known Syriac scholar, Dr. Susan Harvey of Brown University.

"I thought I might get on the governing board this year," Miller said, "but I had no idea that I would end up as an officer. I only hope I can keep us with the correspondence."

As a result of his election Miller expects to be traveling more this year, "hopefully back to Italy before it gets even more expensive." Miller also hopes that he can continue pursuing the fate of the Jewish Khazars of Constantinople. He plans to publish an article on this subject in 1992.

Mammograms

Once again the State will be offering mammogram screenings here on campus. The van containing the equipment will be located in the parking lot behind Blackwell Library on Monday, February 24. Actual screening times will be announced closer to the date.

All females who are state employees (contractual, temporary, regular, etc.—not students), or wives of State employees are eligible to participate.

Women of 50 years of age or older are encouraged to have mammograms every year and Blue Coss/Blue Shield will pay for one annually. Those under 50 are recommended to have one every 1-2 years and Blue Coss/Blue Shield will pay once every other year for this age group.

People not insured by Blue Cross/Blue Shield are required to pay $50 cash, check or VISA/MASTERCARD at the time of their appointment.

Note: If fewer than 15 people sign up for this program it will be cancelled. Contact Shirley King, in the Personnel Office, at 548-4755 for a reservation slot.

Burroughs Speaker

Dean Burroughs, associate athletic director and men's tennis coach, was a featured speaker at the recent College Tennis Night sponsored by the Maryland Tennis Association. The conference was held at the Aspen Hill Racquet Club in Silver Spring, MD.

Burroughs spoke of the opportunities and pitfalls, attractions and distractions of the student-athlete. The balance of academics and athletics in the student-athlete's life was the essential focus of his message.

Burroughs is an active volunteer in both the Maryland Tennis Association and Mid-Atlantic Tennis Association. He currently serves as director of the Mid-Atlantic Tennis Film Library.

SSU Alumna Is Delaware Teacher of the Year

Mercedes V. Ferrari, an SSU alumna, has been named Delaware Teacher of the Year for 1992.

Ferrari was one of 18 teachers nominated for exemplifying the best characteristics of Delaware's 6,000 public schoolteachers. In recognition of this honor, Ferrari will receive a new computer and a $10,500 grant.

"I am thrilled to receive this award. It means a lot to me because it shows that I have been accepted by my peers. People really appreciate what I'm doing," Ferrari said. "Even though I am a foreigner, I really feel like I belong now."

Currently an English teacher at Milford High School, Ferrari received her bachelor's degree in English, foreign languages and literature in 1962 from the University of Bologna, Italy, where she also taught business English at a parochial high school. After receiving her English proficiency certification, Ferrari relocated to Delaware and, in 1976, earned her master's degree in English and education from SSU.

"It was a difficult transition moving from Italy to the United States," said Ferrari, who now lives in Lewes, DE. "I owe a lot to Dr. William Zak (an SSU English professor) and Dr. Jerome Miller (an SSU philosophy professor). They were my guides while I was at Salisbury State. They helped me adjust to the differences in education systems.

"Salisbury State professors are very concerned about their students," she said. "They take the time to really get to know their students."

Ferrari gives back to her own students by involving herself in academic and extracurricular activities. She initiated and continues to supervise the Latin program at Milford High School.

She is the adviser for the student newspaper and the Milford chapter of the National Honor Society. During the summer session, Ferrari also teaches philosophy at the University of Delaware.

world that another prayer session has begun. Two Indian men begin their morning rituals along the banks of the Ganges River where the local barber shaves them, and their sticks sit beside them, waiting to be chewed on, and frayed, and turned into tooth brushes. Two Muslim women in traditional black dress walk past ancient Egyptian pyramids on their way home from the market, carrying contrasting modern and bright red plastic baskets on their heads.

In addition to photographs, the exhibit contains artifacts: a headdress from the Tibetan plateau, a hand-carved demon mask from Nepal's Himalayan Kingdom, a few textiles and tapestries from India, Bhutan and Afghanistan, a traditional Indian block-print bedsheet, and a pair of hand-carved leather shoes from India's Ladakh region.

For the most part, the pictures and objects in the gallery speak for themselves, but Clifford will speak briefly the night of the opening reception and share some anecdotes and memories that the objects and images evoke.

Clifford's worldwide travels began after college, when he took off for Australia with only an airline ticket and a backpack. While his college friends applied to law school and started working, he ventured through the outback of Australia where he found a true sense of adventure. His survival skills were tested as he headed into this desolate land; often he would not pass a town for 350 kilometers. Ensuring that he had sufficient fuel and water became paramount. But the risks were worth it, for as he went he encountered people from all over the world and they inspired him to continue exploring.

Said Clifford, "Everday was a visual overdose—I was learning something different everyday which was beyond my expectation and my imagination. I realized what a narrow view Americans have of the world—we assume that all people live and believe the way we do."

Clifford's exhibit will be on display in the AI&G's Yost Gallery until January 10. The AI&G is located at Route 50 and Lemmon Hill Lane, across from the police station, in downtown Salisbury. For more information, call 543-4748.

United Charities Campaign Nets $9,800 Wayne Decker of the Perdue School of Business was the big winner in the 1991 United Charities Campaign grand prize drawing, receiving a Sony CD player donated by the SSU Foundation. Employees who donated at least $1.50 per paycheck were eligible for the drawing. Pictured with Decker is Debbie Merryweather, co-chair of the just completed campaign.

This year 107 SSU employees donated $9,864 to Maryland charities through the campus campaign. That represents a drop of $1,700 from last year's campaign. Thanks to donations from the Book Rack and Dining Services, several other employees also received prizes in the random drawing held at the conclusion of the campaign. Other winners were: Dogan Tirtiroglu, SSU hat; Jack Bradshaw, SSU hat; Monte Bradley, SSU sweatshirt; Dr. Jim Replogle, SSU shirt; Dr. Harry Basehart, SSU photo book; Jim Brown, SSU memo pad; Joanne Keys, Christmas dinner passes at the dining hall; and Jim Berkman, Christmas dinner passes. Special thanks also go to Faye Pianka, Dr. Fran Kane and Mia Vye for making presentation to other employees in support of the campaign.

Ference Presents Paper at International Conference

Dr. Gregory Ference, assistant professor of history in the Fulton School of Liberal Arts, participated in the XXIII National Convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies recently. The international conference, the largest gathering of scholars dealing in Russian/Soviet and East European Studies on the continent, was held in Miami.

Ference presented a paper, "The Slavic Diaspora: The Slovak-American Experience," in a panel on historical development of Slavic libraries/reading rooms. Ference's talk dealt with the evolution of Slovak libraries in the United States during the first half of this century, their subsequent decline and gradual disappearance during the last 35 years. The phenomena occurred when hundreds of thousands of Slovaks immigrated to America, and then following generations assimilated after the Second World War negating the need for Slovak language materials. Other members of the panel came from the University of Illinois, Indiana University, the University of Kansas and the University of Michigan.

Ference also has been recently selected by Gale Research of Detroit to publish a 475-page book tentatively titled "A Chronicle of Twentieth Century East European History."

Gehnrich Published

Dr. Stephen Gehnrich of the Department of Biological Sciences in the Henson School of Science and Technology, was a recent co-author of an article which appeared in the Journal of Biological Chemistry.

The article, "Isolation and Characterization of the Transcriptionally Regulated Mouse Liver Phosphofructokinase Gene and Its Promoter," describes the results of research conducted with colleagues at Harvard University on the genetic regulation of enzyme function. After isolating the gene from mouse liver, they examined the regulation of the gene by hormonal and dietary changes and were able to identify several regions of the gene which are involved in the control of its expression.

Genhrich is continuing his research on the control of gene expression at SSU by studying the adaptation of fish to saltwater.

Sea Gull Sports Roundup

by Paul Ohanian

Andre Foreman poured in 26 points and all five starters registered double-figures as the Gulls defeated Western Connecticut State 102-89 last Saturday to win the championship of the Gull Classic basketball tournament. Leading 57-51 at intermission, SSU, 4-1 overall, outscored the visitors 45-38 in the second half to cement the win.

Guard Dameon Ross was named the tournament's MVP after scoring 56 points in two games. The sophomore tallied 44 points, including a new school record nine three-pointers, in Friday's 128-78 opening round win over City College of New York. Foreman and junior forward Kevin Cromer (24 points, 14 rebounds) were Salisbury's other selectees to the all-tournament squad.

The Sea Gull women's team came up a little short in its quest for the Gull Classic championship, losing 66-59 to Holy Family. SSU had defeated Neumann 78-48 in Friday's first-round contest. Guard Jen Boone scored 56 points in the two games and joined teammate Jeannie Daly (28 points, 23 rebounds) on the all-tournament squad.

The women, now 2-4 overall, are back in action on Thursday when they visit Wesley for a 7:30 p.m. game. SSU defeated the Wolverines twice last year. Salisbury faces a lengthy break following Thursday's game, not playing again until January 4, when it hosts Stockton State.

The women's swim team closes out its season this Friday at home against Marymount. The Gulls, 4-2 on the year, have been idle since December 4, when they defeated Gallaudet 109-83. Mary Jo Tantalo recorded three first-place finishes in that meet, winning the 100 breaststroke as well as the 100 and 200 individual medley. Lisa Kidd added first-place finishes in the 200 and 400 freestyle; Eileen Messenger had firsts in the 50 and 100 backstroke; and Amy Van Driessche won the 50 breaststroke. Friday's meet begins at 5 p.m.

The Sea Gull wrestlers closed out their fall semester schedule at the York College Tournament last weekend. Senior Ron Rossi was the team's top performer, winning second-place in his weight division. The Gulls are off until January 11, when they participate in the Hunter College Tournament.

Fall Sports Teams Announce Award Winners

The athletic department hosted its annual fall sports banquet on Sunday, December 8, as each of the fall teams was recognized for its achievements. Coaches of each team also announced individual award winners. The following players were honored as MVPs of their respective teams: Soccer - Kevin Darcy; Football (Offensive Player) - Pierre Copes; Football (Defensive Player) - Rick Helton; Field Hockey - Cheryl Ish; Men's Cross Country - Tim Smith; Women's Cross Country - Erin Green; Cheerleaders - Jenny White; Volleyball - Heidi Smid; Women's Tennis - Lisa Trelease.

Also, football lineman Vance Fitzgerald recieved the annual Bobby Richards Award, recognizing a member of the team who demonstrates spirit, inspiration, and courage. A second Bobby Richards Award, given just four times previously, was bestowed on Head Trainer Pat Lamboni in recognition of his dedicated service to the football team and Salisbury State University.

innovations include:
—herb gardens bordering the University Dining Hall to provide fresh spices.
—a recycling program (considered by some the best on the Eastern Shore), and the first at any state university in Maryland.
—designation of the campus as an arboretum by the American Association of Botanical Gardens and Arboreta next summer. SSU has either nurtured or planted nearly 3,000 species of plants and trees in and around its 26 buildings.

In a recession, planting bushes and trees may seem wasteful. "Fortunately, our Horticulture Department has been able to innovate largely because of its director's ability to scrounge," said Gilbert.

As SSU's new $16 million classroom building, Fulton Hall, neared completion this fall, many hedges and sod were being laid around the 85,000 square foot complex. Legally the contractor was obligated to restore grounds destroyed during construction. Not covered by the contractor, however, were nearly two dozen rare trees and other woody shrubs, from a large leaf magnolia and new species of maple, to an unusual oak, all incorporated into the landscaping. Les Lutz, SSU's horticulture director, obtained them free from North Carolina State University, where a colleague heads its horticulture major. NC State routinely donates new plants from its farm and Lutz, who has assisted the Carolina university with horticulture experiments, is on their gift list.

A 1976 graduate of Longwood Gardens' famed school, located near Wilmington, DE, Lutz attended classes with the future director of the U.S. Botanic Gardens in Washington, D.C. In the lobby of Maggs Gym are three 10-foot tall palm trees. Nine more are on display in other SSU campus buildings. Lutz estimates the palms are now worth some $3,000. They were donated to the University free by the Botanic Gardens after the SSU director gave a series of lectures to Gardens staff members in D.C. "These palms were on the steps of the U.S. Capitol three years ago," Lutz said. "But they got so big there was no room for them in the Washington conservatory during the winter. By law the U.S. gardens can't sell the plants when they get overgrown or too plentiful; gardeners have to destroy or donate them."

Longwood Gardens also has been generous to SSU. When the Guerrieri University Center opened in 1988 more than half of the plants in its atrium were donated free of charge, many from Longwood.

When Lutz and his assistant, Linda Langelo, another Longwood graduate, have to buy plants, they try to shop for the $2-$3 varieties, then transfer them to the campus nursery or greenhouse where they gain some size, and value.

This year the SSU grounds received a perfect 10 rating by state maintenance inspectors, the first ever given to a Maryland institution. Perhaps the University's Horticulture Department's greatest achievement, however, will never be seen by campus visitors: the impact it has on student workers. This fall three SSU students, who are supervised by Langelo, were invited to interview at Longwood's ornamental horticulture school. The two-year professional program has international stature and admits only 14 students every other year. It is ranked in the top three nationally and is one of the top five in the world, Lutz said. It also is one of the most competitive in its admissions.

Another SSU graduate who worked for four years as a Horticulture Department student supervisor has successfully established his own landscaping business in Salisbury.

"Nobody wants the library budget cut to buy plants," said Dr. K. Nelson Butler, SSU's vice president of academic affairs. "But if the Greek ideal of appreciation of the beautiful and the good is still a function of education, and I think it is, then attractive grounds can serve our academic mission. I think we've struck a nice balance here."

A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

JANUARY 30, 1992 VOL. XIII NO. 16

Look at Societal Problems Transcends Making Money

Business students are always eager for hands-on experience, but in one class at the Perdue School of Business that means a lesson in some of life's harsher realities.

The students who signed up for Dr. Jean Hanebury's class on Business, Society and Ethics are getting a first-hand look at some of the problems facing American educators. As a course requirement, they are volunteer tutors for at-risk students in a Wicomico County middle school. And every one of the students is sure that this is a lesson that will last a lifetime.

Hanebury designed the course and has been teaching it at SSU for three years. She began to develop the idea at another university where she heard a business student provide a new definition of the Golden Rule: "Whoever has the gold," the student said, "makes the rules." After that encounter, she began to search for a way to make high ethical standards a part of business education.

In addition to reading assigned texts and debating some of the thornier issues of the day, students in her Business, Society and Ethics class volunteer for one to two hours a week in community service. They each keep a journal reflecting what they do and what the experience means to them.

Hanebury's young business scholars are enthusiastic about the experience, and distressed by the neediness of the children they tutor.

Most of the students are tutoring at Bennett Middle School in a program called "Shore Futures." For Andrew Mengason, that means returning to his alma mater. At first, it seemed to him nothing had changed. When he found students in danger of being left back or even dropping out because of their poor reading skills, he decided he was wrong. "How did we ever get to the point," he asked in his journal, "where middle school students were not functioning on the same level? Yes, not everyone was an 'A' student, but we all learned and progressed together."

Andrew's classmates had similar reactions. Toni Benjamin noted that in many cases both parents are working, so there may not be anyone at home to work with a child on his homework or help her discover the pleasures of reading a good book. Leslie Friend found that the child she works with is eager to learn and loves to read about things that interest her. What

University Changes to 2-Year Catalogue

The next Undergraduate Catalogue, published this summer, will cover two academic years, 1992-93 and 1993-94. In prior years the Catalogue was produced annually, however, financial savings achieved by doubling the press run and printing the document every other year led to the decision to go with a two-year catalogue.

The new Catalogue will also have a new look. Slightly larger than the Catalogues produced since 1981-82, this edition will have a two-column format printed on 35 pound, ground wood paper stock. The format and paper stock changes will result in fewer pages and a lighter publication providing immediate savings in mailing costs.

For more information on the production schedule of the Catalogue, contact Dr. Florence Pritchard, associate vice president of academic affairs and chair of the Catalogue Committee, at 543-6020.

The 1992-94 Catalogue will be the first designed and typeset by the Public Relations Office.

Attention May Graduates

Commencement Exercises will be held on Saturday, May 23, at 10 a.m. in the Wicomico Youth & Civic Center. Detailed information will be mailed to graduates at a later date.

Early Retirement Seminar Offered

Employees withing five years eligibility of retirement may wish to attend a pre-retirement seminar offered by the State of Maryland on Friday, May 8, at Peninsula General Hospital Medical Center. Others are scheduled for Baltimore, Annapolis, Hagerstown and Catonsville. The seminars are filled very rapidly. For more details call 548-4755 or 543-6035.

Clep Test

The College Level Examination Program (CLEP) test will be given on Wednesday, March 18. The deadline for registration is February 18. Applications, times and location for the test are available in the Admissions Office, HH-155.

AIDS Course Offered

The AIDS Epidemic, a two-credit course, will be offered during the spring semester.

The seminar is designed for those with an interest in HIV infection and for health caregivers. A multidisciplinary approach to this societal problem will be taken. The epidemiological, psychological, sociological, ethical, economic and health care aspects of this infection will be studied.

The latest research on HIV prevention and treatment will be examined, literature that has emerged will be reviewed, and persons with HIV infection will speak. Students are expected to develop a human understanding of the suffering involved as well as a firm grasp on the scientific concepts and the health care that is necessary.

The course, The AIDS Epidemic (Nursing 515-152), will be taught by Mary Kane, R.N., M.S.N., on Tuesdays, 5:30-7:25 p.m. Interested students should contact Kane at 543-6420 or register for the course at the University.

SSU Newsletter Guidelines

The SSU News is a newsletter for the campus community published each Thursday during fall and spring semesters, unless noted. The deadline is 4 p.m. Friday.

Any story relating to the life of the campus is welcomed. Newsletter items should be typed and double-spaced.

Because stories are proofed and typeset on a first come, first served basis, don't feel you have to wait until Friday to get your article to public relations (HH 264).

Student Handbook Published

The Office of the Dean of Students has published a Student Handbook for the 1991-92 academic year. In addition to replacing separate brochures covering the Code of Conduct and a variety of policies, the handbook includes information on campus programs and services, student organizations and community resources. The handbook also features a 1991-92 calendar which includes intramural sign-up deadlines, athletic events, special events on campus and important academic deadlines.

Student Health Insurance

Evidence of health insurance is not required in order to enroll for classes at Salisbury State. Staff in the Health Center recommend that students have health insurance coverage by obtaining coverage on a parent's family policy or by contacting an insurance company of choice for information and possible enrollment in a plan.

Maintenance Mechanic

Salisbury State has an immediate opening for a maintenance mechanic in the Physical Plant. This is a full-time contractual position with no benefits and a starting salary of $16,000.

The position requires a semi-skilled worker in general building maintenance and equipment monitoring. The position is a five-day/40-hour work week to include weekends as dictated by a rotating shift work schedule. The employee will perform routine preventive maintenance and minor repair work on mechanical equipment fixtures and various building components.

The ability to read and interpret pressure and temperature gauges and maintain a written log of activities is required. Knowledge of hot water boilers is desired.

Interested applicants may apply by completing an application in the Personnel Office, Room 222, Holloway Hall, Salisbury State University. Closing date for applications is February 3.

Salisbury State University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled persons are encouraged to apply.

Research Center Moves to Power Street

The Research Center for Delmarva History and Culture has moved to new and bigger quarters at the University's Power Professional Building on Wayne and Power Streets. Directors G. Ray Thompson, Sylvia Bradley and Polly Stewart say the center will be open to the public on Monday, February 3.

The archives previously was located on the second floor of Holloway Hall in approximately 170 square feet of space. The new facility is almost five times larger and offers patrons a comfortable reading and research room, a media room for microfilm and audio-visual records of oral history, a large stacks storage area for archival materials and a conservation/preservation workroom for the staff.

The research center established in 1984 collects original and copies of primary historical material such as letters, diaries, records of vital statistics, and folklore and oral history relating to the Delmarva Peninsula. None of the materials circulate but may be used in the center Monday-Friday, 9 a.m.-4 p.m.

Operating under the auspices of the Salisbury State Foundation, the research center offers students here and elsewhere a unique opportunity to conduct primary research into Delmarva history and culture. Community residents also make use of the center's resources for the study of genealogy, legal and land records.

Educational Rights and Privacy Act

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 gives students the right to inspect and review educational records maintained by the University. Additionally, a student may request the amendment of a record that the student believes to be inaccurate, misleading or otherwise in violation of the student's privacy. Students maintain the right to consent to disclosures of personally identifiable information contained in the records of the student.

Salisbury State will assume the right, under the provisions of this act, to provide student directory information found in a student's educational record without prior consent of the student. For such purposes, directory information is defined as the student's name, address, telephone number, date and place of birth, major field of study, participation in officially recognized activities and sports, weight and height of members of the athletic teams, dates of attendance, degrees and awards received, the most recent previous educational institution attended and other similar information. In the event a student desires more or less directory information released, the student should notify the Office of the Dean of Students in room 212 of the Guerrieri University Center.

Students have the right to file any complaints about alleged failure to comply with Privacy Act requirements with the U.S. Department of Education. Copies of the SSU policy can be obtained in the Dean of Students Office.

Wastebusters Comes to SSU

The "Wastebusters" ballot campaign, providing citizens with the chance to offer suggestions on waste in state government, moves to the Guerrieri University Center from February 3-March 3.

The campaign allows people to fill out "Wastebusters" ballots and detail examples of government waste. They will be sent to Maryland Gov. William Donald Schaefer.

This represents an iniative by the Governor's Citizens Cabinet in Wicomico County to give peope a voice in state government. The ballot box will be placed in a different state agency every month. In January it was located in the lobby of the District Court/Multi-Service Center in Salisbury.

'Women in Sports' Analyzed Feb. 6

In conjunction with the national "Girls and Women in Sports Day" on Thursday, February 6, the Physical Education and Athletics Department is sponsoring a presentation of papers.

Four members of the SSU faculty, Dr. Thomas Stitcher, instructor of physical education, Dr. Stevie Chepko, associate professor of physical education, Dr. Lynne Carroll, assistant professor of psychology and Claire Katz, instructor of philosophy, will address various issues of women in sports.

The presentation will begin at 7 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center.

Alumni Sponsors Parenting Seminar

A six-week Series of Seminars for Caring Parents will be held every other Tuesday evening beginning February 4 here.

Sponsored by the SSU Alumni Association, the series focuses on enhancing relationships between caring parents and their children. Speakers have been chosen for their expertise and because they are known for their successful interactions with parents and children. Each speaker comes with ideas parents can identify with and easily put into immediate practice.

The two-hour format includes a discussion of topics by the speaker, a question and answer period, and time allotted for personal interaction between speakers and participants in small group settings.

The seminars will be held in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center from 6:30-8:30 p.m. In an effort to create a relaxed atmosphere and to meet the needs of the working parent participants, sessions will begin with a light supper period prior to the seminar presentations.

Childcare will be provided. Children will receive a light supper before enjoying games and activities planned by students of SSU's Education Club.

Speakers and their topics include: Dr. Robert McBrien, director of SSU Counseling Center, "Keeping 'Desert Storm' Out of the House and Maintaining Peace on the Homefront," February 4; Dr. Adeline Tryon, SSU Psychology Department, "How To Talk So Your Kids Will Listen and How To Listen So Your Kids Will Talk," February 18; Dr. Carolyn Bowden, SSU Education Department, "More Isn't Necessarily Better" or "What Kids Call Quality Time," March 3; Tryon, "When Roles Change: Dealing With Parental Transitions," March 17; panel discussion involving area public school teachers, "Everything You Wanted To Ask the Teacher But Were Afraid To Ask," March 31; and panel discussion involving public school counselors, "Riding the Rollercoaster: Hardly—The Emotional Stressors in Kids' Lives," April 14.

Cost for the series is $35 per parent and $15 per child for childcare. Deadline to register if Friday, January 31. To register or for more information call the Alumni Relations Office at 543-6042.

The Salisbury State chapter of the national honor society of Phi Kappa Phi is preparing for its annual initiation of new members. The society is interdisciplinary, drawing from all departments within the University.

The purpose of Phi Kappa Phi is to recognize and encourage superior scholarship in all academic disciplines. The society hopes that by recognizing and honoring those persons who have excelled in scholarship in all fields, it will stimulate others to strive for excellence.

Members are elected from the top 5 percent of the senior class, and all candidates who are seniors must have a GPA of least 3.6.

Juniors with GPAs of at least 3.85 also are eligible for consideration for membership by the society.

Those students interested in being considered for membership in Phi Kappa Phi should contact Dr. Augustine DiGiovanna in the Biology Department, Devilbiss Hall, room 114, 543-6488 or 543-6490 by February 21.

Sea Gull Sports Roundup

by Paul Ohanian

As the start of the spring semester approaches, one Sea Gull basketball team hopes that things remain as status quo while the other Gull squad is hoping for a fresh start. Through January 24, the men's squad stands 13-1 on the year, with a 12-game winning streak and a ranking of eighth in the national Division III poll. The women's team is 3-7 with just one win in its last five games and its second-leading scorer sidelined with a knee injury.

Coach Ward Lambert's men's team has completed its best first-half of the season in school history. In addition to their highest ranking ever in the national poll, the Gulls lead the country in scoring with a 101.1 per game average. All-America forward Andre Foreman is sixth nationally in scoring with his 26.4 average, and sophomore guard Dameon Ross stands 15th at 23.7 ppg. Senior Jamie Gosweiler is fast approaching the 1,000 career points plateau, and point guard Bret Grebowsky leads the conference in assists with 5.9 per contest.

The Gulls have also benefitted from solid depth this season. Junior forward Ed Farrell is scoring 7.5 ppg while averaging 17 minutes/contest. His 15 points and seven of eight free throws off-the-bench helped key last week's 90-80 win over nationally-ranked Glassboro State. Joe Zdrojewski is adding 6.5 points and 4.7 rebounds while averaging 16 minutes per game, and Tom Wolfe and freshman Clarence Jarrett have been valuable backcourt performers.

Unfortunately, depth has not been as positive a factor for the women's team thus far. Since senior Jeannie Daly went down with a knee injury against Stockton State on January 4, the Gulls have been unable to find a consistent scorer to compliment junior guard Jen Boone's 27.3 ppg. While Boone is third in the nation in scoring, no other Gull (other than the injured Daly) is scoring over 7.4 points per game.

Freshmen Amy Fenzel and Kim Roth have been impressive as rebounders however, with both players collecting over 10.5 caroms per game. Fellow frosh Chris Politz also made an impressive debut in her first collegiate start on January 22 as she blocked four Virginia Wesleyan shots in the first five minutes of play.

Meanwhile, the wrestling team continues to work hard in its final varsity campaign. SSU hosts its only home meet of the year on Saturday when it welcomes Delaware State and Glassboro State. Sam Gardner (158 pounds), Andy Ryan (177) and Jeff Hake (190) are Gulls to keep an eye on.

Scholarship Fund Leads to New Major

What started out as a memorial to a longtime friend and colleague by the Tidewater Environmental Health Association helped in the establishment of the first environmental health major at a university in Maryland.

"It is rare that a scholarship leads to the founding of an academic major at a University, but that is what happened here," said Dr. Phillip Creighton, dean of the Henson School of Science and Technology.

In 1987 the Tidewater Environmental Health Association (TEHA), whose members are environmental health professionals from throughout the Eastern Shore, established a scholarship in memory of Wallace Q. French, an SSU alumnus. An SSU biology professor, Dr. John Molenda, knew of the local health community's need for well-trained professionals, and with their assistance began developing proposals for an environmental health major.

In granting approval to Molenda's proposal for the new major, which started at SSU this fall, the Maryland Higher Education Commission (MHEC) cited the strong local support by the environmental health community as demonstrated by the French scholarship.

"By beginning the environmental health scholarship, they (TEHA) helped the University development a new major," Creighton said.

TEHA has contributed some $35,000 to the scholarship fund, which is financed by TEHA's annual Wallace Q. French Golf Tournament. Calvin L. Massey, III, division chief for Environmental Control at the Wicomico County Health Department and this year's tournament director, recently presented $5,000, the latest tournament profits, to Creighton on behalf of the scholarship.

TEHA has awarded two scholarships to Eastern Shore residents. The first has gone to Catherine E. Stokes, 20, a senior biology major from Wachapreague, VA. During summers she has worked at Virginia Tech's Eastern Shore Agricultural Experiment Station in insect pest research. After receiving her baccalaureate in biology she will remain at SSU to pursue a degree in environmental health.

For Amanda Jenkins, 20, a junior chemistry major from Salisbury, environmental health became an issue following a canoe trip down the Wicomico River when she was 13-years-old. "I wanted to devote my life to the study of research into how to clean up the world," she said.

Each scholarship is worth up to $2,000 over four semesters.

"I think TEHA has achieved something remarkable," said Judy Pielemeier, director of Alumni Relations, who first advised the group on establishing the golf tournament. For more information on the Wallace French Environmental Health Scholarship, contact Molenda at 543-6363.

Rubin Gives Presentation

How community service by students can directly relate to the academic mission of a college and to the development of a strong, vital campus community is the subject of a presentation by Dr. Sharon Rubin for the annual meeting of the Association of American Colleges (AAC) in January.

Rubin is dean of the Fulton School of Liberal Arts. She also is past president of the National Society for Internships and Experiential Education, a national organization that advocates community service and other forms of learning by doing.

For three quarters of a century the AAC has been recognized as a national voice in learning. It publishes the distinguised journal, Liberal Education. Membership includes 635 public and private colleges and universities.

This year's conference in Washington, D.C., will focus on multiculturalism. Titled "Recentering," it is designed to allow partipants the opportunity to explores the challenges of pluralism at home and abroad.

Henson School Gets $182,000 Math Grant

The Henson School of Science and Technology has received a $182,000 two-year research grant from the National Science Foundation (NSF). This grant will be used to fund the development of an experimental precalculus class that will be offered at the University this spring.

"This is the biggest grant that anyone in the Henson School has ever received," said Dr. Ben Fusaro, a professor in the Department of Math and Computer Science and director of the project. "Only five grants of this type were awarded throughout the country. SSU received one of them because of its focus on algebra and trigonometry."

Fusaro said there is a "great deal of time, money and energy" being spent on calculus. "Everybody is talking about calculus. When we decided to focus our research on precalculus, we really got some attention."

It is the intention of Fusaro and Dr. Sheldon Gordon, a mathematics professor from Suffolk Community College in Long Island who helped Fusaro write the grant proposal, to emphasize the quality of learning and not the quantity.

When Fusaro joined the SSU faculty in 1974, he had a predetermined amount of information that he had to cover in each course each semester. The new experimental freshman course, Mathematical Applications in the Modern World: A Math Modeling Alternative to Precalculus, will focus on how well students learn not how much.

"I want to cover the basics. Instead of rushing the students through all of the assigned course material, I want to focus on the fundamentals of algebra and trigonometry. It's time to concentrate on the essential hardware needed for math."

The experimental course will emphasize qualitative, visual and computational skills. Students will learn how to estimate the answer to a problem by looking at it and using basic common sense techniques.

"I want to provide students with different approaches to solving problems. In my experiences," Fusaro said, "I have found that students are very weak in visual skills. They aren't being taught how to use graphs and pictures to help them solve problems."

Fusaro wants to move away from equations in this particular course and teach students how to apply basic mathematical knowledge.

Team activities and hand-held calculators with graphic capabilities will also be used to solve the more involved problems. "I want my students to fully understand precalculus. This class will allow me the flexibility of using different teaching options to reach this goal," he said.

Dr. Phillip Creighton, dean of the Henson School, applauds Fusaro's efforts to change the way precalculus is taught.

"Right now we are facing a problem in regard to the increasing number of students who are dropping out of the math field after taking precalculus. Ben is trying to keep students involved by making math relevant to everyone," Creighton said. "He is focusing on modeling, not just the memorization of formulas. This project is consistent with Ben's outstanding reputation and the course is compatible with the Henson School's approach to experiment with innovative teaching techniques."

A committee of seven mathematical experts will assist Fusaro in the curriculum preparation for the course. "I know the NSF is expecting a lot from our group. They would like us to give them a set of notes that could be used by other mathematics teachers. I hope that a new textbook will also evolve from the course.

"I think this is a pretty prosaic project," Fusaro said. "Right now we are working in a quiet mathematical niche, but our research could lead to a lot of changes in how math is taught. It will be exciting to see what happens."

Dawn Kent

Math Student Presents Project to National Group

Dawn Kent, a graduating senior in the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science, recently presented the results from her undergraduate research project to the SSU student chapter of the Mathematical Association of America. Kent studied time series analysis under the directon of Dr. Homer W. Austin, professor of mathematics and computer science.

Kent, daughter of Ronald and Mary Ellen Kent of Glen Burnie, is a graduate of Glen Burnie Senior High School.

Time series are used extensively in areas where measurements collected over time are used to predict the future. Therefore, the use of time series analysis in business, economics, medicine and government is pervasive. As a small part of her study Kent considered Scholastic Aptitute Test scores at SSU from 1976 to the present to see if there were any patterns in the data for analysis.

As a time series, the trend seems clear that the average SAT score at SSU is increasing at a time when Maryland and National SAT scores are remaining fairly constant. If the future at SSU is in anyway explained by the patterns in the data, it seems clear that the average SAT score will continue to improve. "Of course, differences which occur in the national and Maryland patterns, as well as local admissions policies, could alter substantailly the predictions given in Kent's study," said Austin. "Hence, the old advice on prediction still holds—that is, if you predict the future, predict often."

McAuliffe Scholarship

The Christa McAuliffe Scholarship Foundation has established an endowment for teacher education to honor the ideals of teacher-astronaut Christa McAuliffe. Awards will be $1,000.

Applicants must be residents of Maryland enrolled in an accredited program leading to teacher certification in a Maryland college or university. The awardee must agree to teach one year in Maryland public schools for each scholarship grant received.

Applications, which must be postmarked by March 1, are available in the Financial Aid Office, Holloway Hall, room 243.

Ecology Workshop Scholarships Available

The Maryland Ornithology Society (MOS) is now accepting applications from Maryland teachers and youth leaders for five scholarships to attend summer ecology workshops which the National Audubon Society holds at its camps in Maine, Connecticut and Wyoming.

Each grant covers the cost of tuition, room and board for one week of field study and instruction in ecology, conservation and natural history. These scholarships are funded by the MOS, by the World Nature Association, and by Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Cotton.

The MOS is also accepting applications from Maryland teachers and youth leaders for two scholarships for a week of study in ornithology at the Audubon summer workshop in Maine. These scholarships are funded by the MOS.

Although any person over 18 years of age may pay tutition and attend a National Audubon Camp, the MOS requires that its scholarship recipients be those who work with young people. This includes teachers, camp counselors, club officials specializing in youth work, students and others who are planning to make nature education a part of their careers.

Applicants need not be members of MOS but each must be endorsed by a chapter or member of MOS. The application consists of a written statement from the candidate showing in what manner the Audubon experience will be used to help develop in young people an appreciation of the U.S.'s wild heritage and a sense of responsibility for the care of natural resources and for the quality of the environment. Two or more letters from individuals who know of the candidates' interest and activities are requested.

Applicants wishing to be endorsed by the Wicomico Chapter of MOS must complete an application by February 5. There is some flexibility on the deadline so please notify Linda Cashman, Wicomico Scholarship chair at 543-6025 (day) or 749-2804 (evening) if you wish to apply but can't make the deadline.

Brochures can be obtained from the Registrar, Audubon Camps and Workshops, 613 Riversville Road, Greenwich, CT 06831.

Applications and letters of recommendation are to be sent to Linda Cashman, Rt. 1, Box 105, Salisbury, MD 21801. Winning candidates will be selected by the statewide MOS Schlorship Committee, and will be notified of results in March.

Economic Forum Initiated on Friday

The Perdue School of Business is inaugurating the Economic Forum by holding panel discussions on the regional impact and outlook resulting from the new anti-recession measures of the federal government. The forum will be held on Friday, January 31, from 8:30 a.m.-noon in the Social Room of Holloway Hall.

Each of the three economic professors from the Department of Economics and Finance at SSU will be presenting their reports which will be followed by discussion. Among others, Maryland's Department of Economic and Employment (DEED) will be represented by the director of research. Outlook of the region's economy will be explored by Gerald Truitt, executive director of Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc., and others. The forum has been organized by Dr. Abdul G. Khan, visiting professor of economics in the Perdue School.

For more information or to register call Renee Stephens at 546-4325 at the Perdue School. Documents will be available at the forum. There is a registration fee of $35. Make checks payable to the Perdue Center for Professional Development at Salisbury State.

Fusaro Published

"The lack of enthusiasm among students for engineering careers can be traced to the way math is taught in secondary schools," began a recent article in Design News, a prominent engineering journal.

"The New Math almost wrecked things," said Dr. Ben Fusaro, professor of mathematics, who was interviewed by the journal. "By emphasizing the abstract over the practical, math teachers take the excitement out of their subject," the article said. "Originally calculus was used as sort of a springboard to fields like engineering," Fusaro continued. "Now it is more of a roadblock." Result? Students drift into other fields.

Fusaro was interviewed at the International Conference of Industrial and Applied Mathematics in Washington, D.C., and according to Design News his was the prevailing opinion at the session.

To help counter this trend, the SSU math professor has been introducing students to the pleasures of practical or applied mathematics. He is founder of the Mathematical Contest in Modeling (MCM), a competition which has gained national stature. Last year 260 undergraduate teams from universities and colleges across the country participated.

Citing Fusaro for his work with the competition, the fall issue of UMAP, The Journal of Undergraduate Mathematics and Its Applications, began with a full page editorial and picture of Fusaro, lauding him for his efforts.

Last month the SSU mathematician was one of two main speakers at the seventh annual symposium for Florida public school administrators held in Jacksonville. His address, "The Qualitative, the Visual and Modeling" was designed to help administrators plan training sessions for their math teachers.

Brent Arts Scholarship

Applications for the Herbert D. Brent Arts Scholarship are available for the 1992-93 academic year.

Applicants must be residents of Worcester, Wicomico or Somerset counties or attend Salisbury State or the University of Maryland Eastern Shore. The scholarship is awarded to high school seniors or college students majoring in an arts field.

Contact the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council at 543-2787 for application guidelines and forms. The application deadline is March 20.

Financial Aid Forms

Financial Aid Forms for the 1992-93 academic year are available in the Financial Aid Office. The Salisbury State Financial Aid Form, as well as the analysis from the College Scholarship Service, must be in the Financial Aid Office by March 1 for priority funding.

Since it takes The College Scholarship Service approximately five weeks to process an FAF, it is important that it be completed immediately. Students who are planning to apply for a Stafford Student Loan must also complete the FAF.

Patsy Somers Moves to CPPD

Patsy Somers, Dr. Bellavance's secretary for the past four years, has accepted a new position in the Center for Personal and Professional Development on the second floor of the Guerrieri University Center.

Effective February 3, Mia Vye will assume additional responsibilities and will serve both the Office of the President and the Office of the Vice President of Administration.

Cycling Club Spring Break Trip

The SSU Cycling Club will hold an interest meeting and sign-up for its 1992 spring break cycling tour. The meeting is in the Pocomoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center on Monday, February 10, at 8 p.m.

This year's event will follow the Natchez Trace Parkway which has its northern terminus just south of Nashville, TN, passes through a portion of Alabama and continues through Mississippi until it reaches the southern terminus at Natchez, MS.

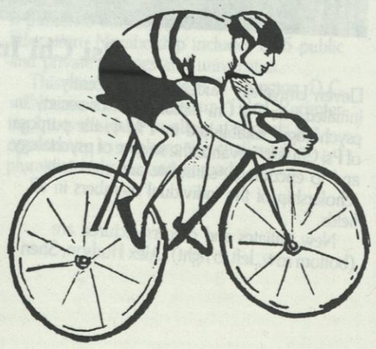
The bicycling on the 428-mile Parkway, which is a two-lane road that is gently graded and winds among rolling hills, is sometimes isolated from the surrounding countryside by a virtual wall of trees and at other times passes through fields and meadows. There is a 50-mile-per-hour speed limit on the Parkway, which is restricted from commercial traffic. The riding conditions on the Parkway are described as excellent and as bicyclists' paradise by Bikecentennial magazine.

Meals will generally be prepared by the participants and tent camping in state parks and in private campgrounds will be the standard for the trip. However, a bed and breakfast will accommodate the group in Natchez and eating out on the banks of the Mississippi, enjoying catfish and hush puppies, will be another highlight of the trip.

Of course the trip wouldn't be complete without a visit to the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville; there will be other side trips of interest along the route.

Departure for the spring break trip will be at 5 p.m. on Friday, March 20, with a return to campus on Saturday, March 28. The cost of the trip is $175 which includes transportation, meals, lodging and the Grand Ole Opry. The trip is subsidized by the SSU Cycling Club income from its Sea Gull Century ride.

A $50 non-refundable deposit may be made at the interest meeting on Monday, February 10, and the reamining $125 will be due on Monday, March 16. The trip will be restricted to 16 participants on a first-come, first-served basis.



Linda Humes

Female Vocalist Opens Black History Month

Vocalist Linda Humes performs in concert on Saturday, February 8, at 7:30 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium. Humes' show, "Spirit, Black and Female: A Tribute to African-American Womanhood," is the initial program for SSU's African-American History Month Celebration. It is free and open to the public.

Humes calls her show a "choreopoem" compiled of poems and monologues with song and dance. The show presents works from some of the most important playwrights and poets of our time. Pieces by Margaret Walker, Sam Art Williams, Douglas Turner Ward, Nikki Giovanni and Ntozake Shange are skillfully interwoven in an exciting dramatic endeavor. "Spirit, Black and Female" takes listeners on an historical journey examining black womanhood from ancient Africa to the present. According to Vaughn White, SSU coordinator for minority programming, "Humes' concert conveys a monumental message about black heritage in an entertaining and universal way. This performance is a continuing effort by the Office of Minority Affairs to provide positive and relevant programming which appeals to not only the campus but the lower Eastern Shore community at large."

Humes has appeared in over 100 feature and industrial films, including Francis Ford Coppola's "Cotton Club." Her stage credits include "Home at the Van Wezels" in Sarasota, FL, "Wine in the Wilderness" at the News Day Repertory Company in New York and "Antigone" at the 13th Street Playhouse also in New York.

For more information, on the Humes' concert and other SSU African American History Month Celebrations, please contact White at 548-4503.

Film Video Exhibit Opens Atrium Gallery's Spring Season

"Visions: The AMAMA Traveling Film and Video Program" opens the Atrium Gallery's spring season on Thursday, February 6. The gallery is located in the Guerrieri University Center next to the bookstore.

The program is a touring exhibition of media art works created by members of the Association of Maryland Area Media Artists, Inc. AMAMA is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to advance understanding and appreciation of the media arts. Video and film works chosen for the show represent the broad range and diversity of topic concerns and production styles demonstrated by independent producers who reside and work in the Maryland, Washington, D.C. and northern Virginia area. Documentary, narrative, experimental, animation and combinations of media work will be exhibited.

"Visions" contains selections chosen by a jury. Artists represented are Dan Bailey of Glyndon, MD, Gina Gilberto of Glen Burnie, MD, Matt Dibble of Arlington, VA, Vin Graybill of Catonsville, MD, Christine Graham of Highland, MD, Virginia Quesada of Cabin John, MD, and Steve Weiss, Laura Stafford and Monica Wittig, all of Baltimore. In addition to Salisbury State the program will travel to Montgomery College, the University of Maryland Baltimore County Fine Arts Gallery and the Montpelier Cultural Arts Center.

"Visions" is sponsored in part by a grant from the Maryland State Arts Council with additional support from the Peabody Court Hotel in Baltimore.

The video works will be on display in the Atrium Gallery at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. daily from February 6-26. The film screening will take place in Nanticoke Room A of the Guerrieri Center on Monday, February 17, at 7 p.m. Some of the artists whose works are on view will hold a panel discussion immediately following the screening. Both the video and the film screening are free and open to the public. For further information call the Guerrieri Center Office at 543-6100.

Army Field Band Performs Here Feb. 13

The internationally acclaimed United States Army Field Band and Soldiers' Chorus will perform on Thursday, February 13, at 8 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

Known as the "Musical Ambassadors of the Army," the band has performed throughout Europe, the Far East, and Central and South Americas as well as all 50 states.

Although admission to the concert is free, cash contributions for the Capital Fund Drive, Phase III, of the Maryland Food Bank will be gratefully accepted. Each dollar collected will be matched by the Abell Foundation. Checks should be made out to the Maryland Food Bank.

Unique among military bands, the Army Field Band performs music appealing to all age groups and spanning the musical spectrum from classics to pop. Its members are selected by personal audition and many have studied at the country's leading conservatories and schools of music. The Field Band has a distinguished history. It has performed in the Royal Festival Hall in London, Luxembourg Gardens in Paris, the Olympia Stadium in Berlin, the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., the Hollywood Bowl and New York's Carneigie Hall, where it was the first military band to present a full-dress concert.

Traveling thousands of miles every year, band members have a reputation as being among the best touring musicians in the country.

Tickets to the concert are available beginning Monday, February 3, at Salisbury State's Guerrieri University Center information desk, SSU ROTC Detachment, the Daily Times reception desk and the U.S. Army Recruiting Center at the Twilley Shopping Center. For more information about the concert or food bank donations, contact the Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

she needed was someone to take the time to do those things with her.

At mid-term, the students are already drawing conclusions about their own roles in the future of education. As Toni Benjamin pointed out, "The education system needs volunteers to be right there with the kids."

Bennett Middle School principal Stephenson Matthes is thrilled to see his students getting the moral support they need. "The college students become positive role models," he said. "Where can you get someone 18 or 20 years old who will spend time with kids?"

Matthes points out that it is difficult for a teacher to give a child this kind of one-to-one assistance without drawing attention to the child's needs. For middle school children, being different means being weird. Yet the personal touch is exactly what the children crave. Some of the students being tutored have shown poor attendance in the past. "But when the students know their tutor is coming over," said Matthes, "they make sure they're there."

The choices for community service are not limited to tutoring, either. Some students visit nursing homes—perhaps the one place where personal attention is even more highly valued. And the visits don't necessarily end when the semester does. Hanebury reports that one year, out of 35 students, five had continued weekly nursing home visits six months after the course had ended.

One of the biggest fans of the class is probably Dr. Richard Bebee, dean of the Perdue School of Business. "This kind of community involvement by college students should be part of their educational experience in preparing for a successful business career," he said.

"We are concerned about societal problems, not just learning how to make money."

Bebee points out that the benefits of learning by doing have long been recognized. "And getting involved in the community is an important part of what they need to learn," he added.

Bebee would have been very happy to hear the class discuss their experiences as tutors. Eric Weaver's classmates nodded in agreement with his conclusion: "It's the ethical responsibility of business to help shoulder a lot of the problems."

New Scholarship For Med Tech Majors

In recognition of the quality of SSU medical technology graduates, the Clinical Laboratory Managers Association of Maryland has established a $1,000 per year scholarship for an outstanding junior or senior medical technolgoy major. In order to qualify, applicants must be admitted to the Medical Technology Program and must have at least a 3.0 GPA.

The Scholarship Committee will select the candidate based on the most deserving combination of financial need, aptitude for the profession and academic ability. Individuals who are interested and are qualified should contact Diane Hayes, Power Professional Building, room 256, 548-4787 for an application and recommendation forms. Applications must be submitted no later than May 1. All qualified medical technology majors are urged to apply.

Tirtiroglu Published

Dr. Dogan Tirtiroglu, assistant professor of finance in the Perdue School of Business, recently had a paper accepted for publication in a professional journal. "Housing Price Indices Based on All Transactions Compared to Repeat Subsamples," co-authored with John Clapp and Carmelo Giaccotto, will appear in a forthcoming issue of Areuea Journal.

Tirtiroglu will present "An Examination of Market Efficiency in Housing Markets from a Time-Space Modeling Perspective" at the annual meeting of American Real Estate and Urban Economic Association in January 1992.

Additionally, Tirtiroglu attended the Financial Management Association annual meetings in Chicago in October and discussed the paper, "Index-Linked GILT Prices and Inflation Information."

Singers Needed

Interested in singing with the SSU Choir (MUSA 100-001) during the spring semester? Tenors and basses are needed. Singers receive one academic credit per semester and rehearse on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 3:30-5 p.m. in Fulton Hall, room 130.

The spring semester will include Brahms' "German Requiem." The "Requiem" will be a collaborative effort combining the Salisbury Choral Society, the SSU Choir and the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra. Call 543-6385 for more details.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

FEBRUARY 6, 1992 VOL. XIII NO. 17

'Twain' Revival Has Valentine's Date

A tribute to Mark Twain by the Communication Arts Department which charmed audiences last spring, is being revived for Valentine's Day.

This one-hour tribute to the quintessential American humorist will be performed at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, February 14-15, in Caruthers Hall Auditorium. Admission is free is SSU students, faculty and staff.

Titled "Lies, Laughs and a Lynchin': An Evening With Mark Twain," it is performed by R.J. Wesley, SSU professor of communication arts. For this revival Wesley is adding Twain ancedotes and remarks not in last spring's production. Selections are from such classic Twain works as "Huckleberry Finn," and the popular collections of travel stories, "A Tramp Abroad" and "The Innocents Abroad."

Wesley recreates the celebrated author in the 70th year of his life during a lecture tour. Twain was a prolific writer and one-time newspaperman who during much of his lifetime (1835-1910) took to the lecture circuit to raise money. According to critical reviews of the era, he was an extremely popular if unorthodox orator. He used a distinctly American drawl and lounged about the stage with a variety of gestures and mannerisms, all to maximum comic effect. And he communicated in a vernacular that is still accessible a century later.

Black History Month Program Varied

From a seminar on relationships between black men and women to a study of Marcus Garvey, the seminal political leader early in this century, SSU celebrates February as African-American History Month. In between is a "Soul Food" supper with live jazz.

Celebrations begin Saturday, February 8 at 7:30 p.m., in Holloway Hall Auditorium with a concert by Linda Humes. Her one-woman show is titled "Spirit, Black and Female: A Tribute to African-American Womanhood."

Then on Monday, February 17, Dr. Clara Small, assistant professor of history, will give the inaugural address in a three part lecture series by SSU faculty titled, "The Role of Black Women in History." Her talk is at 7:30 p.m. in the Guerrieri University Center's Wicomico Room.

On Wednesday, February 19, the annual Soul Food Dinner will be held at the Ruth Powell Dining Hall from 4-6 p.m. This popular supper traditionally includes fried chicken, chitterlings, pigs feet, fish and cornbread. It will feature live music by Scotty and Friends, a classic jazz quintet from Rehoboth Beach, DE.

Later that evening at 7:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium, Dr. Cyril Daddieh, assistant professor of political science, will speak on "Education, Politics and the Future of Africa." He was born in Ghana on the west African coast.

Monday, February 24, Dr. Brennan Taylor, assistant professor of social work, will lecture on "Garveyism versus Communism—An African Trilogy 1916-1927." His talk, also is at 7:30 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri Center.

Concluding the month long celebration is Dennis R. Watson, executive director of the National Black Student Leadership Council, whose headquarters is in New York. He will conduct a seminar focusing on the relationship between young black men and women on college campuses. The seminar is titled, "Black Love in the Afternoon." It is at 3:30 p.m. in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri Center on Wednesday, February 26.

Except for the supper, admissions to all presentations are free and the public is cordially invited. For more information on the supper call University Dining Services at 543-6105. For additional information about the series contact Vaughn White, SSU coordinator for minority programming, at 543-4503.

Children's Lit Conference Here February 21, 22

Jon Scieszka, author of "The True Story of the Three Little Pigs," will speak at the kickoff dinner for the second annual Children's Literature Conference presented by the Education Department.

The conference, on February 21 and 22, will feature prominent educators, authors, illustrators and teachers who will share their methods of incorporating books into the curricula. Dr. Barbara Townsend Schultz, associate professor of education at Salisbury State, and JoAnne Mulcahy, first grade teacher at Showell Elementary School and adjunct teacher of children's literature at Salisbury State, are planning and coordinating the two days of activities.

The conference will begin with a "pig out" dinner in honor of the three little pigs at 6 p.m., Friday, February 21, in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri University Center. Scieszka, the speaker, has three very popular books in addition to "The True Story of the Three Little Pigs"; they are "The Frog Prince Continued," "Knights of the Kitchen Table" and "The Not-So-Jolly Roger." He is on leave from his teaching position at The Day School of Manhattan.

The Saturday session, from 8 a.m.-1 p.m. in Holloway Hall, will have two general sessions. The speaker for the morning session is Dr. Virginia Arnold, author of the "Connections" series which is used in the Wicomico County schools and in many other schools throughout the country. The series of books is produced by Macmillan/McGraw Hill.

Chipman Center Exhibits At University Center

As part of the commemoration of Black History Month the Guerrieri University Center will host an exhibit featuring the work of the Chipman Foundation, February 11-24.

The Chipman Foundation is a non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of the former John Wesley A.M.E. Church in Salisbury as the Charles H. Chipman Cultural Center. The new Chipman Center will honor the life and accomplishments of local black civic leader, educator and humanitarian Charles H. Chipman and his wife, Jeanette P. Chipman.

The Chipman Cultural Center will provide the lower Eastern Shore with a regional visual and performing arts center as well as offer Salisbury's downtown business and professional community a meeting and reception center. The Chipman Foundation plans to continue the educational vision of Dr. and Mrs. Chipman by offering arts and dramatic educational programs for the young people of the community.

The Chipman Cultural Center will house the Eastern Shore's only living black history museum, with a permanent exhibit of the life and contributions of black men and women in Salisbury and Wicomico County over the past two centuries. The former John Wesley Church is the oldest black church on the Eastern Shore and the oldest site of a school for the education of black children. The congregation was organized in 1837 and by the beginning of this century all black churches could trace their roots to the John Wesley church. Services continue today in a new expanded facility, the Wesley Temple, on West Road.

The exhibit at the Guerrieri Center, in the area of the main lounge, will trace the Chipman Foundation's efforts to restore and transform the John Wesley Church into the Chipman Cultural Center. Also featured will be the Foundation's plans for the use of the Chipman Center. To date, the Chipman Foundation has raised $125,000 toward a goal of $150,000 which was established by the State of Maryland for receipt of matching funds. These combined funds will be applied toward a total restoration bill of approximately $425,000. The Chipman Cultural Center is expected to open in 1993.

Arts Scholarships Offered to Students

Applications are now being accepted for the 1992-93 Herbert D. Brent Arts Scholarships, which are offered to high school seniors or current college students who show promise in the arts, either visual, performing, media or written. Deadline for application receipt is Friday, March 20, at 5 p.m.

Up to three students will be awarded the $500 scholarships; decisions are based on written applications, personal interviews, and either a portfolio or audition.

The Brent Arts Scholarship Fund was established by the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council in 1982 in memory of local arts patron Herbert D. Brent. Last year, management of the fund was transferred to the Community Foundation of the Eastern Shore, and the scholarships are awarded by SWAC based on the decisions of a panel of judges.

To be eligible for the award, a student must be a legal resident of Worcester, Wicomico, or Somerset County who will be attending an accredited college in 1992-93, or else be a freshman, sophomore or junior currently enrolled at Salisbury State or the University of Maryland Eastern Shore.

Scholarship guidelines and applications are available at the office of the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center, or call SWAC at 543-ARTS.

CPPD Staff Changes

The Center for Personal and Professional Development is pleased to welcome two new people to its office staff. Patsy Somers, who served as secretary to Dr. Bellavance for four years, has joined the staff as administrative aide. Prior to her post in the President's office, Somers worked for two years at Eastern Correctional Institute and eight years in SSU's Office of Institutional Research. Somers replaces Katrina Grogan.

Patti Selig, who worked part time as a counselor in the CPPD last spring, has been appointed as a full-time counselor. She replaces Joe Andrade who left SSU in December to further his career elsewhere. Selig earned her B.A. in psychology from George Washington University and her M.Ed. in guidance and counseling from SSU. Previously she served for three years as director of counseling at Wor-Wic Tech Community College and one year as director of Wor-Wic Tech's STEP-Two program for displaced homemakers. Selig has also served as an instructor in psychology at Wor-Wic Tech.

Committee To Deal With Feline Influx

Perhaps you've noticed that the cat population on our campus has been increasing at an exponential rate and this alarming growth rate requires that the University now deal with the issue.

As an enlightened community, we are committed to ethical and humane treatment of all beings, human and otherwise, and wish to invite kindred spirits to assist in controlling and resolving the situation. Because of her interest, I have asked Mia Vye to coordinate the efforts of this committee. Anyone interested in helping please contact Mia in the President's office, Holloway Hall, Room 237, or call 543-6012.

The committee will attempt to find homes for as many of these wild cats as possible, will assist in catching and having the strays neutered and will generally attempt to keep the cat population controlled. Individuals wishing to make donations for having the animals spayed or neutered and getting their appropriate vaccinations, or who are interested in providing homes are also welcome to contact Vye regarding these issues.

We hope there will be enough interest on behalf of the University community to assist in these efforts because if not, the alternative is not pleasant. It will involve trapping the animals and turning them over to the Humane Society of Wicomico County where many of them would be euthanized.

To date, 17 of these animals have been captured humanely, and homes have been found for all of them. Although the cats act "wild" now, they really are intelligent, easily trainable, very loving, beautiful and clean. They just require someone who cares.

Salisbury Festival Design Competition

The Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council has announced a call for entries in its second annual Salisbury Festival Design Competition. This year's winning designer will receive $1,000, and the chosen image will be used as the Festival's commemorative poster and T-shirt design. Deadline for entries is Friday, February 28, at 5 p.m.

"The fact that 1992 marks the 10th year of the festival," said Jack Stovall, chair of SWAC's Festival Design Committee, "though not required to be used in the design, will lend itself to some interesting and exciting images. We're hoping to see more of what we saw last year—that is, vibrant graphics which capture the essence of Wicomico County and the Salisbury Festival."

In 1991, during the competition's inaugural year, 103 graphic designers from throughout Maryland, Delaware and Pennsylvania entered the contest. Winner of that event was Bob Helsley, a Baltimore designer and partner in Design, Inc. who will serve this year as a judge in the competition.

Designs must be in two colors; through the use of screens, a designer may make any combination of those colors he or she wishes, but screens are limited to a maximum of five. The comprehensive that is submitted must be 18"x24", on one side only, and must be mounted on a 1/16 inch flat white matte board that measures 20"x26".

No signature or personal identification of any kind is allowed on the front of the entry. A completed entry form must be attached to the back of the poster.

The selection panel will choose the winner by March 15, and an exhibit of entries in the competition will be open to the public from April 16-30.

Among the corporations who have already committed to sponsoring the competition are Arby's, Wyatt Wholesale and Pepsi-Cola Bottling.

For a copy of the official guidelines and entry blank, call SWAC at 543-2787.

Additionally, Shipper's article, "A Group Simulation Leader's Guide: The Impact of Managerial Competencies on Employee Commitment and Performance," was included in the 1991 Clark Wilson Publishing Company's publication.

Athletic Training Program Demanding, Rewarding and One of East's Best

A typical day for six Salisbury State students might include taping ankles, fitting equipment, doing flexibility exercises with athletes, giving out information on nutrition or going to the hospital to check on an injured player.

These six seniors are completing their degrees in the athletic training track of the physical education program. In order to graduate, they must complete 1,500 hours in sports medicine, which includes their internships at participating area high schools.

Students start their practicums in August before preseason sports begin and continue throughout the entire school year, covering all team sports events in addition to traveling to away games with the football teams.

They are responsible for the prevention, care, treatment and rehabilitation of all athletic injuries which might occur at any of the high schools' athletic events. Since the majority of injuries happen during practices and not at the games, they cover all practices as well.

"I usually put in about 25-40 hours a week not counting my class work," said Kimberly Bauer, a senior from Pasadena. "As an athletic trainer you also have to help students get ready for practices and games, follow up on any injuries, and there is a tremendous amount of paper work that goes along with the job."

"During the preseason, students cover an average of two practices a day, five to six days a week, in addition to their other responsibilities," said Mary Ann Fardelmann, SSU athletic training supervisor. "For example, student trainers fit equipment for the football players, checking helmets to make sure that air is allowed to flow through and making sure that shoulder pads are fitted properly.

"They also need to make sure that athletes are healthy," she continued. "If students have pre-existing conditions such as old ankle sprains, they will work on rehabilitation with them. Protective equipment and proper conditioning are extremely important," she added.

During the regular season, student trainers need to arrive at a game or practice before it starts and have to follow up on any injuries or complications that might have occured. A 3 1/2 hour game usually requires at least six hours of their time.

Salisbury State has a formal written contract with seven area high schools, providing a scholarship stipend for the student athletic trainers.

This is the second year that Gregg Budd, athletic director at Delmar High School, has used SSU student athletic trainers. In the past, the responsibility for athletic training has fallen on the school nurse and the coaches.

"That put a great deal of demand on their time," said Budd. These two students have taken a weight off everybody's shoulders. Our coaches and I have left a lot of things up to them—last year's student came in and organized the whole athletic training program," he said. "He basically took a storage facility and turned it into a nice training room."

"I've seen concussions, sprains, strained muscles and fractured bones," said Bauer, who is interning at Stephen Decatur High. "You have to use your common sense and be prepared for situations you may never have encountered before—to rely on what you've been taught and follow your instincts. Fortunately, I haven't seen any serious injuries so far."

Melissa "Missy" Moscati of Baldwin wasn't as lucky. "My second week at Parkside High during a preseason practice, I had a varsity football player who took a helmet to the side and ended up with a ruptured spleen," she said.

SSU senior Kim Bradley tapes a basketball player's leg in preparation for practice as part of her athletic training internship at Bennett Senior High.

"I was treating someone in the training room when the coach came and told me that one of his players had gone down. When I got there he was pale but said he was feeling better. I evaluated him for internal damage and sent him home with a friend, telling him what symptoms to look for," added Moscati.

"When I called him back later that day, he said he had pain in his shoulders—that's a primary indicator of internal damage (especially spleen damage). His sister was with him and I told her to call an ambulance. I met them at the hospital and he was immediately taken into surgery with what they thought was a ruptured liver. It wasn't until surgery that they realized it was his spleen. After coming through the surgery, he told me, 'If you hadn't done what you did, I could have died,'" she said.

"While the experience wasn't a fun one, it did show me that I do know what I'm doing," said Moscati. "I realized that if I could handle that situation, I could probably handle most anything. I've learned more working at the high school than I've learned in my three years at SSU. I never could have done it without the training I received at the University but you never really know what you can do until you have to do it on your own," she said.

The first athletic trainer at SSU was Hunter Smith, who graduated from James M. Bennett High and Tennessee Tech and is now head athletic trainer with the Indianapolis Colts. "He's sort of a legend around here," said Pat Lamboni, head athletic trainer at SSU. "He started the program here in 1972 and designed our current athletic training room. He also educated the administration and coaches about the need for an athletic training program at the University and set a foundation for us to follow."

Lamboni also praises his students for their dedication and hard work. "These six kids are the strength of the program," he said. "Everyone says it's Pat Lamboni's program, but it's not me at all. I just sit here and organize and guide—I don't work at the high schools. I don't put in the time for the students. Our students set the precedent and everyone who comes after them has to live up to what they've done," he added.

Of the seven students who graduated in the program last year, six went on to graduate school at the University of Kentucky, Louisiana State University, Northern Illinois University, Old Dominion University, Marshall University and Morningside College. "The other student got a job right away at Union Memorial Sports Medicine in Baltimore which is one of the biggest in the state," said Lamboni.

A 1991 SSU graduate, Joe Blauser is currently a graduate assistant at Marshall University. He is appreciative of the sports medicine experience he got at Parkside High during his senior year.

"I got a lot of hands-on experience which was invaluable as far as my evaluation skills were concerned," said Blauser. "I was forced to make my own decisions and as a result, my confidence level really increased. Here at Marhsall undergraduates don't get as much hands-on experience. Students work only one semester as an intern, and even then, they are supervised by a graduate student. This doesn't force them to make their own decisions and I see a difference between their confidence level and that of the SSU students," he added.

The athletic training program at SSU is designed to meet the National Athletic Trainers Association (NATA) requirements. Toward the end of their senior year, students have to pass a certification exam. According to Lamboni, of the 40 or 50 people who have gone through the program, only two are not certified and that's through choice. And about 95 percent of the athletic training graduates are still working in the field.

Former student, Jeff Wood, is now the athletic trainer at Cherokee High School in Marlton, NJ. "I've seen all of the programs around," said Wood. "Half of the schools don't offer what SSU's program does. It's probably the best on the East Coast regardless of the size of the school because it gives you an overall taste of things you could experience out in the field.

"Because of Pat's ties with Hunter Smith, I was able to do summer internships with the Indianapolis Colts and the Philadelphia Eagles," added Wood. "I still work summers with the Eagles. I never would have benefited from the ties Pat has with the NFL without having been at Salisbury State," he said.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Steve Robb of the Image Processing Center

SSU Graduate Manages Image Center

Although Steve Robb received scholarship offers from several other colleges, the Calvert County, MD, native said he made the right choice when he selected SSU as the place where he would pursue his undergraduate degree.

"I chose Salisbury State because I didn't want to be just another number like students in big schools. At Salisbury I was a person. SSU students have more of a one-on-one relationship with their professors," he said. "You are given the opportunity to participate and be someone."

In addition to the personal atmosphere, Robb said he chose SSU because it was closer to home and less expensive than other schools he had visited and also because it offered a good athletics program as well as a good education.

Robb played football during his four years at SSU and was a member of the squad that won its way into the national championships in 1986.

"Athletics taught me about motivation and about striving to be the best," he added. Determination, motivation and desire are qualities that Robb has been able to use not only on the athletic field but also in his job field.

Since graduating in '89 with a Bachelor of Science in geography, Robb has continued to be an asset to the University in his current position as a computer mapping specialist and the manager of SSU's Image Processing Center.

Robb uses state-of-the-art equipment to delineate maps of the local wetlands areas. "We work with influential people in the Environmental Protection Agency, the Department of Natural Resources and various state agencies.

"I'm not confined to working inside the center. I am involved in where and why the data is being used and how it is being applied. This job will open a lot of doors for me."

SSU Arts and Artists Receive SWAC Grants

As part of its ongoing mission, the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council (SWAC) receives funding from the Maryland State Arts Council's Community Arts Development program. A major portion of those funds is then regranted to local arts organizations in Wicomico County.

For the fiscal year 1992, SWAC awarded $11,682 to community groups, for programs ranging from art exhibits to radio productions, educational programs to community theatre. An additional $3,000 has been allocated to help the local arts community become accessible to all patrons.

Recipients of grants for arts programs are:

The Greater Salisbury Youth Symphony Orchestra, which received a grant toward its 1992 performance season. Dr. Thomas Elliot, Music Department chair, conducts the youth symphony.

The Salisbury Choral Society, which received support for its 1991-92 performance season. Dr. Duane Karna, SSU choral director, also directs the society.

The Salisbury Symphony Orchestra, which received support for its 1991-92 performance season. Elliot also founded and directs the SSO.

The SSU Dance Company, which received a grant toward its educational in-schools program, "What's in a Dance?" Victoria Hutchinson created this program.

WSCL-FM, supporting the locally produced program, "RFD: Radio Free Delmarva." WSCL News Director Van Williamson created and produces RFD.

The Maryland State Arts Council's Community Arts Development program is now in its 16th year.

SWAC processes two cycles of CAD grants each fiscal year. The application deadline for FY '93's first granting cycle will be June 26. These grants will be offered toward events occurring between July 1 and December 31, or to arts groups offering a whole season in the fall, winter and spring.

Two smaller grant programs, Director's Grants (with an award maximum of $100) and Community Outreach Grants (available only for arts events in Wicomico County, outside of the city of Salisbury), have no deadlines and may be applied for any time.

Decisions on SWAC's CAD grants are recommended by a review panel made up of local citizens, and final decisions are based on approval by the Arts Council's Board of Directors.

For more information on CAD grants in FY'93, or on other programs administered by SWAC, call the Arts Council at 543-ARTS.

There are no prerequisites, no homework said Dr. Ed Senkbeil, Campus Crusade for Christ faculty advisor.

"Have you ever wondered just who Jesus was," Senkbeil said, "whether a prophet or a philosopher, a great teacher or just a good man, or maybe even the Son of God? Why not join us on Fridays as we study the Gospel of John and draw your own conclusion?"

"Bring a brown bag lunch and invite a friend."

Wesley, who had directed and acted in several SSU productions over the last 20 years, became intrigued by Twain's writings some five years ago, when he gave a solo performance of "Jim Baker's Blue Jay Yarn," part of a collection of one-acts for the theatre program. Audiences were enthusiastic about this recreation of a Twain short story.

A revival of "Lies, Laughs and a Lynchin'" had been scheduled for last fall's Parents/Spouse weekend, but a power outage forced cancellation of that performance.

For the current production tickets will be sold at the door. Or reservations may be made by calling the Theatre Box Office at 543-6228. For more information call the Public Relations Office at 543-6030.

Sea Gulls Sports Roundup by Paul Ohanian

It was a bittersweet day at home last Saturday for the wrestling team as they took to the mats for the last time before the home crowd. Despite plenty of emotion and enthusiasm, the Gulls lost a pair of matches, falling to Glassboro State 35-7 and Delaware State 33-16. The team's dual match record fell to 2-4.

Highlights for the Maroon and Gold included a come-from-behind 8-7 victory by 134 pounder Tom King against Glassboro. Sam Gardner also scored a 15-8 win in the 150 pound class against the Profs. Three Gulls claimed wins against Delaware State as Anthony Menegatti claimed a 14-10 decision at 134 pounds, Jeff Hake won by pin at 190 pounds and Andy Ryan was a forfeit winner at 177 pounds. The season continues this Saturday when the Gulls visit Johns Hopkins.

The men's basketball team continues to roll, riding a school-record 16-game winning streak and a number four ranking in the national poll. Dameon Ross pumped in 19 points and Andre Foreman added 16 points and 13 rebounds to lead the Gulls, now 17-1 overall, past Allentown last Saturday, 83-74. Three others also tallied in double-figures to lead a balanced attack. Salisbury improved to 4-0 in ESAC play and boards the bus for its final roadtrip of the season with visits to Shenandoah and Frostburg this weekend.

The women's team, 5-9 overall through last Saturday's game, also takes to the road for games at Shenandoah and Frostburg this weekend. SSU, 2-1 in ESAC play, looks to rebound from last weekend's 75-63 loss to Allentown. Jen Boone continues to rack up the points as she leads all of Division III in scoring with her 28.3 average. Freshman Chris Politz has been an emerging force of late as she complemented Boone with 56 points in three games last week. The 6-1 forward also grabbed 38 rebounds and blocked eight shots as she was named the ECAC's South Region Rookie-of-the-Week.

Business Faculty Involved in Community

Dr. Rebecca Emery, lecturer of management in the Perdue School of Business, recently conducted a two-day retreat on strategic planning for the Unitarian Fellowship of Easton. Additionally, she served on a panel on "Career Opportunities" for Wor-Wic Tech Community College at its annual "Saturday for Success" program during the fall.

Recently, SSU business faculty Dr. Richard Palmer, Emery and T.P. Hall conducted a seminar, "Strategic Planning for Profit and Not-for-Profit Organizations," sponsored by the Perdue Professional Development Center and the Small Business Development Center. A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

FEBRUARY 13, 1992 VOL. XIII NO. 18

Perdue, Fulton Schools Are Going International

American businesses are increasingly competing on an international playing field. To compete in the job market, students are finding they must develop broader experience.

"Many of today's students have realized that if they don't have an international element, they don't have a complete education," said Dr. Richard Bebee, dean of the Perdue School of Business.

Recognizing that, SSU is taking steps to provide students with international experience and opening doors to internships abroad. Through an unusual collaboration, the business and liberal arts faculties at SSU will be "transporting" students to the Continent, without stepping off campus.

A new grant awarded to the Perdue School of Business and the Fulton School of Liberal Arts is enabling faculty to collaborate in designing a course that will immerse students in the language, customs and business practices of France.

The proposal was one of only 18 to qualify for a $10,000 grant from the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business and the Association of American Colleges. There were more than 150 proposals in competition for the matching grant.

Four faculty members from the two schools are developing the course this month: arranging speakers, previewing materials, establishing the course outline and deciding on any prerequisites. They plan to offer the course to juniors and seniors a year from now.

Dr. Sharon G. Rubin, dean of the Fulton School, says that students will work for 90 hours over four weeks, gradually using more French than English in the classroom.

Rubin and Bebee were pleased to find a wealth of international experience among their faculty members. From the Business School, Dr. Benjamin Harrison holds a degree in French history and Dr. Memo Diriker has a leadership role in the European American Business (Research and Development) Institute. In addition to the liberal arts faculty now teaching French in the Modern Languages Department, other faculty also have international expertise. Dr. Philip Bosserman, a sociology professor, for example, earned his Ph.D. at the Sorbonne in Paris.

The grants program has been funded by KPGM Peat Marwick in an effort to take college and university programs to an international level. At SSU, the business and liberal arts

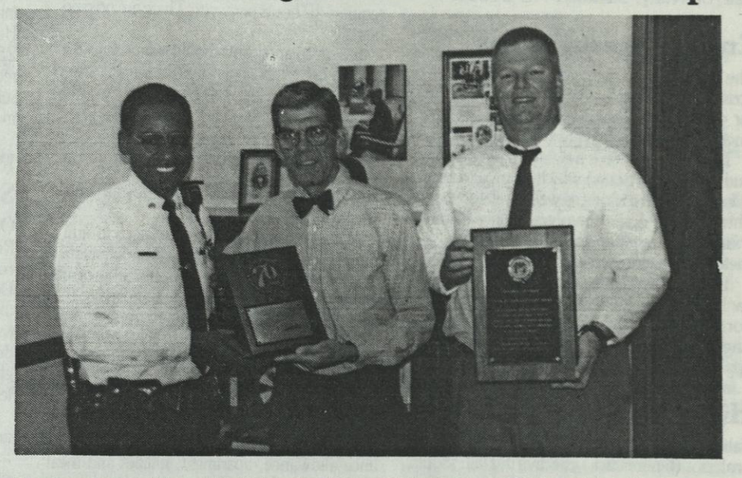
Awareness Programs Lead to Crime Drop



Members of the Salisbury State University Office of Public Safety and SSU President Thomas Bellavance (center) display awards recognizing the efforts of the University's campus police. Sgt. Carlton Tobias (left) and Dr. Bellavance hold 70% Buckle Up Award from the U.S. Department of Transportation and Jim Phillips, director of public safety at SSU, holds 1991 Chiefs Challenge Award from the Maryland Committee for Safety Belt Use Inc.

For many young adults, college can be a place to try their wings. Thanks to some individuals at Salisbury State University, students here don't have to work without a net.

Both the Public Safety Office and the Alcohol and Drug Prevention Resource Center at SSU have been recognized nationally and statewide for their efforts in crime prevention. Not only are the SSU programs ambitious, they are producing results.

Campus criminal activity has dropped by 17 percent overall and last year, drug-related crime was down 68 percent from the year before. More students are taking precautions: from engraving their property to fastening their seatbelts, to ensure that their four years at SSU are safe ones.

While the entire public safety staff makes crime prevention a priority, one officer has adopted an educational role as well. Sgt. Carlton R. Tobias, a patrol supervisor, makes time in his schedule to give crime prevention presentations whenever a campus club asks for one. When freshmen take the required orientation course, it is Tobias who leads the campus safety session. Student evaluations of the course invariably single out his class as one of the most informative.

Because he meets every freshman in the class, he has become a well-known—and well-liked—campus figure.

He gets to know the students and they learn to rely on him," said James L. Phillips, public safety director. "He's very popular. When he and I walk across campus, he speaks to every student he meets.

"This relationship gives him added credibility," Phillips added. "The message sinks in more."

The message has apparently sunk in well enough to produce results. Tobias was singled out by the Governor's Crime Prevention Awards Program as a law enforcement officer who has made an outstanding contribution to crime prevention.

It was largely through the efforts of Tobias that SSU's Public Safety Office earned two more awards, the 70 Percent Plus Award from the U.S. Department of Transportation and the 1991 Chief's Challenge from the Maryland

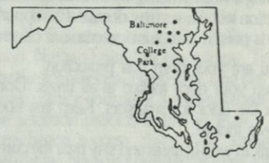
INTRODUCING
VICTOR
THE ONLINE LIBRARY CATALOG OF THE UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND SYSTEM



VICTOR is Here

VICTOR, the online public access catalog of the University of Maryland System, is now available in Blackwell Library. What this means for users is enhanced access to the databases of the 13 University of Maryland System libraries. The online catalog allows full access to all 13 library catalogs and to a variety of other information sources. Future enhancements will allow a search of the combined University of Maryland System Catalog, a union catalog of the holdings for all UMS campuses.

VICTOR presently contains those books and materials in Blackwell Library's collections which have been processed within the last nine years. In order to obtain a complete record of SSU holdings, you must also consult the card catalog. When the system is fully operational, it will allow students to check the status of the material. Eventually, programming will be added to VICTOR which will list periodical holdings of the UMS libraries. VICTOR features a variety of search types, including name, word, name/word and browse searches. Other search options include an express search, which expands a search; a search history, which reviews a search; and ownership, which displays other campus owners.

The new online system also accesses part of a unique cross-country online information system network. Through this network patrons can search the catalogs of various public, university and college libraries, including the University of Colorado, University of Wyoming, University of Hawaii, Northeastern University, as well as the University of California's MELVYL system.

Patrons at all 13 libraries also have access to UnCover, a unique feature providing a database of article information taken from the contents pages of more than 10,000 multidisciplinary journals. The UnCover database contains citations to more than one million articles and is updated on a daily basis.

At present there are seven VICTOR terminals located in the vicinity of the card catalog on the first floor of Blackwell Library. Two additional terminals are located on the second floor.

'Twain' Revival Has Valentine's Date

A tribute to Mark Twain by the Communication Arts Department which charmed audiences last spring, is being revived for Valentine's Day.

This one-hour tribute to the quintessential American humorist will be performed at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, February 14-15, in Caruthers Hall Auditorium. Admission is free is SSU students, faculty and staff.

Titled "Lies, Laughs and a Lynchin': An Evening With Mark Twain," it is performed by R.J. Wesley, SSU professor of communication arts. For this revival Wesley is adding Twain ancedotes and remarks not in last spring's production. Selections are from such classic Twain works as "Huckleberry Finn," and the popular collections of travel stories, "A Tramp Abroad" and "The Innocents Abroad."

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Faculty Bible Study

This semester Faculty Bible Study will be meeting on Fridays, starting February 7 from noon to 1 p.m., in the Devilbiss Conference Room 103. Steve Young who works with Campus Crusade for Christ will be leading the discussion.

There are no prerequisites, no homework said Dr. Ed Senkbeil, Campus Crusade for Christ faculty advisor.

"Have you ever wondered just who Jesus was," Senkbeil said, "whether a prophet or a philosopher, a great teacher or just a good man, or maybe even the Son of God? Why not join us on Fridays as we study the Gospel of John and draw your own conclusion?"

"Bring a brown bag lunch and invite a friend."

Study group members beside Senkbeil include Homer Austin, Mike Burton, Ed Shaffer, Wayne Shelton, Jerry Waldron, George Whitehead, Brent Wilhelm and Jeanette Wolinski.

Stewart Is Running Harkin Campus Effort

Debra D. Stewart is the SSU coordinator for the First District campaign of Democratic presidential candidate Sen. Tom Harkin.

Stewart, a sophomore, is a Democratic Party activist who currently serves as the president of the SSU Young Democrats. She has previous experience on several local and state campaigns, and has assisted in early Harkin fund-raising efforts.

"I'm extremely glad to have Debra on board for the campaign," First District chairman Leonard Foxwell, Jr. said. "The campaign has been looking for a bright, committed student to take over the campus effort, and I think she fits the bill perfectly."

The Maryland primary is scheduled for March 3.

Hatley Published

Dr. James Hatley, an assistant professor of philosophy in the Fulton School of Liberal Arts, recently published an article titled "Impossible Mourning: Two Attempts to Remember Disaster." The article appeared in a special addition of the Centennial Review that featured philosophic and literary studies treating discourses of mourning, survival and commemoration.

Hatley's article discussed how Aaron Appelfeld's novel, "Badenheim 1939," provokes an ethical concern on the part of its reader for those lives annihilated in the Holocaust. Hatley will also be publishing a piece this spring titled "Grund and Abgrund: Questioning Poetic Foundations in Heidegger and Celan" as part of a collection of scholarly articles on contemporary philosophical themes to be found in Routledge Press's most recent volume of the "Continental Philosophy" book series, "Questioning Foundations."

Hatley has also recently published a translation from French of a discussion involving Maurice Merleau-Ponty, Gilbert Ryle and others titled "Phenomenology and Analytic Philosophy" in the Humanities Press Collection, "Merleau Ponty: Texts and Dialogues."

In addition to his publishing activities, Hatley has been busy presenting papers for the International Association of Philosophy and Literature, as well as for the Society of Phenomenological and Existential Philosophy. In May, he read a paper in Montreal titled "Celan's Poetics of Address: How the Dead Resist Their History." In October, Hatley traveled to Memphis, TN, where he presented a paper titled "The Sincerity of Apology: Levinas's Resistance to the Judgment of History." In May, Hatley will travel to Berkeley, CA, to present a paper on "Generosity And Shame: The Struggle to Die for Another."

by Paul Ohanian

A breakaway dunk with 4:49 remaining in the game last Saturday at Shenandoah moved Andre Foreman past all other players in state of Maryland basketball history as he became the all-time collegiate scoring leader. Foreman's 32nd point of the game was also the 2,673 point of his career, moving him past Jack Sullivan and David Robinson, among others, to the top of the state scoring chart. The Sea Gulls, currently ranked third in the nation, beat Shenadoah 114-96.

The men also used a little luck to slide past Frostburg 69-67 on Sunday. Ed Farrell rebounded Joe Zdrojewski's miss and layed it in at the buzzer to cap a 15-point second half rally for the Gulls. Salisbury improved to 19-1 on the year by winning its 18th straight game, and also stayed unblemished in ESAC games at 6-0.

The women's basketball team made the same trip as the men last weekend, but was a little less fortunate, managing a split of the two games. Jen Boone scored 22 points while Amy Fenzel and Kim Roth added 15 each to lead the Gulls past Shenandoah 82-74 on Saturday. Frostburg proved to be too strong on Sunday however as the Gulls fell 89-55. Boone, now third in the nation with a 25.9 ppg average, led the way with 22 against the Bobcats.

Both Sea Gull squads return to home action this week, beginning with a 6 p.m. women's game with Catholic University on Thursday. Doubleheader action will be featured on Saturday with two games against Lincoln University, and the men will also host Cabrini at 2 p.m. on Sunday.

Nathan Foundation Gifts Now Total $Half Million

The Nathan Foundation of Dorchester County recently presented $40,000 to the SSU Foundation to finance four-year scholarships. The scholarships, amounting to $8,000 each, are for five Dorchester County students.

The check was presented to Dr. Bellavance by Ed Nabb, Nathan Foundation president. To qualify for the scholarship, Nabb said, one has to secure a guidance counselor's recommendation. The selection process begins in May.

"Success begets success, doesn't it?" asked Nabb. "We at the Nathan Foundation think that for every person you educate, you've sown seeds for five more to be educated.

"Many of the good students we're sponsoring at Salisbury State have taken the opportunity to go on and further their education (at graduate school)," said Nabb. "And many return to Cambridge to share the expertise they've gained."

The Nathan Foundation has been making scholarship money available to Salisbury State-bound students since 1962. The Foundation's 30-year investment in the University now totals over $500,000.

"The Nathan Foundation directors feel these shcolarships represent the most quality we're going to buy with Milford Nathan's money," said Nabb. "We feel that is our obligation to spend the foundation funds the way Mr. Nathan would have spent it.

"Salisbury State University offers a quality education and we try to invest our money in quality programs," Nabb continued. "We have received overtures from a lot of other schools (seeking donations), but we can buy more quality education at Salisbury State for our dollar than at any other institution in Maryland."

Bellavance said distribution of the scholarship money is closely controlled by the University. "There's been a very good track record for these students," he said.

The Nathan Foundation specifies that the money be used only for the benefit of citizens of Dorchester County and goes to organizations that serve people of every race, color and creed.

The Nathan Foundation was created in 1962 following the instructions in the will of Milford Nathan, who died in 1956. Later the Foundation was supported further from the estate of Bertha Nathan, Milford's sister who passed away in 1981.

Ed Nabb (left), president of the Nathan Foundation, recently presented a $40,000 check to Dr. Bellavance, to finance five four-year scholarships to Dorchester County students attending SSU.

schools had already been working together to develop international studies. The grant will enable that collaborative effort to continue.

"The schools have been working together for a few years now," said Rubin. "We've brought in joint speakers and provided guest speakers for each others' classes.

"Both schools felt ready to take advantage of this opportunity to expand the program."

Bebee and Rubin plan to offer the course to undergraduates first. But they are already thinking ahead to meet the needs of others who may be interested, both on and off campus.

"This type of course could be developed for other programs, too," said Bebee. "Ultimately, we would like to offer it to the business community. It is already attracting interest."

Committee for Safety Belt Use, Inc. Both awards recognize the high level of compliance with Maryland's safety belt law on the SSU campus. Tobias led a campaign first to educate drivers on campus to the law, then to monitor compliance. SSU surpassed the 70 percent plus compliance level.

Although she works in a separate office, Jennifer Berkman, director of the Alcohol and Drug Prevention Resource Center at SSU, is also helping to prevent crime on campus. Established six years ago, the center reaches out into the community, as well as across campus, to spread the message that the use of alcohol and other drugs can be unhealthy, even devastating. Berkman says that it's important to reach young people before they are confronted with alcohol and drugs. While many college students have crossed that threshold already, she rises to this greater challenge. One method the center uses at SSU is peer education.

"When you find students who are already using alcohol or other drugs, it's a harder case to sell," she explained. "After all, the drugs do what they promise to do, and some people like the way they feel.

"It's harder to demonstrate the negative outcomes to that population," said Berkman.

Despite these concerns, Berkman is apparently getting her message across: the number of alcohol-related incidents is on the decline. Last year, for example, saw a 19 percent drop. This impressive statistic and other indicators of success earned the center the Governor's Crime Prevention Award.

This came as the result of lots of hard work. In the last year, the center has had direct contact with more than 4,700 people looking for information and help. Staff members have handed out more that 35,000 pieces of literature, and have loaned out 695 videotapes. In the workshops conducted and supported by the center, more than 11,000 have heard about the importance of preventing alcohol and drug abuse.

Berkman, Tobias and Phillips say that they are proud to display these awards, proud of the work their co-workers are doing. But the real reward, they say, comes from seeing SSU become a safer place for its students, faculty and staff.

PE Majors Support Jump Rope for Heart

On an upcoming Saturday morning, area youngsters will be jumping out of their routine and into a good cause.

On February 22, 9 a.m. will find them not in front of the television watching cartoons, but gathered at the Maggs Center. There, the fourth through eighth graders will Jump Rope for Heart: getting exercise and raising money for the American Heart Association.

Stosh Schtierman, a physical education graduate student at SSU and co-chairman of the event, is looking forward to his fifth year working on the Jump Rope for Heart. "In the age of Nintendo and TV, it's nice that these kids come out to help a good cause," he said. "And it's great for the PE students at SSU to have a chance to work with school-age kids."

The Physical Education Society at SSU helps to coordinate the event with the local chapter of the American Heart Association. The two groups have worked together on the project for almost 10 years. Perdue Farms Inc. is a corporate sponsor.

So far, seven area schools have registered teams for Jump Rope for Heart. The schools and individual classes compete to see which can raise the most money from those who have pledged to pay the American Heart Assosication for each minute the team is jumping.

"It's a really fun event," said Kristin Insley, a heart Association volunteer who is helping to organize Jump Rope for Heart. "Kids come out to show pride in their school. It's not designed to be competitive, but Jump Rope for Heart really brings out their school spirit."

Last year, that school spirit raised $16,000 for the American Heart Association. The money is dedicated to pay for research into the causes of heart disease and educational programs to promote a heart healthy way of life. That means students are helping to pay for the education that they get in healthier living. Of course, the event itself provides something of an education. More than just a jump rope marathon, Jump Rope for Heart challenges students with a variety of jump rope games, including double leg jumping and double-dutch. While a few kids find themselves huffing and puffing after the warm-up stretching exercises, DeeJay Ron Boltz, an SSU student, keeps their energy running high with music and a running commentary. What's more, SSU mascot Sammy the Seagull is on hand to greet the kids and keep them jumping.

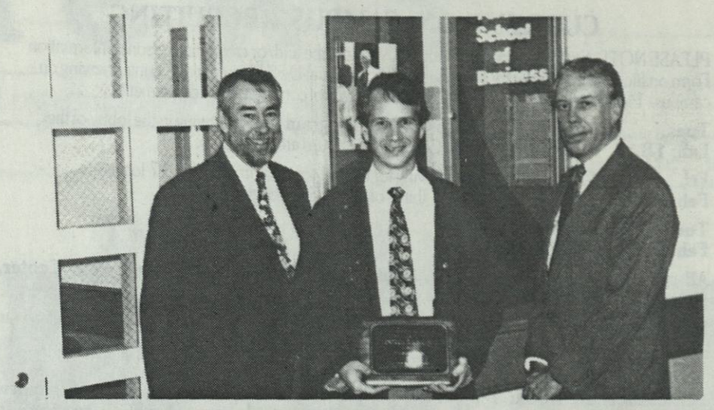
His work as an athletic trainer has kept PE Society president Joe Cramp from joining in on Jump Rope for Heart in the past, but the SSU student is looking forward to his first year. Cramp encourages his classmates to come out for the event. "It's a great opportunity to get involved and do something for the community."

Schierman agreed: "People at the University have a chance to contribute to the community while we're here.

"It's nice to show what people on campus can do."

Both men are looking forward to seeing what local school children can do, too. Schtierman, who works at a campus during the summer confessed, "I love kids. And we all have a lot of fun at Jump Rope for Heart."

Students sign in at Jump Rope for Heart beginning at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, February 22. The event begins at 9 and runs until noon. Sharon Cooper, associate director for campaign events at the American Heart Association's Salisbury Office, says that registration for Jump Rope for Heart is still open. For more information, contact her at the American Heart Association Office at 742-4343. See photo on Page 8.



Tony Gilkerson of Gillis-Gilkerson Builders, Inc. holds the plaque his firm recently received from the Eastern Shore Chapter of the Association of Builders and Contractors in recognition for renovation construction on the Perdue School of Business in Holloway Hall. Also pictured are Joseph Gilbert (left), vice president of administration, and Dr. Richard Bebee, dean of the Perdue School.

Local Builders Get Award for Perdue School

Gillis Gilkerson, Inc., general contractors headquartered in Salisbury, received the "Outstanding Project of the Year, Municipal/Institutional" award by the Eastern Shore Chapter of the Associated Builders & Contractors.

The award was in recognition of the construction company's work on the Perdue School of Business, a $2.2 million State of Maryland renovation project.

Located in the north and east wings of Holloway Hall, the Perdue School features three large case rooms designed in tiers, like small auditoriums, to give opportunites to large groups of students for close association and discussion with professors and visiting lecturers.

The school also has administrative offices for the dean of the school and staff, faculty offices, a student lounge and offices for area service organizations such as the Eastern Shore regional office for the Small Business Development Center and the Regional Technology Council.

"We are proud to have a new facility and community resource which reflects the caliber of programs offered at the Perdue School," said Dr. Bellavance.

The Perdue School of Business was established in 1986 following a $2.5 million endowment by Frank Perdue, chairman of the executive committee of Perdue Farms Inc.

"I am pleased to have the opportunity to see this wonderful facility completed," said Perdue. "I believe it will enhance the opportunity of our business leaders of tomorrow to learn and be trained in optimal conditions."

The Associated Builders & Contractors award is based in part on the ability of the contractor to deal effectively with "job challenges" and to find "creative solutions to a client's requirements."

"After successfully bidding on the job," said Palmer Gillis, one of the two partners in the firm, "we began with interior demolition and the removal of the existing roof. Once the demolition phase was in full swing, asbestos was discovered. The project came to a stop until the extent of the asbestos was discovered.

"We had to coordinate the asbestos abatement as well as pour a concrete slab under the entire wing," said Gillis. "The area under the wing was only 30 inches open in height, requiring us to place and finish the concrete while crawling on our hands and knees."

The next phase was to rebuild including a new entrance portico as well as classrooms and offices. The roof structure was replaced and re-roofed and an elevator and shaft was installed.

"All of our work was done while the building was occupied on the second and third floors," said Tony Gilkerson, the other partner. "Not only did we have a schedule to beat, but we also had to take an equal interest in the needs of the other occupants.

"Even with the asbestos problem which cost us a lot of time," said Gilkerson, "we were still on schedule in the end."

Gillis Gilkerson specializes in commercial, industrial, institutional and multi-family construction. Begun in 1983 as Gillis Builders, Inc., it has grown steadily over the past eight years, last year achieving a record work volume.

"We have worked very hard to establish a long list of satisfied customers throughout the Eastern Shore," said Gillis. "We take the team approach to construction, working closely with our clients, addressing their construction needs with quality work and competitive prices."

Committee To Deal With Feline Influx

Perhaps you've noticed that the cat population on our campus has been increasing at an exponential rate and this alarming growth rate requires that the University now deal with the issue.

As an enlightened community, we are committed to ethical and humane treatment of all beings, human and otherwise, and wish to invite kindred spirits to assist in controlling and resolving the situation. Because of her interest, I have asked Mia Vye to coordinate the efforts of this committee. Anyone interested in helping please contact Mia in the President's office, Holloway Hall, Room 237, or call 543-6012.

The committee will attempt to find homes for as many of these wild cats as possible, will assist in catching and having the strays neutered and will generally attempt to keep the cat population controlled. Individuals wishing to make donations for having the animals spayed or neutered and getting their appropriate vaccinations, or who are interested in providing homes are also welcome to contact Vye regarding these issues.

We hope there will be enough interest on behalf of the University community to assist in these efforts because if not, the alternative is not pleasant. It will involve trapping the animals and turning them over to the Humane Society of Wicomico County where many of them would be euthanized.

To date, 17 of these animals have been captured humanely, and homes have been found for all of them. Although the cats act "wild" now, they really are intelligent, easily trainable, very loving, beautiful and clean. They just require someone who cares.

—Joseph Gilbert, V.P. of Administration

Carrie Work, a 1989 graduate of Wicomico Senior High School currently in her third year as a music major at the Peabody Conservatory of Music, will be playing the French horn in the tone poem, "Ein Heldenleben" by Richard Strauss. While at Wicomico High she was a member of the visual and performing arts program and studied privately with Dr. Thomas G. Elliot, chair of the SSU Music Department. She now studies with David Bakkegard, principal horn with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra.

As a high school sophmore Work became a member of the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra at SSU. She made her SSO debut solo performance in the spring of 1989 performing Mozart's "Horn Concerto No.3." Still a regular member of the Salisbury Symphony's horn section, Work is looking forward to "coming home" with the Peabody Symphony Orchestra.

Tribute to Mays March 7

In their more than half-century of public service to the Salisbury area, John and Florence Simonds May have worked hard to make Wicomico County a lovelier and more compassionate community. To honor these community activists and retired Salisbury State University professors, an appreciation dinner and tribute will be held on Saturday, March 7, at the University.

A reception with dinner to follow begins at 6 p.m. in the Salisbury Room of the Ruth Powell Dining Hall. The cost is $25 per person. Friends, colleagues and former students of the Mays are cordially invited.

Dr. Florence Simonds May was the first woman to receive her doctorate in botany from the University of Maryland and the first chair of SSU's Biology Department. Teaching at Salisbury from 1935 through World War II, she has continued her lifelong love of botany through work with the Town and Country Garden Club, of which she is a past president. She also has shown a keen interest in the Wicomico Teen-Adult Center's horticulture program.

Dr. John May earned his Ph.D. in education and psychology from the University of Virginia. He joined the SSU faculty in 1939, and after duty in Asia during World War II, returned to launch a distinguished career in teaching and public service.

In 1991 the Mays gave a $100,000 endowment to the Salisbury State University

Film Lecture Series Opens February 25

On Tuesday, February 25, Salisbury State initiates its first presentation in a spring lecture series, "The Humanities in Motion: 20 Years of Literature and Film."

Dr. Thomas L. Erskine of the English faculty will discuss the novel "The Sheltering Sky" by Paul Bowles, first published in 1949 and adapted to the cinema in 1990 by the Italian director Bernardo Bertolucci, whose films include "Last Tango in Paris" and "The Last Emperor," which won nine Oscars, including Best Picture in 1988.

"The Sheltering Sky" was the first novel written by the American composer and existentialist poet Paul Bowles, who moved to North Africa with his wife Jane in the 1940s and settled in Tangier, where the novel was written. It tells the story of three Americans, Port and Kit Moresby (John Malkovich and Debra Winger in the film) and their socialite friend George Tunner (Campbell Scott), adrift in North Africa after the Second World War. It has been described as "a classic work of pyschological terror" that "examines the ways in which Americans approach an alien culture—and the ways in which their incomprehension destroys them."

Erskine, who will introduce the novel, is the founding editor of Literature/Film Quarterly, an academic journal published at Salisbury State, that celebrates its 20th anniversary in 1992. He has served as both chair of the English Department and as academic dean at Salisbury State. During the 1970s Erskine became the editor of the "From Fiction to Film" series of books produced by the Dickenson Publishing Company in California. He has himself written on Bernardo Bertolucci, covering "The Last Emperor" for Magills Cinema Annual, a reference work published by Salem Press in 1988. He has won the Distinguished Faculty Award at

National Leader on Hazing To Speak Feb. 26

Hazing is an issue for all campus organizations and clubs across the country. Nationwide, incidents have been seen with sports teams, student clubs, and fraternities and sororities. On Wednesday, February 26, the SSU Greek Council invites all students, faculty and staff to hear Eileen Stevens, founder of C.H.U.C.K. (Committee to Halt Useless College Killings). Her lecture is at 8 p.m. in Caruthers Auditorium.

Since the death of her son, Chuck, in 1978 at Alfred University, NY, Stevens has waged a national campaign to eliminate all dangerous physical and mental hazing practices. Her son was killed in a senseless hazing incident at Klan Alpine local fraternity. Following this great personal tragedy, Stevens founded the not-for-profit organization which bears her son's name.

The goals of the organization are to bring about an awareness of hazing and prompt legislative action from states as a strong step to deter hazing abuses and insure safety of students. C.H.U.C.K. also documents deaths and injuries in the hope of enlightening others. Her message is not anti-fraternity, but anti-hazing. Fraternities and sororities continue to work closely with her to find alternatives and positive programs.

Stevens has lectured at over 500 campuses nationwide and has spoken at numerous national fraternity conventions, conferences and regional meetings. She has testified at legislative hearings and has lobbied for anti-hazing laws in several states. Such laws now exist in 35 states and other states are pending. Federal attention is being considered at this time.

Stevens has been recognized by the Greek system for her efforts. She was the recipient of the prestigious "Order of Interfraternity Service Award" by Lambda Chi Alpha, the "Friend of Sigma Nu Award," "The Salsbury-Scott Interfraternity Award" from Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity, and NIC Silver Medal. She is the first woman to have received the "FEA Distinguished Service Award." She also has received "The Jack Anson Award" given each year by the Association of Fraternity Advisors, an award presented to someone outside the world of higher education who has made an outstanding contribution to college fraternities. She is also a member of the Order of Omega and is a member of the Alpha Phi International Women's Fraternity. The University of Southern California has established an "Eileen Stevens Award" presented each year to the fraternity and sorority with the most outstanding pledge program. Most recently she was honored by Kappa Delta Rho, Theta Chi and Sigma Alpha Epsilon for her work.

New York Newsday honored her for her volunteer efforts. The New York Daily News named Stevens "Woman of the Year" in 1983 and the Red Cross presented her with the "Clara Barton Humanitarian Award."

C.H.U.C.K. has been profiled on 20/20, Phil Donahue, Good Morning America, Joan Rivers, Oprah, Geraldo, Nightwatch and The Today Show. Newsweek, McCalls, Redbook, People Magazine, Ms. Magazine, US Magazine, The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal and the Chronicle of Higher Education have reported her work as well as countless daily publications. She has been listed in "1988 Who's Who in America."

"Mrs. Stevens has a gripping message for all clubs and organizations," said Amy Wiedemer, director of student activities and organization. Admission is free.

England Trip Sets Interest Meeting

Another interest meeting for a summer '92 study tour to England, Scotland and Wales will be held on Monday, February 24, at 7:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall, room 103.

Wayne Ackerson, lecturer of history at SSU and tour leader, has been surprised at the interest thus far. "I suppose I shouldn't be astonished, as Britain has something for everyone and is a perfect place for a first overseas trip," said Ackerson. "I had no idea that there was this kind of interest throughout the community, however."

The trip, which costs approximately $1,700, will include an 11-day circuit of England, Scotland and Wales. Some of the locations to be visited include London, Edinburgh, York and the lovely Lake District. Included in the tour cost are all transportation, admission costs, most of the meals and all lodging in first-class hotels throughout Britain. "For what you get," said Ackerson, "this price simply cannot be beat."

For more information, attend the meeting or call Ackerson at 543-6527.

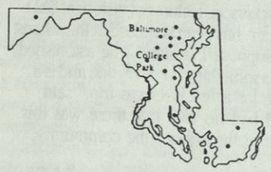
INTRODUCING

VICTOR

THE ONLINE LIBRARY CATALOG OF THE UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND SYSTEM



VICTOR Is Here

VICTOR, the online public access catalog of the University of Maryland System, is now available in Blackwell Library. What this means for users is enhanced access to the databases of the 13 University of Maryland System libraries. The online catalog allows full access to all 13 library catalogs and to a variety of other information sources. Future enhancements will allow a search of the combined University of Maryland System Catalog, a union catalog of the holdings for all UMS campuses.

VICTOR presently contains those books and materials in Blackwell Library's collections which have been processed within the last nine years. In order to obtain a complete record of SSU holdings, you must also consult the card catalog. When the system is fully operational, it will allow students to check the status of the material. Eventually, programming will be added to VICTOR which will list periodical holdings of the UMS libraries. VICTOR features a variety of search types, including name, word, name/word and browse searches. Other search options include an express search, which expands a search; a search history, which reviews a search; and ownership, which displays other campus owners.

The new online system also accesses part of a unique cross-country online information system network. Through this network patrons can search the catalogs of various public, university and college libraries, including the University of Colorado, University of Wyoming, University of Hawaii, Northeastern University, as well as the University of California's MELVYL system.

Patrons at all 13 libraries also have access to UnCover, a unique feature providing a database of article information taken from the contents pages of more than 10,000 multidisciplinary journals. The UnCover database contains citations to more than one million articles and is updated on a daily basis.

At present there are seven VICTOR terminals located in the vicinity of the card catalog on the first floor of Blackwell Library. Two additional terminals are located on the second floor.

This program is designed to recognize those African-American students who have performed well academically. Each fall and spring semester a student will be elected from each class for this honor. The students are Gerda Sejour, a freshman from Wheaton; Rhonda Pitts, a sophmore from Chester, PA; Judith Johnson, a junior from Hyattsville; and Robert Watkins, a senior from Cambridge.

Each student was enrolled as a full-time student and earned a 4.0 grade point average for the fall semester.

Schultz Speaker

Dr. Barbara Townsend Schultz spoke to the Eastern Shore Reading Council of Virginia at the Central Middle School at Painter on February 6. The subject was how to use children's books to stimulate children's writing.

The focus was mainly on books by Jon Scieszka, author of "The True Story of the 3 Little Pigs" and "The Frog Prince Continued." She talked about the stereotypes found in fairy tales and how those can be used to help children to write similar stories. All the books presented were fairy tales which had something unusual or unexpected. The presentation included slides and samples of children's writing from the second to the fifth grades.

Schultz teaches children's literature and communication arts methods and has been on the faculty of the Department of Education for the past 19 years.

Soaring With Wolinski

Dr. John T. Wolinski, associate professor in the Education Department, was one of two main speakers at the SOAR III Reading Conference held at the newly renovated Easton Elementary School recently. The conference, jointly sponsored by the Eastern Shore, the Upper Shore and the Maryland Shore Reading Councils of Maryland, registered over 160 participants.

The conference opened with an address by Jill Slansky, national consultant for Houghton Mifflin School Division Publishers, on "Using Performance-Based Assessment." This was followed by a series of reading related workshops, one by JoAnne Mulcahy, first grade teacher at Showell Elementary School and adjunct children's literature insturctor at SSU.

Wolinski closed the conference, addressing the entire group on "Using Basal Readers in a Whole Language Program."

Sea Gull Sports Roundup

by Paul Ohanian

2,807 points. That's how many forward Andre Foreman has scored in his four-year Sea Gull career. That total also places his name atop the all-time scoring list in NCAA Division III history. Foreman scored 30 points in Sunday's 121-104 win over Cabrini to move past Dwain Govan (2,796) as the career points leader. No player in the history of Division III basketball has scored more points than SSU's senior all-American.

As a team, the Gulls, now 22-1 with 21 straight wins, continued to steamroll opponents, winning three games last week while averaging 118 points per game. SSU routed Wesley 116-81 as Foreman scored a school-record 52; the Gulls beat Lincoln 117-95 on Saturday evening; and five players joined Foreman in double-figures on Sunday in the win over Cabrini.

The next milestone for the program could come this Saturday evening as Coach Ward Lambert will try to claim the 300th victory of his 22-year career. The Gulls host arch-rival Frostburg State at 7:30 p.m. The regular season concludes on Sunday afternoon with a 4 p.m. game against Shenandoah. Salisbury State will then host the ESAC Tournament, February 27-29, before awaiting word on its NCAA Tournament fate. NCAA pairings will be announced on Sunday, March 1.

Taking a page out of the men's playbook, the women's basketball team scored early and often last Saturday as it romped past Lincoln, 101-41. Ten of the 11 Sea Gulls who played found the scoring column, paced by Jen Boone's 23. Amy Fenzel netted 13, Jenny Shelly had 12, Gini McDowell scored 11 and Kim Roth added 10 points and a team-high nine rebounds. SSU improved to 8-11 overall and 4-2 in conference games. The Gulls are still contending for a berth in the ESAC Tournament, to be played February 28-29. The regular season champion, yet to be determined, will host the conference tournament.

Prior to this Saturday's men's-women's doubleheader with Frostburg State, former greats from SSU's basketball past will take part in an Alumni Game, beginning at 3:30 p.m. Former players scheduled to play include Ron Dixon, Steve Spalding, Danny Tregoning, Eric Jordan, Joe McCahon, Kevin Nashold and many more. The campus and community is invited and admission is free.

Forms for submitting your claims may be obtained from the Personnel Office by calling Shirley King at 548-4755.

There are three separate forms that need to be completed each time you move. If the post office notifies you of a different numbering system for your street, (even though you are living in the same house) the forms need to be processed. We recommend you call us at 548-4755 as soon as you know there is a change.

Having an accurate address on file will help alleviate health insurance notices and membership cards going astray.

Prescription Advice: If you (or a family member) receive a prescription for any of the following items, you must submit a pre-authorization letter and receive approval before the prescription can be filled under the PCS plan. The drugs involved are: Rocaltrol; Retin-A; progesterone suppositories; growth hormones and dexedrine. The necessary approval form letter may be obtained by contacting the Personnel Office at 548-4755.

Previously, Nicoret, Nicoderm Patches, Habitrol, etc. (smoking cessation drugs) needed special approval. You now are permitted to obtain them without prior approval from Baltimore, BUT, for a three month period maximum.

When you are doubtful about a prescription, call the toll free PCS number 1-800-345-9384. Have your membership card ready at all times when calling.

If you would like a copy of the State of Maryland FORMULARY listing of preferred medicines, call the same number. (If you call from a push button telephone, press the "*" button to bypass the computer voice and talk to a real person. If you are using a rotary phone, just hold on until the computer voice is finished and real person will eventually come on the line.)

Foundation for research in and the advancement of education in specific learning disabilities. John May's interest in learning disabilities goes back to his studies as a graduate student when he was "partly trying to learn something about myself...I was dyslexic," he said, and as a child had to endure teasing over a slowness in reading. Dyslexia is one of the nation's most prominent learning disabilities.

John May believes the pain of these childhood experiences in reading helped make him more empathetic and effective as a counselor and therapist, especially with children. And he has touched the lives of many through the Lower Shore Association for Children With Learning Disabilities. He was a founder of that association—the oldest organization of its kind in Maryland.

Much of the Mays' work has focused on children and young people. Since the inception of the Wicomico Teen-Adult Residential Service Corp. a decade ago, Florence Simonds May has been a strong supporter and an active board member. John May was on the boards of directors of the Teen-Adult Center and Wicomico County's Mental Hygiene Society, and chairman of the board of directors of the Wicomico School for Retarded Children. He also has served as a consultant to the Holly Center and clinical psychologist at the Mental Hygiene Clinic in Salisbury.

"I have never known either of them to be less than avid and energetic when it comes to the cause of education," SSU President Thomas E. Bellavance said.

Both of the Drs. May went to college and graduate school on scholarships and fellowships. At the time of their gift to the SSU Foundation Florence May said, "If it's given to you, the least you can do is help someone else along."

Reservations for the dinner are requested by February 28. Helping Students Cope, CPPD Also Offers Career Counseling, Job Placement

by Bill Duck, Salisbury Daily Times

All your life, someone's been asking you, "What do you want to be when you grow up?"

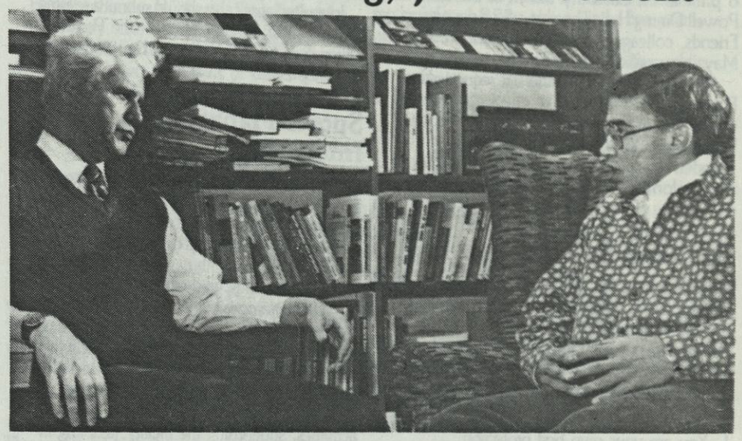
It's your sophomore year in college. You still don't know the answer. You might feel confused, just a bit worried and more than a little anxious.

Robert McBrien has seen it before. As director of the Center of Personal and Professional Development at SSU, McBrien's job is to help make that decision-making process a little more clear. And if emotional states go awry because of stress, he's there to help.

SSU has offered counseling services for 20 years. The center came into existence four years ago, and its goal is to help students help themselves to make decisions.

"We're not here to judge anyone," McBrien said. "If a student says, 'I think I'm going to drop out for a year,' their friends and family get all over them. But we say, 'How long have you thought about this?' and find out just how much thought has gone into the decision. It's objective questioning that can help them think it through."

The center offers three areas of service: personal psychological counseling, career development counseling and job placement. The counseling center does not offer clinical psychological counseling, but does try and offer the students suggestions and choices about getting through stressful times, McBrien said. The services are free for students.



John Gutierrez, right, a freshman at Salisbury State, discusses academic options with Robert McBrien, director of the Personal and Professional Development Center.

"It's counseling for students who come up with situations and events that cause disruptions that take away from academic pursuits," he said. "It's ordinary life events that put extra stress on students. We listen to them on a one-to-one basis, and deal with whatever is causing the problem."

It can be as common as a relationship breakup or stress induced by a hard exam. "The most obvious are the ones I call 'stress overload,'" McBrien said. "It can include performance anxiety, where you need to do well in

Dear University Community:

Since the start of the semester, February 3, I have been alerted to seven incidents deemed to be "acts of intolerance." The majority of these acts were directed toward African-American programs and/or students with the remainder aimed at gays and lesbians. The form taken included defacement of event calendars, insulting cartoons, and unsolicited comments and responses to posters. The locations included Chester Hall, the Guerrieri University Center and the Dining Hall. Similar acts have been reported in the past making reference to Asians, Jews and women. Students and faculty alike have been the targets of these inappropriate activities.

Such "acts of intolerance," which make a mockery of liberal education, are categorically unacceptable in the learning community we are seeking to create here on the campus. Our mission at Salisbury includes learning about world cultures, appreciating diversity and respecting individuality. Regardless of recent trends toward Japan-bashing, affirmative action backlash and so forth among the uneducated, it is imperative that the academy take the high road and encourage interactions and behaviors that tolerate individual differences and that create opportunities to discuss differing values, beliefs and attitudes. "Acts of intolerance" do not belong at Salisbury State University and I am asking each member of the University family to be sensitive to the needs and actions of others and to diligently pursue the goals of toleration and responsible behavior.

Thank you for your serious concern regarding this matter.

Sincerely yours,

Thomas E. Bellavance

'Grapes of Wrath' Inaugurates New Fulton Theatre

The University's new Fulton Hall Theatre opens its doors to the public on Friday, March 6, with its inaugural presentation, the award-winning stage interpretation of John Steinbeck's "The Grapes of Wrath."

With state-of-the-art lighting and sound equipment and flexible stage and seating arrangements, the intimate black box theatre adjusts to accommodate up to 200 people. It is located in the west wing of Fulton Hall, a $16-million complex which opened this month.

SSU Director of Theatre Paul Pfeiffer feels the stage version of Steinbeck's novel is an excellent vessel for launching the University's new theatre space. "'The Grapes of Wrath' provides some exciting acting challenges for our students. Even with a cast of more than 30, most will perform two or more roles in this epic story. Second, the novel is a celebrated piece of American literature and history. Finally, 'The Grapes of Wrath' cherishes the human spirit in ways that make it particularly relevant today," he said.

When the stage interpretation opened on Broadway in 1990 Frank Rich, drama critic for the New York Times, called it "majestic." Winning

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

Sea Gull Sports Roundup by Paul Ohanian

The men's basketball team, ranked second in the nation, completed its most successful regular season ever with wins over Frostburg State and Shenandoah last weekend. The Gulls improved to 24-1 on the year, setting a record for most wins in a season, and also extended their record for consecutive wins to 23. Additionally, Saturday's 79-53 victory over Frostburg was the 300th victory of Coach Ward Lambert's 22-year career.

SSU, which also finished a perfect 10-0 in conference games, will now host the Eastern States Athletic Conference Tournament, beginning on Thursday. The Gulls have a bye until Friday's semifinal round, at which time they will play the winner of Thursday's Cabrini-Shenandoah game. SSU will play at 7:30 p.m. on Friday.

The women's team clinched a spot in the ESAC Women's Tournament with a 68-63 win over Shenandoah on Sunday. Jen Boone scored 13 points and Sandi Schultz hit two free throws with eight seconds left to seal the victory. The women meet host Marywood in Friday's opening round. A victory would move the Gulls into Saturday's championship game against either Frostburg State or Allentown.

The baseball team starts playing for keeps on Sunday when it hosts Rutgers Camden at 1 p.m. Coach Deane Deshon will begin his 29th year at the helm, and has an early season schedule loaded with home games. The Gulls play their first nine ballgames at home before leaving for their spring trip through the South on March 21.

The men's lacrosse team also opens its season on Wednesday, March 4. The Gulls, 15-1 last year while finishing as the NCAA Division III runnerup, travel to Western Maryland College for the opener.

All campus groups are invited to participate in a poster contest based on the theme of sportsmanship. Posters, which should be delivered to the Campus Recreation Office, will be displayed on the first floor of the Maggs Center during the week and are a great way to also publicize campus organizations. Public announcements will be made during basketball, baseball and lacrosse games scheduled during the week to encourage good sportsmanship. A sportsmanship "Quote of the Day" will be displayed on the Maggs message board. A captain's roundtable will also be organized where each varsity team will have its captains available to discuss the current state of ethics and fair play within our University and conference.

Among artists featured in "Children's Book Illustrations" are Robert McCloskey, author and illustrator of the Caldecott Medal-winning book, "Make Way for Ducklings." Also represented are Edgar Parin and Ingri Mortensen d'Aulaire, Kate Seredy, Don Freeman, Ruth Gannet and Mary Villarejo.

The works are from the May Massee Collection at Emporium (KS) State University. Massee was considered one of the foremost editors in the field of children's book publishing. The collection, comprised of books she published as well as original art works, manuscripts and memorabilia, was organized as a memorial to Massee after her death in 1966. "Children's Book Illustrations" is toured by ExhibitsUSA. ExhibitsUSA is a national division of Mid-America Arts Alliance, a non-profit regional arts organization, whose partners include the state arts agencies of Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas; the National Endowment for the Arts; and private contributors. The Atrium Gallery is located next to the bookstore in the Guerrieri Center. It is open daily from 11 a.m.- 4 p.m. Special emphasis is put on one-person shows and student exhibits. There is no charge for admission. For additional information about this and other exhibits call 543-6100.

Wind Sinfonia At OC Conference

The SSU Wind Sinfonia has been invited to appear at the Maryland Music Educators In-Service Conference on March 7 in Ocean City.

The invitation was extended to the ensemble by the Maryland Music Educators Association and the Collegiate Music Educators National Conference of Maryland. Wind Sinfonia conductor, Dr. Richard L. Johnson, said, "the Wind Sinfonia will share performing responsibilities with the Peabody Conservatory of Music Wind Ensemble in a conducting clinic designed to help improve the conducting and rehearsal skills of undergraduate and graduate music majors who are selected from Maryland."

Johnson added, "In terms of recruitment and exposure in Maryland, this is a very important step for this ensemble. Its growth, maturity and strength of performance over the past four years is beginning to afford it exposure and recognition at both regional and statewide levels. To be invited by the MMEA to serve as a clinic ensemble at the state in-service conference is certainly a distinct honor; one that demonstrates the recognition received not only by the ensemble, but by our Department of Music and the Fulton School of Liberal Arts as well. I believe this clearly reflects this institution's commitment to a philosophy of emphasizing excellence in education and teaching as exemplified through quality of performance."

"The Wind Sinfonia is presently preparing a variety standard and hallmark compositions from which selected conducting participants will have the opportunity to rehearse with the two ensembles in a clinic/workshop setting," said Johnson. "Each conducting participant will be evaluated and critiqued based on their abilities to convey the musical content of the score to the ensemble via a rehearsal format. The demand on the ensemble to be responsible for the level of performance as well as its ability to be responsive to a variety of student conductors is going to be a challenge to each member's performance skill and musical understanding.

"We will have less than a month to prepare some 15 works for the clinic," said Johnson. "The better prepared the ensemble is, the less the pressure there will be on the conducting participants. It is important that the conducting participants be able to concentrate solely on their own skill development and not have to worry about whether the ensembles perform up to their full potential."

Three of the selected conducting participants are music majors at Salisbury State. Juniors Lisa Dubuque, Niko Iampieri and Donald Plehn have been selected along with three other candidates from Maryland, two whom are graduate students. Each conductor will have approximately 15-20 minutes in front of the ensembles to prepare their chosen selection and receive suggestions as to how to improve their conduction and rehearsal technique. Dubuque, Iampieri and Plehn are private conducting students of Johnson and have completed one semester of conducting class as part of their degree requirements at Salisbury State.

Salisbury Paleochannel Talk March 1

Water, water everywhere, nor any drop to drink (Samuel Coleridge, "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner").

Water battles have intensified in the Southwest, and aquifers are threatened in Florida and the Midwest. But Wicomico County is blessed with the remarkable Salisbury Paleochannel.

A definitive study of the Salisbury Paleochannel was published by the Maryland Department of Natural Resources in 1972. The two men who carried out the hydrological study and wrote the report are returning to Salisbury for the 20th anniversary of their study. Fred Mack of the Maryland Geological Survey and Wilbert Thomas of the U.S. Geological Survey will make a presentation on the paleochannel at the Guerrieri University Center at 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, March 1. Their visit is being jointly sponsored by the Henson School of Science and Technology and the Wicomico Environmental Trust (WET).

"Since conventional economics excludes nature's contribution, no realistic dollar value has been assigned to this immensely valuable resource," said Dr. Ben Fusaro, president of WET. Wicomico County currently pumps over one million gallons of water per day from this underground channel. "If we have the common sense to take the proper precautions to protect the paleochannel, this abundant source of clean, free-flowing water will supply the requirements of the county indefinitely," Fusaro added.

Mack and Thomas, who carried out crucial pumping tests over 20 years ago, will give some background on the extraordinary underground river.

Nursing Scholarship Available

The Institute of Retired Persons is awarding a scholarship to a graduating senior nursing student whose permanent home is in one of the lower Eastern Shore counties.

The student must demonstrate scholarship with at least a 3.0 GPA and show evidence of involvement in campus and community activities. Interested candidates may pick up applications from the Nursing Department in the Power Professional Building.

Deadline for submitting completed applications is March 16.

Adele Terrell

National Speaker On Prejudice and Violence Here March 9

On Monday, March 9, the Salisbury State University Program Board presents Adele Terrell, lecturer and program director of the National Institute Against Prejudice and Violence. Terrell will speak at 7 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center.

The National Institute Against Prejudice and Violence is dedicated to the elimination of violence and intimidation based on prejudice and bigotry. It is the only national center that deals exclusively with the study of and responses to ethnoviolence. Its primary objective is to promote a better understanding of the causes and effects of prejudice, intergroup conflict and violence, and to foster their reduction.

This 60-minute lecture is sure to provoke increased awareness in issues not only of race but gender and religion as well. "Crimes of hate can be eliminated but only with a knowledge and respect for diversity," said Monica Moody, SSPB coordinator.

Terrell's presentation is free and open to the public.

Racial Prejudice Subject of Conference

On Thursday, March 5, the Washington Regional Task Force on Campus Prejudice will conduct a one-day conference, "Bigotry 202: Developing a Proactive Campus Approach," at the University of Maryland College Park. The conference is designed to assist universities in developing campuswide plans to respond effectively to interracial and intercultural tensions.

The Office of the Dean of Students has made arrangements for transportation. Students, faculty or staff interested in attending or in obtaining more information may call Barry King at 543-6080. Registration deadline is Tuesday, February 18.

a course and you study and get a bad grade on the first exam. We counsel them in stress management skills and actually teach them study skills," McBrien said.

The center is also involved in a Universitywide "psychological first aid" system that helps the school deal with problems involving a number of students. The murder of SSU freshman Heather Miller in September actually brought few extra students into the counseling center, and McBrien attributes that to the actions of the University immediately after Miller's death.

"There was very effective intervention that night (of the murder) and the following day, including the memorial service," McBrien said. "More than 15 professional staff members were in direct contact with any and all students caught up in that.

"There are peaks and valleys (of emotions) after an event like this, and we're here during the periods of intensity later on. There can be aftershocks weeks and months later. All of us had someone from the Wilderness Freshman Orientation group (of which Miller was a member), probably 50 students, who came by and told us thanks."

Stress can arise from lack of a major as well as from traumatic events. It's not uncommon for students to be less than focused on a career path as they start college, and many will feel stressed out a few semesters later when they still haven't made a choice. "I know more than 40 percent of the incoming freshmen class are unsure of their major," McBrien said.

"I'm beginning to think there is a major called 'I don't have a clue' because that's an answer I get a lot. College is four to five years of discovery and excitement, but feelings of floundering are not good."

To help, the center offers career counseling. It's not just a matter of aptitude tests and lists of careers. It's offering students information about options they might not otherwise consider, McBrien said.

"The other side of the coin from 'I have no clue' is 'How to I get into medical college?' Well I once thought I wanted to be a scientist, and then I got wiped out in organic chemistry. I took a course in another discipline and found out I wanted more. In general terms, we have students learn more about the major they have selected and more about the work a person does in that field. We have a top-notch occupational psychiatrist, who knows the ins and outs and the trends, and helps the students find out more."

Once students survive exams and study for a major is almost completed, there is the not-so-simple task of finding a job. "We provide a credentials folder, so that students can have their credentials sent out to several employers at once.

"We have many who take their first interview right here, and have counseling on writing resumes and interviewing," he said.

It's a tough job, but hopefully, the staff will see the students graduate within the normal four or five years. "Our mission is to provide the students with the resources to succeed at the reason for being here—academic success," McBrien said. "I got a Christmas card from a student I helped with a public speaking problem. She wrote, 'The course I dreaded turned into a wonderful experience.' That's why we're here."

Attention May Graduates

Commencement Exercises will be held on Saturday, May 23, at 10 a.m. in the Wicomico Youth & Civic Center. Detailed information will be mailed to graduates at a later date.

rave reviews, this uniquely American drama was nominated for eight Tony Awards, and voted the prestigious best play of the year, Broadway's highest honor.

Frank Galati, who adapted the novel to the stage, also received a Tony for his direction. In 1988 Galati had been nominated for an Oscar for his work on the screenplay, "The Accidental Tourist."

Steinbeck's masterwork has had a distinguished history. In spite of criticism (Rich called it "one of the worst great novels ever written") it maintains an on-going fascination for readers. Winning the Pulitzer Prize in 1939, it "is one of the rare novels that moved conscience to social action," said Newsweek critic Jack Kroll. The book has been translated into 40 languages. John Ford's 1940 film version starring Henry Fonda is a movie classic.

By now the story and cinematic images of the Joads, an Oakie family dispossessed from their Dust Bowl farm during the Depression, have permanently entered the American mythos. Heading west in an old jalopy truck to the green valleys of California, the Joads desperately move from one wretched campsite to another. Their harassment by cops and goons, and exploitation at starvation wages by big agricultural combines, lead to the eventual disintegration of their family.

After the 1920s, a decade of greed and dog-eat-dog boom which many historians believe led to the Depression of the '30s, Steinbeck rebelled at the idea that individualism and material success were the only elements of the American Dream. His novel was about a nation in search of itself and what Americans really valued, Rich said.

According to Mimi Kramer, critic for the New Yorker, "Steinbeck's epic is an adult treatment of the phenomenon of dispossession; what the Joads' gradual defeat consists of is a central fact of American life and culture: the breakup of the family."

But more than despair is at work here. According to historian Alan Brinkley, "Analysts of the 1930s have long struggled to understand why in the face of such misery and distress the United States experienced so little genuine upheaval...such modest violence. The most frequent answer has been the power of individualism—the tendency of desperate people to blame themselves for their problems, America's cultural inability to think in collective terms.

"But Steinbeck suggests another answer to that question.... He scorned the Marxist dream.... He embraced, instead, another social vision, no less deeply rooted in American culture than the individualistic ethos with which it competed. It rested on an almost romantic notion of the natural goodness of 'the people'... that running like a river beneath the surface of the nation's cold, hard individualistic culture lies a spirit of community that, once tapped, might redeem us all.

"Steinbeck believed his people to be—part of a communal soul that will save America from cruelty and selfishness when other gods, secular and religious, have failed," said Rich.

Tom Joad, played by Fonda in the movie, tells his mother when he is forced to leave her, "Well, maybe a fella ain't got a soul of his own, but on'y a piece of a big one—an' then—then it don' matter. Then I'll be all aroun'. I'll be ever'where—wherever you look. Wherever they's a fight so hungry people can eat, I'll be there. Wherever they's a cop beatin' up a guy, I'll be there. An' when our folks eat the stuff they raise an' live in the houses they build—why, I'll be there. See?"

At the Broadway opening in 1990, some of the audience seemed to be weeping. Rich thought not out of sadness, but because the play is true to Steinbeck: "It leaves one feeling that the generosity of spirit that he saw in a brutal country is not so much lost as waiting once more to be found."

The SSU production will include the critically acclaimed soundtrack of the New York production composed by Michael Smith. Set and lighting design are by Jerry Patt. Costumes are by Pfeiffer. Leading the cast are Kristine Lococo Adams as Ma Joad, David Hyland as Tom and Heather Campbell as Rose of Sharon.

Performances are Friday-Saturday, March 6-7, and Wednesday-Saturday, March 11-14 at 8 p.m., with a matinee on Sunday, March 8, at 2 p.m. The Fulton Hall Theatre is directly behind Holloway Hall Auditorium. A Center of Peace in Fulton Hall

Intern Scott Christensen discusses different ways to avoid a conflict with a fourth grade class at Fruitland Primary. Christensen is an intern with the newly formed Center for Teaching Peace. (Photo by Rick Maloof.)

On a recent Monday, students at two different Maryland schools learned about conflict in two dramatically different events. In Baltimore, a police officer was shot when he intervened in a fight between two teenagers.

That same morning, in Wicomico County, fourth graders learned that you can stop a fight before it starts. Interns from the newly opened Center for Teaching Peace at SSU are visiting area elementary and middle schools to help children learn to avoid fighting. For fourth graders at Fruitland Intermediate, that meant finding out what it's like to be on both sides of a conflict.

Suppose you loaned your Gameboy to a friend and while it was at their house, little brother broke it. While that may seem like a small problem to an adult, it can create great conflict for fourth graders. Losing a favortie—and expensive—toy can get a child angry, and might get him in trouble. It's easy for a child to forget that fighting won't bring the toy back.

In a lesson on resolving conflicts, fourth graders at Fruitland Intermediate studied the

The Gulls begin the NCAA Tournament riding a 25-game winning streak, the nation's longest, and are coming off last weekend's Eastern States Athletic Conference Tournament title. Salisbury defeated Allentown, 104-89, in the championship game. Sophomore Dameon Ross scored 25 points in the final and 57 in two tournament games to earn the MVP award. Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

'The Grapes of Wrath' Opens Friday

"I was filled...with certain angers...at people who were doing injustices to other people." The potent simplicity of John Steinbeck's statement is reflected in the stirring stage adaptation of his novel, "The Grapes of Wrath," which took Broadway by storm in 1990.

Steinbeck's "certain angers" about the injustices done a family in search of a home and honest work is "one of the most urgent and dramatic stories ever told by an American writer," said Jack Kroll, Newsweek critic.

Adapted for the theatre by Frank Galati, "The Grapes of Wrath" received eight nominations for the Tony Award, and voted best play of the year, Broadway's highest honor. The only stage version ever authorized by the Steinbeck family, it received the ringing endorsement of Elaine Steinbeck, the novelist's widow. "My husband would love what they have done with his book," she said when the play opened.

On Friday, March 6, the University spotlights its new Fulton Hall Theatre with the area premiere of this epic American classic.

The "Grapes of Wrath" is performed Friday-Saturday, March 6-7, and Wednesday-Saturday, March 11-14, at 8 p.m., with a matinee on Sunday, March 8, at 2 p.m. in Fulton Hall Theatre. Admission is free to SSU students, faculty and staff. For more information including reservations, call the theatre box office at 543-6228.

What if the Earth Could Talk

by Agata Liszkowska,
Student Activities and Organizations

Wellness Day has become a time-honored tradition at SSU. Last year, the sixth annual event was a great success. Many students, faculty and staff enjoyed the performance, free screenings, Crystal Light samples, a variety of foods, and other activities. The participants included many of SSU's student groups and university departments, as well as community agencies and organizations. The theme last year was "Break Safety."

This year's Wellness Day promises to be just as much fun. Keeping in focus one of the most important issues of the '90s- preserving the fragile and endangered environment of the earth- the events of this day will focus on our planet. We can only save her through the collective and unified efforts of each inhabitant. The earth is quiet every time we start a car, turn on the A.C., or drop a candy wrapper, but what would we hear if she could talk?

We are organizing this Wellness Day to help us realize what jeopardy we are in, and how to help ourselves. It will take place on Monday, May 4, from 11:30 a.m.-3 p.m. and will be held out and inside the Guerrieri University Center. If anyone would like to help organize this event, or has any questions or ideas, please call Jennifer Berkman at 543-6309, or me at 543-6313.

Remember, think clean!

Salisbury Symphony Orchestra Music director, Dr. Thomas G. Elliot, is "tuning up" for an evening of dining and dancing Friday, March 27 at 7 p.m. in the Guerrieri Center at Salisbury State University.

Savor the Symphony March 27

With so many fine restaurants in the area, how do you pick just one? How do you decide between fancy and fun?

After a gourmet feast, wouldn't it be great to go dancing? You know, something really elegant, like a symphony orchestra, but with songs you can dance to. You can.

Savor the Symphony is back.

The Salisbury Symphony Orchestra at Salisbury State University presents an evening of fine food and music Friday, March 27, at 7 p.m. in the Guerrieri University Center.

The menu will have something to tempt every taste. Restaurants are still signing up to participate, but the list already includes the Garden and the Sea, the Plump Parrot, Phillips, Nacho Pete's and Frank's Place. In the kitchen at English's the chef is preparing gourmet desserts; and at Cheers and Pepsi, they are bringing out their best to serve with this great food. Like their colleagues, SSU's chefs are looking forward to Savor the Symphony as their night to shine.

At Savory the Symphony you can enjoy chamber music as you dine. But that isn't all. Dr. Thomas G. Elliot, music director for the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra, hopes to have created the perfect evening out.

"Just when you think you've had a wonderful evening," he promises, "it gets even better. We bring out the full orchestra with music to dance to." Pop standards like "The Shadow of Your Smile," songs from our favorite movies and shows, like "Over the Rainbow," Latin music, Viennese waltzes, and even a little Scott Joplin. The menu for music is as eclectic as the feast it follows.

Savor the Sympony is a special night, not only for those who come out to enjoy the dinner and dancing, but also for the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra. The musicians are classically trained. In fact they are in the midst of rehearsing the beautiful but demanding Brahms Requiem, which they'll perform at their April concert. So Savor the Symphony is their chance to have a little fun.

The SSO is also pleased to have the support of area restaurants for the fundraiser. All of the restaurants donate their food, and staff to serve it. "I think they have as much fun as we do," said Elliot. "But we really appreciate their generosity. We couldn't do it without them."

Tickets for Savor the Symphony are $30 (with a $5 discount for SSO or Gold Pass patrons) and are available at all Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council locations or by calling the Music Department at 543-6385. If tickets remain, they will also be available at the door. Deadline for phone orders is March 16.

Openings exist in almost every area of the humanities, social sciences, physical sciences, the arts, and applied fields such as business, journalism and law. Many offerings throughout the program allow scholars to propose their own lecturing or research projects.

The basic eligibility requirements for a Fulbright award are U.S. citizenship, and a Ph.D. or comparable professional qualifications. For certain fields such as the fine arts or TESOL, the terminal degree in the field may be sufficient. For lecturing awards, university or college teaching experience is expected. Language skills are needed for some countries, but most lecturing assignments are in English. There is no limit on the number of Fulbright grants a scholar may hold and former grantees may reapply.

All students, employees and professors of SSU are encouraged to attend to inform state government how it can better meet the campus's needs. Any issue, big or small, may be brought and people are invited to bring recommendations as well as complaints.

This is your opportunity to break the red tape. All citizens' comments will be recorded by cabinet members. These will then be sent directly to the Governor's desk as a direct line to the top. The cabinet is comprised of members of the SSU community. SWAC's Art Directory Listings Sought

The Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council (SWAC) has begun the task of compiling a directory of local artists and art organizations which will serve as a resource tool for the community. As one of the main arts service agencies on the Eastern Shore, SWAC receives numerous requests for information on the arts and on local artists. The formal creation of an arts directory will enable the Arts Council to respond to inquiries in a more comprehensive manner.

Categories in the directory will include arts-related businesses, not-for-profit organizations, artists, performers and entertainers on the Delmarva Peninsula. The visual arts, crafts, dance, drama, music, writing and other classifications will be among the many listings in the local arts community. All listings will be free to the artists.

The directory will provide an efficient means to determine and locate art-related organizations and individuals. It is planned that listings in the directory will be updated on an annual basis.

"The arts directory will help establish an informative and comprehensive network between the local arts community and the general public," said Bonnie Nordstrom, coordinator of the directory. "Production of the arts directory will promote the local artists and art organizations, while serving as a helpful resource for the general public."

Any Eastern Shore individuals, ensemble or organization interested in a listing in the directory may call 543-ARTS for more information. Listings should be submitted by Monday, March 16.

Computer Bowl March 6

Undaunted by the computer virus named "Michelangelo," which is timed to spring to life on computers across the nation on Friday, March 6, to commemorate Michaelangelo's birthday, 90 high school students and coaches will arrive at the Guerrieri University Center that day to participate in Salisbury State University's third annual Eastern Shore Computer Bowl. The Computer Bowl, a competition in computer literacy and computer programming, is co-sponsored by Delmarva Power and the Henson School of Science and Technology.

All Maryland and Virginia Eastern Shore School districts have been invited to participate, and 19 teams have registered for the event. According to Mary Lou Malone, associate chair of the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science, and director of the 1992 Eastern Shore Computer Bowl, "It is a wonderful opportunity for high school students who are interested in programming computers to gather on our campus for a day of challenge, creativity and teamwork."

Each high school is permitted to bring two teams of four students to the Computer Bowl. Students will be given two tests: an individual test, which covers basic concepts of computers and computer programming; and a programming test, which is taken as a team effort.

The programming test, a test in problem solving and algorithm development, contains 21 programming problems. Points are awarded based on the number of problems solved and the difficulty of those problems. The programs will be judged by faculty from the Henson School and volunteers from SSU's Computer Center.

"Today so many people 'use' computers in their personal and professional lives," said Malone, "that many have become rather blasé about the power which they have at their fingertips. However, few people appreciate the organization, effort and skill which go into designing and developing the software which we take so much for granted." This year's Computer Bowl will challenge the teams to design, develop, implement and test more than 20 programs in a two-hour period.

While students compete in the programming segment, their coaches will attend two sessions presented by Dr. David Parker, associate professor in the SSU Department of Mathematics and Computer Science. Parker's first session will focus on algorithm development, the second session on visualizing algorithm behavior at runtime.

Following the programming competition, the students, coaches and SSU faculty and student volunteers will be given a buffet luncheon, followed by an awards presentation. Delmarva Power, co-sponsor of the event, will award $1,500 in cash prizes to the top three teams to be used toward the purchase of computer hardware and software for their high schools. Each of these teams will receive a plaque, and the members of those teams will recieve savings bonds. Each participant will receive an official Eastern Shore Computer Bowl T-shirt and a certificate of participation.

"The Computer Bowl is a wonderful example of the cooperative efforts of businesses, schools and universities to promote educational experiences for our young people," said Malone.

According to Peggy Brinkley, communications representative of Delmarva Power, "We wanted to show our concern for the quality of education in the community we serve. By sponsoring this competition we are helping to enhance and encourage computer literacy, which is valuable in today's job market."

Regional Technology Council Active

In January 1992 the Lower Eastern Shore Regional Technology Council (RTC) held Round Tables in Somerset and Worcester counties focusing on examining the vital cooperative efforts between business and education. Also, a half-day conference on this issue was held in Wicomico County (jointly sponsored by the RTC, the Greater Salisbury Area Chamber of Commerce and the Wicomico County Board of Education). The ultimate objective of these meetings was to determine what can be done to maximize mutually beneficial interaction of business, education and the community.

At the Somerset and Worcester County Round Tables, education administrators presented an overview of existing business/education partnerships. Information on a new state organization, CREST (Combining Resources in Engineering, Science and Technology), was also communicated. Open discussions followed emphasizing the value of "human resource interaction as a key to cooperative learning" and ways in which business and education can foster this interaction.

At the Wicomico Conference of Business Leaders and Educators the keynote speaker was Charles Zimmerman, director of education and training for Westinghouse. Zimmerman emphasized that "business and education need to be a team working toward a common goal." He said that strategies need to be developed to interest the community and business to become involved in the education process.

In two workshops that followed, on business partnerships and parental involvement, specific projects were discussed by panelists from Pepsi Cola Bottling Co., Second National FSB, Perdue Farms, Inc., Junior Achievement, Grumman Electronics, Salisbury Communications and a delegate from the state legislature. "You Can Make a Difference" is the theme of letters sent out by the Salisbury Chamber of Commerce to employers to implement company programs to encourage parental involvement. Some companies provide time for workers to volunteer in the schools through the "adopt a school" program. Others hold self-esteem seminars for employees.

The conference ended with an overview panel discussion in which panelists from C&P Telephone Co., the Regional Technology Council, Dresser Industries, Inc., and Wicomico County Board of Education all agreed on the need for increased communication and cooperation to create more business/education partnerships. Dr. Evelyn Holman, Superintendent of Schools for Wicomico County said, "Our goal is to have students ready." Parental responsibility and support from business are needed to achieve this goal.

The Regional Technology Council is planning follow-up activities in all three counties to develop detailed ideas and plans for new mutually beneficial partnerships between technology businesses and education.

The Lower Eastern Shore Regional Technology Council (RTC), operating from the Perdue School of Business and serving Somerset, Wicomico and Worcester counties, was established in 1990 by the Maryland Department of Economic and Employment Development, Office of Technology Development, to provide greater focus on the technology issues faced by businesses in the lower Shore region.

An orientation meeting for the Manufacturing Awareness Project, sponsored jointly by the Lower Eastern Shore Regional Technology Council and the Maryland Foundation for Manufacturing Excellence, was recently held at Salisbury State University. James Tebay (left) president of the Foundation for Manufacturing Excellence, presented the project overview to invited personnel from public school systems in Somerset, Wicomico and Worcester counties. Also in attendance was (from left) Bill Middleton, assistant superintendent, Wicomico County Public Schools, Katherine Oliver, assistant superintendent, Division of Career and Technology, Maryland State Department of Education, and Warren Keller, director, Lower Eastern Shore Regional Technology Council.

Waters in Greece for Poetry Conference

Dr. Michael Waters, SSU creative writing professor, was keynote speaker for an international conference on "Contemporary Greek and American Poetry," recently held in Athens, Greece. He is currently on sabbatical and has been in residence at the Virginia Center for the Creative Arts.

While in Greece Waters gave two lectures titled "The Education of a Poet" and "The Creative Process" and two readings from his own work at the University of Athens and the A.D. Gallery in downtown Athens.

Some two dozen Greek poets and critics as well as American poet John Balaban gave lectures and readings at campuses of the University of Athens during the two-week conference.

The University was co-sponsor along with the Greek Ministry of Culture.

This was Waters' seventh visit to Greece, where he has written much of his poetry on the Aegean island of Ios. During 1981-82 he was visiting professor of American literature at the University of Athens.

SWAC's Fundraiser Is Murder

Gangsters, gun molls and gumshoes are on the menu for Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council's upcoming fundraiser, "March Mystery Madness"—and so is murder.

On Saturday, March 28, the Liverpool Flying Club will step back in time to become a 1920s speakeasy. Give the password at the door to enter another era. Inside, big band music will be playing, flappers will doing the Charleston, the hooch will be flowing, and shady deals will be under consideration in the corners.

In addition to the atmosphere of the '20s, those attending this party will get hot hors d'oeuvres and cabaret entertainment—and they'll also get a chance to take part in a puzzling murder. Who will be the victim? And who will commit the crime? It will be up to the party-goers to figure it out.

"With the recent success of 'Bugsy' and the recurring fascination many people have with the Prohibition era," said Steve Pusey, SWAC board member and chair of the March Mystery Madness committee, "as well as the growing popularity of murder mystery parties, we thought it would be a lot of fun to combine the two things. It's a theme party, it's a mystery, it's a benefit for a good cause."

Twilley & Rommel are serving as corporate sponsors of the event. Local favorites Class Acts II will be supplying the entertainment—and the murder.

The party begins on Saturday, March 28, at 6 p.m. and the case should be solved by 9 p.m., but everyone's invited to stick around afterwards and continue the party.

Tickets for the event are $15 per person, which includes food and entertainment; a cash bar also will be available. Proceeds from admission will benefit the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council. Tickets can be purchased at SWAC's office at the Civic Center, or at the Liverpool Flying Club on South Salisbury Boulevard.

selected to the all-tournament squad.

The news wasn't as bright for the women's basketball team. They fell to Marywood, 78-48, in the semifinals of the ESAC Tournament on Friday in Scranton, PA. SSU finished its season at 9-14 overall under second-year coach Bridget Benshetler.

In other sports news, Don Rera was the opening day hero for the baseball team last Sunday as the junior righthander hurled eight scoreless innings to lead SSU to a 6-0 win over Rutgers-
Camden. Rera allowed just seven singles and struck out four before giving way to Jeff Garrett, who preserved the shutout with a scoreless ninth inning. Steve Wooters finished three for five with three RBIs to lead the offense.

Coach Jim Berkman's men's lacrosse squad, ranked fifth in the USILA preseason poll, opened its season at Western Maryland on Wednesday. The Gulls will meet Roanoke, ranked 11th, on Sunday in a game at Loyola High School in Baltimore. The contest is the first half of a doubleheader sponsored by Lax World Sporting Goods and WIYY (98 Rock) Radio. Ohio Wesleyan plays Gettysburg in the second game. SSU opens its home schedule on Wednesday at 3 p.m. against Ohio Wesleyan. The Gulls downed OWU 18-12 in the national semifinals last year.

problem of the broken toy. First, they talked about fighting and its good and bad consequences. Then, lined up in pairs, they took turns playing the toy owner and the borrower. For part of the lesson, the child playing the borrower was permitted only to listen to what his or her partner had to say. Afterward, the students talked about what happened.

"I was angry that he broke my toy," one boy offered. "But we decided that his brother would pay me back out of his allowance." Students talked about the time that might take, since the gap between allowance and the cost of high-tech toys can be a wide one. They decided it might be worth the wait to avoid hurting and maybe losing a good friend. Next door, another group of the fourth graders is talking about brotherhood and its opposites. While the boys and girls are a bit tentative in giving examples of good, they seem to have no shortage of examples of bad. One boy mimics being stabbed: he groans, sticks his tongue out and flops over in his chair. His audience laughs. For him it's a joke, but many teachers are concerned that violence is becoming more and more acceptable to children.

While conflicts are a problem in the classroom and can disrupt lessons, tight school budgets have little room for special programs. Fortunately for area teachers, the chairman of SSU's Sociology Department had the desire—and the contacts—to help.

Dr. C. Phillip Bosserman helped arrange for Colman McCarthy, founder of the Center for Teaching Peace in Washington, D.C., to give an inservice program on teaching conflict resolution. Out of that workshop, a satellite center was founded at SSU, funded by the same grant that supports the Washington Center.

The local center opened just last month, but according to Wicomico School Superintendent Evelyn Holman it has already become a valuable resource for area teachers and counselors. Associate Director Joan Maloof says that assemblies and class presentations have been scheduled for area elementary and middle schools. A special workshop is planned for students at the Alternative School.

Holman says that the lessons the center can offer will be a great help to educators. "We're concerned that some children have no skills for resolving conflicts," she said. The help provided by the center will fit in with a values program that is being developed for Wicomico schools.

Dr. Sharon Rubin, dean of SSU's Fulton School of Liberal Arts, finds that the center is a natural part of the University's mission. "Liberal arts studies have historically been interested in the ways in which people solve problems: in sociology, philosophy, literature.

"This is a wonderful opportunity to bridge thoughtful consideration of those issues with what's going on in our local community," she added.

Having spent years devoted to finding peaceful solutions to contemporary problems, Bosserman says the center is the fulfillment of a life-long dream. His department has begun offering a peace studies program and students will develop their studies through internships at the center. He hopes that ultimately, the center will serve not only educators but businesses and community groups as well. "Any kind of group that needs help managing conflict," he said, "and anyone who wants to develop a program for teaching conflict management can come to us for assistance."

In the meantime, the center is concentrating on the youngest problem-solvers: children who will one day grow up to face adult-sized conflicts. And today they're learning to stop and think; to identify what the real problem is; and to negotiate a solution they can live with.

SEA GULL SPORTS ROUNDUP

Sea Gulls Vie for Final Four Berth

Two games from the "Final Four." That's the position the men's basketball team finds itself in as it prepares to host the sectional tournament this Friday and Saturday in the Maggs Center. SSU will play Salem State at 8 p.m. on Friday, following the 6 p.m. opening game between Eastern Connecticut State and Jersey City State. Friday's two winners will advance to Saturday's 7 p.m. championship game. The survivor from that contest advances to Wittenburg University in Ohio on March 20 for the national semifinals.

The Gulls advanced to the "Sweet Sixteen" round by posting a 107-99 come-from-behind overtime win over visiting Kean College last Saturday. Trailing by 14 points midway through the second half, Salisbury knotted the score at 94 after regulation play, then scored the first 10 points of the extra session to win its 26th straight game of the season. Dameon Ross pumped in a game-high 30 points for the Maroon and Gold, while Andre Foreman added 28 points and 15 rebounds. Bret Grebowsky converted six of six free throws in overtime and finished with 11 points. Kevin Cromer tallied 12 and Ed Farrell had 10.

Advance tickets for this weekend's games, available at the information desk in the Guerrieri University Center through Friday afternoon, must be purchased as a set for both nights. Individual game tickets will not be sold. Les Lutz Honored with Longwood Award

Les Lutz, director of horticulture, has been awarded the prestigious Lois Paul Memorial Award from Longwood Gardens. Presented every two years, this is only the fourth time such an honor has been given.

According to David Foresman, student program co-ordinator of the famed gardens which is located near Wilmington, DE, Lutz is one of the top graduates of Longwood's Professional Gardener Training Program (PGTP). Lutz is also highly respected by his peers in the horticulture profession, Foresman said.

The PGTP, a competitive program based on European models, has only graduated 125 students in its 22 years of existence, and many professionals consider the PGTP to be the nation's premiere ornamental horticulture training program.

Paul was a founder of the PGTP in 1970. "She was a very inspirational individual who always left a lasting impression on everyone she met," Foresman said. One of the few women trained in horticulture in the 1930s, she ultimately headed Longwood's educational division which includes the PGTP. She freely gave of her time to both professionals, students and laymen, and was a leading figure in horticulture in the Delaware Valley. She died in 1985.

Longwood's Professional Gardeners Alumni Association established the award in her memory. Nominees must have both a distinguished professional career and extensive community involvement in horticulture.

Following graduation from PGTP in 1976, Lutz was employed by Longwood Gardens for eight years as curator of bonsai. He then worked 2 1/2 years at the New York Botanical Gardens as conservatory manager before assuming his current position at SSU.

Under his leadership the University's grounds have earned a reputation for excellence. Last year they received a perfect 10 rating by state maintenance inspectors, the first ever given to a Maryland institution. This year the campus is expected to receive designation as an arboretum by the American Association of Botanical Gardens and Arboreta. Lutz also instituted a successful recycling program on campus, the first on any state university in Maryland. And he has organized teaching tours of the grounds for both students and community residents.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

Pornography Slide Show Presented by AWARE

On Thursday, March 19, AWARE, the Alliance for Women Attaining Recognized Equality, presents "Sex, Lies, and Pornography." The presentation is a pornography slide show designed to raise awareness about the degradation which is present in pornography.

Although most people have an idea of what pornography is about, many have not been exposed to actual pornographic material or have not had an opportunity to openly discuss the implications pornography has in society; therefore, AWARE feels it is important that people become informed of the realities of pornography.

Since the slide show is explicit, disturbing to some, and one of the aims of the presentation is to bring about a discussion about pornography, AWARE asks that if one chooses to come to the show one also remain for the discussion.

"Sex, Lies, and Pornography" will be presented at 7 p.m. in Caruthers Hall, room 105. The slide show is about 90 minutes long; the discussion is expected to last 30 minutes to an hour. All who are 18-years-old or older and willing to stay for the discussion are welcome.

Sussex County Students Eligible for Scholarship

A new scholarship fund at Salisbury State has already achieved one of the goals of the generous couple who provided the funding.

In searching for a fitting tribute to Clifford and Elizabeth Cahall, daughter Lynn Seidel and her husband Sam have established a scholarship in their name. The fund will benefit Millsboro area students who plan to attend Salisbury State. But more importantly, it will continue a tradition of giving and teaching for which the Cahalls and their family have been well known.

Elizabeth Cahall is a firm believer in the good that comes from giving. "The greatest rewards," she said, "come when you help somebody."

Needless to say, she is thrilled to know that area students will be getting help attending the University. Even without the scholarship, however, college-bound students would be inspired by the Cahall's own lives. While neither Clifford nor Elizabeth were able to afford college when they were young, both went on to become teachers, in their own ways.

Clifford Cahall, who died just over a year ago, was, as Mrs. Cahall put it, "a crack electrician" at Delmarva Power and Light. "He was always the one to teach new employees," she recalled. "He was a wonderful teacher."

For her part, Elizabeth Cahall made up for lost time, earning a college degree the year she turned 52. Then she began her career in what she calls "the most rewarding profession." Thirteen of her 15 years as a teacher were spent working with special education students. She still glows with the warmth of those memories.

"When you're teaching a child a concept, and he's got it," she said, "he looks up and smiles. You just want to give him a big hug. That's the greatest thrill."

Memories like that one aren't all that fill Mrs. Cahall's days now. In addition to her many hobbies, she continues to help out a neighbor, a young girl who is developmentally disabled.

Her parents' lessons in generosity weren't lost on Lynn Seidel. She and her husband have established similar funds in the Salisbury area, benefiting the county library and area colleges.

Former Salisbury City Councilman and insurance executive Sam Seidel says that he feels very strongly about the importance of giving something back to the community. "If enough people do it," he said, "can you imagine how great this community will be for your grandchildren!"

While the Cahall Scholarship Fund is a generous one: $10,000 has been donated to the SSU Foundation to provide a $500 scholarship for each of the four years the student attends SSU; it isn't necessarily easy to come by. It will be awarded to the graduate of a Sussex County high school whose grades, test scores and conduct set him or her above the crowd. Once those requirements have been met, the scholarship will be awarded based on financial need. Students from the Cahall's home district, Indian River, will be given first consideration.

Once they are in school, Cahall Scholars must continue to work hard to qualify for the funds. Students must maintain at least a B (3.0) average in order to keep the scholarship for all four years. Such high standards may sound familiar to the students who shared their classroom with a grandmother when Mrs. Cahall earned her own degree from the University of Delaware in 1965.

"All the kids called me 'Mom'," she remembered. But like other moms, Mrs. Cahall expected her classmates to do their work. "I'd tell them 'Your parents are making a sacrifice to put you here. You should appreciate that and work harder,'" she said.

And if having to perservere to continue to earn the scholarship makes the Cahall scholars a little wiser, so much the better. Mrs. Cahall says that there is another kind of B.S. that is needed as much as a Bachelor's of Science. "You have to have a little bit of barnyard sense," she counseled.

For their part, Sam and Lynn Seidel are pleased to have found the ideal tribute. "I can't think of anything nicer," said Sam Seidel, "than perpetuating a memory and creating something that helps someone else."

Britain Trip Meeting

During the summer semester students and interested members of the community will have the opportunity to travel through Britain.

Tour leader Wayne Ackerson, a history faculty member, lived in England for five years and has since visited the British Isles twice. The tour will cover England, Scotland and Wales by private motor coach.

Ackerson says the strengths of the tour are its variety and cost. "There is literally something for everyone on this tour, from the theatre in Edinburgh, Scotland, to Roman ruins to the Tower of London, and at a cost hard to beat," said Ackerson.

The cost for the 12-day circuit is approximately $1,700 and includes airfare, all transportation, all lodging in first class hotels, tours in several cities and most meals. "You would be quite hard-pressed to take in the same sites for less money," said Ackerson.

Some of the noteworthy sites to be visited include Edinburgh, Stonehenge and Stratford-on-Avon. Several days in London will also be included.

The group is scheduled to leave Salisbury the second week of June and return June 19. An interest meeting will be held on Monday, March 30, at 7:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall, room 103. "The interest thus far has been surprising, and there are not too many spots left. Soon, we'll only be able to take members on a space available basis," said Ackerson.

For more information, call Ackerson in the History Department at 543-6527 or 543-6245.

RTC Examines Maryland Manufacturing Opportunities

An orientation meeting for the Manufacturing Awareness Project, sponsored jointly by the Lower Eastern Shore Regional Technology Council and the Maryland Foundation for Manufacturing Excellence, was held February 19 at SSU. The meeting was part of a statewide Manufacturing Awareness Project involving the Maryland State Department of Education, the Maryland Manufacturer's Association and the Maryland Department of Economic and Employment Development "to provide Maryland middle school students with a coordinated exposure to the attractiveness of manufacturing as a potential career opportunity."

The manufacturing industry in Maryland, once a leader in the field, has been in decline for the past 20 years. Governor William Donald Schaefer addressed the need to reverse this trend in manufacturing in his January 9 speech. He said, "In economic development, I want our state to concentrate on manufacturing." The Maryland Manufacturing Awareness Project is partially focused on educating youth for potential manufacturing careers to create the skilled work force that will be required for an expanding manufacturing sector.

James Tebay, president of the Foundation for Manufacturing Excellence, presented the Project overview to invited personnel from the public school systems in Somerset, Wicomico and Worcester counties to acquaint them with details of the project and to enlist their support. He stressed that manufacturing has changed from the days of authoritarian management to one of total quality management. The character of manufacturing is no longer the "smokestack." In Maryland life science and high tech electronic industries dominate. Skilled workers are and will continue to be in demand. Educators need to be partners in preparing today's students for tomorrow's jobs.

Manufacturers' perspective on this issue was addressed by a number of area manufacturers with specific presentations by Norm Wolske, site manager of Rubberset Co. in Crisfield; Daniel Seman plant manager of MaTech, Inc., in Salisbury; and Mel Carlson, plant manager of Moore Business Forms & Systems in Snow Hill. All agreed that a lack of technically skilled workers already exists in this region. The educational environment needs to be structured to develop a link between school and work. Plant tours were encouraged for both teachers and students.

Katherine Oliver, assistant superintendent at the Division of Career and Technology Education with the Maryland State Department of Education, suggested various activities that educators could use to stimulate student interest in manufacturing careers. A lesson plan accompanied by brochures and posters will be made available for use in the schools as well as a videotape on the history of manufacturing in Maryland. Field trips, research projects, guest speakers, essay writing and formation of a "classroom company" were mentioned as ways to create manufacturing awareness in youth. The winter issue of American Careers magazine will also contain inserts dealing with the topic.

The Lower Eastern Shore Regional Technology Council (RTC), operating from the Perdue School and serving Somerset, Wicomico and Worcester counties, was established in 1990 by the Maryland Department of Economic and Employment Development, Office of Technology Development, to provide greater focus on technology issues faced by businesses in the lower Shore region.

Khazeh To Present Paper

Dr. Kashi Khazeh, associate professor of finance in the Perdue School of Business, recently was notified that his papers, "Small Investor and the Crash of 1987" and "The Effects of the 1987 Stock Market Crash on the Small Investor: Perception vs. Reality," have been selected for presentation at the Eastern Economic Association annual conference in New York and the Midwest Decision Sciences Institute annual meeting in Kansas City, both in March.

The first paper is co-authored by Wayne Decker, professor of management at SSU, and the second by Khazeh and Robert C. Winder, associate professor of finance at Christopher Newport College.

Khazeh developed and continues to advise the SSU student chapter of the Financial Management Association. He established the organization to provide students with the opportunity to begin their professional development while they attend school.

Four nursing students recently went bungee jumping while on tour in New Zealand. They were part of a 17-day trip sponsored by the SSU Nursing and English departments to Australia, New Zealand and Hawaii. The students are (left to right): Jennifer Fitzgerald of Salisbury; Jodi Smith of Seaford, DE; Stacey Lloyd of Berlin; and GiGi Sherman of Boothwyn, PA.

Nursing Students Are 'Awesome' Down Under

The proposed 130-foot jump is not all that impressive to these veterans of New Zealand's "Awesome Foursome," a term describing a package of helicopter rides, jet boating, white-water rafting and bungee jumping.

The four young women—Jennifer Fitzgerald of Salisbury, Stacey Lloyd of Berlin, GiGi Sherman of Boothwyn, PA, and Jodi Smith of Seaford, DE—are all nursing majors. They did their bungee jumping, which has been recorded on videotape, during a winter term trip sponsored by the SSU Nursing and English Departments. During the 17-day trip students mixed pleasure with education in Australia, New Zealand and Hawaii. While the bungee jumps were a highlight of the trip, nursing students also toured hospitals in Australia and New Zealand, visited museums with exhibits on Polynesian and aborigine cultures, and interviewed nursing administrators and health care workers for Dr. Edna Quinn's course, Cultural Considerations in Nursing.

Students in Dr. Tom Erskine's English class attended Australian plays, including the controversial "S.N.A.G." (Sensitive New Age Guy), screened Australian films and had the opportunity to talk with Dr. Laurence Jones, editor of New Zealand Literature and professor of English at Otago University in Dunedin. The students, who had read extensively about European and native cultures during the fall semester, were enthusiastic about seeing how the history and the cultures were reflected in health care systems and in the literature of Australia and New Zealand.

Lloyd, who had a few anxious moments leaving New Zealand when it was discovered that her return ticket home was missing, said, "Nothing upsets me after surviving the bungee jump!" The women were not surprised that none of the SSU male students made the jump.

Fusaro Moderates Math Modeling Session

Dr. Ben Fusaro, professor of mathematics, organized and moderated a symposium on "Mathematical Modeling and Environmental Concerns" at the American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS) annual meeting, recently held in Chicago.

The AAAS is an umbrella group for the sciences and social sciences and according to Fusaro, some 400 representatives of the media reported on this most recent meeting in one form or another.

Fusaro, who chairs the committee on Mathematics and the Environment for the Mathematical Association of America, is a national leader in mathematical modeling and mathematician involvement in environmental issues. His symposium at AAAS was the first by that group on such a topic.

Members of his panel included Richard E. Ewing of the University of Wyoming, James G. Glimm of the State University of New York at Stony Brook, Robert W. McKelvey, from the environmental research lab of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, and Charles Tier from the University of Illinois.

Topics discussed included ground water contamination, species extinction, habitat management and the role of mathematics in environmental sciences.

were paced by Jeff Chenowith and Chris Boyle, who each tallied two goals. The Sea Gulls outshot Roanoke 47-29, but capitalized on just three of 13 man-up situations. SSU's next home game is March 21 when it plays St. Lawrence.

The baseball team stands at 1-2 through the first three games of the season. The diamondmen fell to Kean, 7-4, in 10 innings on Sunday. Starter Don Rera limited the visitors to just two runs through nine innings. Dean Hamburg, Steve Wooters and Frank Del Gaudio had two hits apiece.

The women's softball team opens its season on Saturday with a twin bill against ESAC-foe Cabrini. Salisbury State, under the leadership of first-year coach Susan Muller, is the defending conference champion.

The women's lacrosse squad also debuts this weekend, travelling to Virginia for a pair of contests. SSU meets Cortland State on Saturday in a game hosted by Sweet Briar College, then the Gulls play Sweet Briar on Sunday.

These tours selectively examine the 3,000 species of plants and trees on the 120 acre campus, and are a springboard for discussing Eastern Shore horticulture.

Lutz is committed to professional and community education. Besides Longwood, he has lectured at Walt Disney World, the New York Botanical Gardens and the U.S. Botanic Gardens, as well as many civic and horticultural groups on Delmarva.

He serves on the board of trustees of the Adkins Arboretum near his native Denton, MD, and is vice president of the Newtown Association board in Salisbury, overseeing parks development.

While at Longwood he founded the PGPT Alumni Association and is a past president.

A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

Watercolor by C.D. Clarke

Atrium Exhibit Features Watercolors

A new exhibit, "Watercolors by C.D. Clarke," reflecting the artist's appreciation of the beauty of the Eastern Shore, opens in the Atrium Gallery, located in the Guerrieri University Center on Thursday, April 2.

Chris Clarke, who is originally from Rochester, NY, graduated from Syracuse University with a degree in fine arts. He moved to Maryland in 1982. He has exhibited at the Easton Waterfowl Festival, had his work published in national magazines, such as Rod and Reel and Gray's Sporting Journal, and currently exhibits in galleries in Stony Brook, Long Island, Buffalo, NY and Annapolis.

An avid hunter who now lives on Tangier Sound, Clarke paints the subtle beauty of the marshes and landscapes of the Eastern Shore. These scenes, as well as places he has visited in his travels, are the literal subjects, but in addition to the representional content, these paintings are equally powerful as abstract compositions of vertical or diagonal bands of color. Clarke says that he strives to achieve a clear sense of value from light to dark and an abstract composition is often as important to him as the marshes and creeks he depicts.

Clarke also says his paintings satisfy a need to share the things he feels and sees, and so his Education Receives Grant To Train Middle School Teachers

Dr. Ann Taylor of the School of Education and Professional Studies has received a grant in the amount of $72,000 from the Maryland Higher Education Commission funded by the Dwight D. Eisenhower Mathematics and Science Education Act.

Through the grant SSU will provide a summer training program for 20 middle school science teachers from Wicomico, Somerset and Worcester counties. The project will be implemented through an interdisciplinary team of educators from Salisbury State, the University of Maryland Eastern Shore and science supervisors from area middle schools.

The program is designed to make middle school science teachers aware of critical factors that often interfere with the processing and acquisition of science concepts among minorities and under prepared students who attempt to master science content. Social and cultural factors among minority students in general often result in science being viewed as attainable only for the exceptionally bright students. In-service training with teachers will emphasize the need to correct these deep seated beliefs and replace them with positive attitudes that will aid students in their overall orientation toward science.

Learning styles will be emphasized in the training workshops and will be related to how diverse groups organize, structure and synthesize information for transfer and retention. Taylor believes that more often than not minority students' learning styles are often unaddressed in traditional classrooms.

"This salient factor contributes to the poor performance these students often present," said Taylor. "In-service training will provide in-depth coverage of working successfully with information processing habits of minority students. Additionally, current models that have been successful in addressing minority learning styles will be introduced and integrated into the instructional presentations."

In-service training will stress the need to create success oriented environments where high expectations are communicated to all students regardless of their academic achievement levels. Additionally, in-service training will stress the need for cooperation among science teachers and teachers of other subjects so that the science content can be integrated across the curriculum.

Teachers will be given practice in applying cooperative learning in the science classroom and will receive strategies that will help them enhance critical thinking skills by the scientific method of problem solving. Teachers will learn how to evaluate their classroom activities to determine how appropriate they are in promoting critical thinking skills.

A main feature of the training program will be the science weekend institute which will be designed as an on-going reinforcement and support for in-service teachers and students who will participate in the middle school enhancement program. It will continue to assist teachers in refining their skills of imparting science content.

Under practicum supervision, in-service teachers will design, structure and present science lessons and receive immediate feedback from consultants in the program. Teachers will receive increased exposure to experts in the field of science through consultants in industry and

Conference on Teaching 'Reconnects with Nature'

"Reconnecting with Nature" is the theme of an upcoming conference here which features nationally known speakers, workshops, papers and film with the energizing weekend capped off with a sublime canoe trip down the magnificent Pocomoke River.

Faculty and students are invited to attend the fifth annual Mid-Atlantic Conference on College Teaching and Classroom Research, hosted by the SSU Faculty Development Committee, on Friday and Saturday, April 3-4.

A major goal of the conference is to consider method and rationale for an educational program that will encourage students to view reality in terms of the larger, living system.

There will be two keynote speakers. On April 3 Armand Singer will give his views on environmental pedagogy. A serious environmentalist with a love and knowledge of the outdoors, Singer is professor emeritus of West Virginia University in the Department of Foreign Languages. Singer's work on Don Juan and his editorship of "The Philological Papers" have earned him wide acclaim.

On April 4 James O'Conner will speak on the topic "Capitalism, Nature, & Socialism" which is also the title of a journal that he founded and edits. His views have attracted international attention, and his book, "The Fiscal Crisis of the State," has been translated into five languages.

Following O'Connor's talk, a panel will address the concepts or challenges which the keynoters have posed. Several other activities will round out the weekend conference. On both Friday afternoon and Saturday morning, conference participants will have seven workshops and presentations from which to choose. In keeping with the conference theme, on Friday night there will be a showing of Akira Kurosawa's film "Dreams," which uses fantasy format to portray environmental catastrophes.

Finally, on Saturday afternoon there will be an opportunity for an enjoyable connection with nature—a canoe trip on the Pocomoke.

The cost is $15 for faculty which includes Friday night dinner and Saturday lunch. Faculty are encouraged to invite interested students who will not be charged for registration.

Please 'Buckle Up'

To the University community:

In recognition of the Maryland Chiefs of Police Association "Seat Belt Awareness Months," I urge all members of our University community to "buckle up" when driving or riding as a passenger in a motor vehicle. Last year we attained a 78.6 percent usage rate. As a result, the University received recognition from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and the Maryland Committee for Safety Belt Use, Inc. Our goal is 100 percent usage. The statistics have shown that traffic deaths rank as the number one killer of Americans between the ages of six months to 32 years, and that the probability of being involved in a motor vehicle accident is 86 percent during one's lifetime.

Therefore, it seems only prudent to make every effort to ensure personal safety for drivers and passengers through the use of seat belts.

Please, "buckle up."

Thanks,
Sgt. Carlton (Toby) Tobias
Crime Prevention Officer

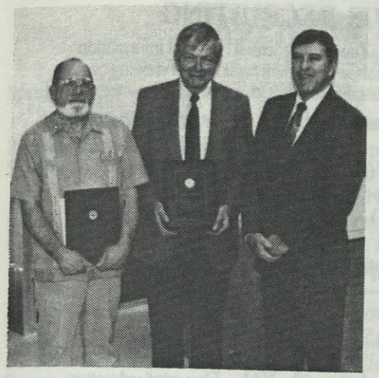
Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.



At a recent University Forum meeting Dr. K. Nelson Butler (right), vice president of academic affairs, presented plaques recognizing Dr. Maurice Bozman (center) of the Education Department and Eugene Farace of the Geography and Regional Planning Department for long-term service to the University. Farace has been here for over 35 years and Bozman for over 30 years. Butler presented the awards on behalf of the State of Maryland Department of Personnel.

Tutoring services are available Monday through Thursday, 1-5 p.m., and Sunday through Thursday, 6-9 p.m. in the seminar room on the second floor of Blackwell Library. The tutors are students who have been hand picked by the director of the program because of their exceptional abilities in mathematics and excellent tutoring experiences. Students are served on a first-come, first-served basis.

A backup system of instructors has been created to aid those students whose questions can not be fully answered by tutors. These instructors are willing to help with all questions.

The Math Lab, located in the Power Building, is equipped with some software for all math courses and several tutoring packages for some individual math courses as well. Students will be directed by the instructors.

For more details on times and instructors call the Department of Math and Computer Sciences at 543-6471.

Crisis in Education Addressed at Forum

What is the purpose of education? Is the present educational system meeting that purpose?

These and other questions will be addressed at the Sociological Society's "Crisis in Education" forum on Saturday, April 11, in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center from 9:30 a.m.-3 p.m. Drawing from the disciplines of education, philosophy and sociology, the day-long forum will feature a panel discussion and participant dialogue on issues in contemporary, elementary, secondary and higher education, and their relationship to society.

Lending their unique perspectives will be Dr. Carolyn Bowden of the Education Department, Claire Katz of the Philosophy Department, and Dr. A.K. Talbot of the Sociology Department.

In order to provide a setting for the maximum input of those attending, the forum will begin with an informal brainstorming session, with coffee and pastry served. The question posed will be, "What does education mean to you?" The panelists will make their presentations from 10 a.m.-noon, followed by a complimentary buffet lunch.

The afternoon session will be devoted to an open discussion, based on the ideas suggested by the brainstorming, as well as those presented by the three panelists. For more information, please contact Mitch Rosenwald (548-9635) or Marion Leitao (957-2138).

'Autobiography and Film' Topic of Lit/Film Lecture

The next speaker in the Humanities in Motion: Literature and Film series will be Dr. David Lavery of Memphis State University.

Lavery will address the topic, "Autobiography and Film," on Tuesday, March 31, at 7 p.m. in Devilbiss Auditorium in his talk, "The Strange Text of 'My Left Foot,'" concerning the film made from Irish writer Christy Brown's autobiography. Brown, born a victim of cerebral palsy, had the strength and courage to overcome the severest handicap. In the film version he was played heroically by Daniel Day Lewis.

Lavery, an associate professor of communications, has specialized lately in "strange" texts. His latest work in progress is a collection of critical essays titled, "Full of Secrets: Critical Approaches to TWIN PEAKS." His last book, published by Southern Illinois University Press in 1992, was "Late for the Sky: The Mentality of the Space Age." In 1987 he served as guest editor for the "Autobiography and Film" special issue of the film journal PostScript.

Lavery taught English before moving to his present position at Memphis State in 1988. Earlier in his academic career he won teaching awards both at the University of Alabama at Huntsville and at the University of Florida. He has published widely in a number of journals, including Literature/Film Quarterly, The Journal of Popular Film & Television, Film Criticism, PostScript, The Hudson Review, The Michigan Quarterly Review, The New Orleans Review, The Georgia Review and College English. An essay he wrote for The Hudson Review in 1986 was nominated for a Pushcart Prize in non-fiction.

The 1992 Literature/Film Series marks the 20th anniversary of Literature/Film Quarterly, founded and published at Salisbury State, with an international readership that includes 175 subscribers abroad in 28 foreign countries. The series is funded by the Cultural Events Committee, with additional help from the Fulton School of Liberal Arts and a grant from the Maryland Humanities Council. The public is invited.

Spring Dance Concert Scheduled for April

The SSU Dance Company celebrates National Dance Week in late April with its annual spring concert. Seven works feature modern dance, ballet and jazz choreography by faculty, guest artists and students. Performances are Wednesday, April 22, at 7 p.m., Friday, April 24, at 8 p.m. and a family matinee on Saturday, April 25 at 2 p.m. The one-hour program is in Holloway Hall Auditorium. A crafts and baked goods sale in the lobby will benefit the Dance Company.

Tickets are $3 for adults, $2 for students and senior citizens, and free with ID to students, faculty and staff. Children under 12 are free. Free admissions are asked to bring a can of food to donate to the Maryland Food Bank drive.

Salisbury Festival Volunteers Needed

This year marks the 10th anniversary of the Salisbury Festival, Wicomico County's annual community celebration, to be held May 1-3. Once again, the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council is seeking volunteers to join, "The Proud, The Few, The Festival Crew!"

Volunteers are needed in all areas, from planning stages through the actual days of the festival. "Since SWAC began the Salisbury Festival as Arts on the Plaza, it has flourished as the result of the hundreds of volunteers who have chosen to donate time and energy," said Keith C. Lott, president of SWAC's board of directors. "We call the Salisbury Festival a 'community celebration,' and it is indeed the efforts of the community, coming together, that bring about the celebration."

SWAC organizes several areas which have need of volunteers. For example, the children's craft area, this year titled, "Treasure the Chesapeake," is being created, organized and staffed by members of the University's Student National Education Association. However, SWAC is looking for volunteers in its face-painting area—a popular, fun and rewarding part of the festival.

SWAC is also seeking volunteers to help with its T-shirt and poster sales; this year, the offical Salisbury Festival design will be featured on both posters and T-shirts, sales of which are being handled solely by SWAC.

The Arts Council will also be returning with its popular food concessions, and volunteers are encouraged to help with those. Work shifts are only two hours long, so volunteers will be able to participate in the area's largest festival by helping the event's organization and still have plenty of time to enjoy the sights and sounds throughout the downtown area.

Both individuals and organizations are welcome to volunteer. For more information contact the Arts Council at 543-ARTS.

Education Department Has Major Change

Sea Gull Sports Roundup

by Paul Ohanian

After a 1-1 start, the men's lacrosse team has posted three straight impressive wins and is ranked fourth in the latest Division III poll. SSU's latest victim was St. Lawrence, a 20-10 loser at Sea Gull Stadium last Saturday. Art Morley and Chris Boyle tallied four goals apiece and Jeff Chenowith added three goals with two assists to lead the Sea Gulls past the Saints. Holding a slim 5-4 lead early in the second quarter, SSU blitzed the visitors with 14 straight goals to take a commanding 19-4 lead midway through the final period. Chris Soper and Dan Gourley each netted two goals apiece as well. Salisbury is back at home this Saturday against Albany St.

The women's lacrosse team played its finest game of the season last Sunday to defeat Lynchburg, 16-10, at home. Joanne Fotia, Flossy Owens and Jean Rusen each scored four times for the Gulls. Cheryl Ish added two goals and two assists while Carolyn Hyman and Kim Benz each tallied one goal and one assist. Owens has a team-high 19 goals through five games for Coach Dawn Chamberlin's 3-2 squad. Junior netminder Kris Hart is averaging 13.4 saves/game.

The baseball and men's tennis teams are spending Spring Break week on the road. The diamondmen, 4-5 overall, split their first two games on a five-day, five-game trip, losing to Christopher Newport 10-4 and beating Randolph-Macon 10-9. Andy Harrison had a home run and three hits in a losing effort against Newport, while Darren Bush was 3-4 with two doubles and three runs in the win over RMC. The tennis team was rained out in its first scheduled match against Pembroke (NC) State, but had three other matches scheduled on its swing through the South.

The softball team began its season last week with a doubleheader sweep of conference-rival Cabrini. The Gulls are looking to defend their Eastern States Athletic Conference crown in 1992. SSU's twinbill at Marywood, scheduled for March 21, was snowed out and will be made up in late April.

The men's and women's track teams opened their seasons with impressive showings at the Hampton Relays. First-place finishes included the relay team of Jeremy Rallo and Doug Schwanke in both the shot put and discus events. Rallo also teammed with Jeff Freimanis for second place in the javelin. The duo of Cheryl Ish and Liz Leo captured first in the women's javelin and third in the discus. The long jump team of Kirsten Owings and Chavon Ringold also garnered a third-place finish.

Khazeh Papers Selected for Presentation

Dr. Kashi Khazeh, associate professor of finance in the Perdue School of Business, recently was notified that his papers, "Small Investor and The Crash of 1987" and "The Effects of the 1987 Stock Market Crash on the Small Investor: Perception vs. Reality" have been selected for presentation at the Eastern Economic Association annual conference in New York in March and the Midwest Decision Sciences Institute annual meeting in Kansas City in May.

The first paper was co-authored with Dr. Wayne Decker, professor of management in the Perdue School, and the second paper was co-authored with Decker and Dr. Robert C. Winder, associate professor of finance at Christopher Newport College.

Khazeh developed and continues to advise the SSU student chapter of the Financial Management Association. He established the organization to provide students with the opportunity to begin their professional development while they attend school.

Since joining the SSU faculty in 1985, he has received the Distinguished Faculty Award and the Outstanding Faculty Award in recognition of his contributions to the University.

The Health Center is open from 8 a.m.-12:30 p.m. and from 1:30-4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. A nurse is on call for urgent consultations on weekends and as needed during the week via a pager system.

Students are seen on a walk-in basis by the Health Center nurses. Those students who require a physician's evaluation will be given an appointment.

The Health Center physician is available for a part of each day, Monday through Friday. The Health Center offers a wide range of services to students including treatment for injuries, illnesses, gynecological problems and sexually transmitted diseases (STDs).

Additionally, the Health Center administers allergy injections and immunizations, offers mono and pregnancy testing, contraception and pregnancy counseling, and performs several laboratory procedures. Referrals may be made for dental, medical, surgical and Planned Parenthood needs. Urgent problems may be referred to the Emergency Department at Peninsula Regional Medical Center.

Off-campus health care providers, including physicians, dentists, hospitals, radiologists, medical laboratories and pharmacies, will charge students for services and supplies, therefore, students are urged to carry health insurance.

A per semester Health Center fee is included in the fee structure which full-time students pay at registration. Part-time students may elect to pay the Health Center fee to utilize the full range of services.

The University requires that students be immunized. Documented dates of immunizations should be forwarded to the Health Center. Students requiring immunizations will be contacted and scheduled for immunizations throughout the semester.

paintings capture the mood, motion, and essence of those places he paints. For those who especially enjoy the spontaneous nature of watercolors, his loose yet skillful handling of this medium has great appeal. The feelings evoked convey more clearly the essences of a place than the exact replication of every stick, stalk and tree.

A reception for the artist will be held Thursday, April 2, from 4-7 p.m.; the public is invited. The exhibit will remain on display daily from 11 a.m.-4 p.m. through April 23.

For more information about the exhibit and the Atrium Gallery, call the Guerrieri Center Office at 543-6100.

Producer/Host Van Williamson (right) and Sesame Street guitarist Jim Mitchell perform as part of the RFD quintet on a recent performance of "RFD-Radio Free Delmarva."

'Radio Free Delmarva' Is Award Winner

WSCL-FM public radio's lively monthly radio program "Radio Free Delmarva" has won an honorable mention in the National Federation of Community Broadcaster's Golden Reel awards competition. The award was presented to the program's producer and host Van Williamson at the NFCB annual conference on March 13 in Seattle, WA.

"Radio Free Delmarva" is live radio in the traditional sense. The program features the best of talent from the Delmarva region. Playing classical piano, tubas, bag pipes and just about anything else musical along with comedy skits and general commentary on the state of the world, the program has become a major showcase for the arts on Delmarva.

The program won its honorable mention in the category Local Music/Entertainment Series. In competition with live radio programs being presented throughout the United States it is one of the few activities to be recognized as having the quality of production and presentation to make it one of the best of its kind in the country.

"Radio Free Delmarva" has been supported by the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council, the Maryland State Arts Council and Salisbury State.

Salisbury State will provide a summer training program for 20 middle school science teachers from Wicomico, Somerset and Worcester counties. The project will be implemented through an interdisciplinary team of educators from Salisbury State, the University of Maryland Eastern Shore and science supervisors from area middle schools. Members of the interdisciplinary team are (pictured left to right): Front row: Dr. Ellen V. Whitford, assistant professor of education; Dr. Leonard J. Garigliano, professor of education; Dr. Florence F. Pritchard, associate vice president of academic affairs; Dr. Hazel Milbourne, supervisor of mathematics education, Somerset County; Dr. Geraldine Bacci, associate professor and chair of the Department of Education; Middle Row: Dr. K. Nelson Butler, vice president of academic affairs; Samuel Walker, supervisor of science education, Wicomico County; Sharon Clark, director of field experience, Department of Education; Dr. Ann Taylor, assistant professor of education; Back row: David Kanaar, graduate student, Chemistry Department; Dr. John Bing, associate professor of education; Grady Armstrong, instructor of leisure studies and chair of the Leisure Studies Department; and Dr. Phillip Creighton, dean of the Henson School of Science and Technology.

Elwell Chairs Accreditation Site Visit

Dr. Mary Ellen Elwell, professor of social work, chaired an accreditation site visit for the Council on Social Work Education at Eastern Kentucky University on March 12 and 13.

The Council on Social Work Education is the national accrediting organization for social work education at both the graduate and baccalaureate levels. SSU's undergraduate social work program was reaccredited in 1990.

professionals in the scientific community. These individuals will keep teachers abreast of new research and on-going technological changes in their respective areas.

The science weekend institute will assist teachers in designing field-based experience that will bring science content into closer focus for middle school youth while increasing their problem-solving and observational skills. It will invite professionals from the various scientific societies to conduct workshops on fostering teacher training and preparation.

"It is broadly recognized that time spent on science during the academic day may not be adequate for sound concept formation and application of science principles," said Taylor. "Thus, the science weekend institute will provide extended time for students to conduct diverse experiments in the different labs located at Salisbury State. During the science weekend institute, time will be allotted for students as well as teachers to take field trips to different science museums in the Washington, D.C./ Baltimore area. This experience promises to arouse the natural curiosity in middle school children and to excite their imagination by seeing science in action.

Taylor credits Dr. Karin Johnson, director of grants and sponsored research at SSU, for the grant's ultimate success. Taylor who views herself as a student under Johnson's guidance and leadership often says her creativity matched with Johnson's professionalism, dedication and "grantmanship" is a winning combination.

Dr. Phillip Creighton, dean of the Henson School of Science and Technology, was the chief collaborator in the development of the grant. "He created the valuable interdisciplinary approach with the School of Education and Professional Studies which led to the development of strategies and techniques of approaching science education that will ultimately improve the status of science achievement among under-represented groups," said Taylor.

APRIL 2, 1992 VOL. XIII NO. 24

Spring Dance Concert 'Reconnects with Natural World'

Glitter and gold, rope-sculptured sets, nature themes and classical music are featured in the Dance Company's annual Spring Concert.

The one-hour program in Holloway Hall Auditorium will also feature a new $100,000 computerized lighting system. Technical director and lighting designer Tony Broadbent said, "Generally lighting for dance is more complex than music or theatre lighting. The new system's power and speed will enable us to present a brighter, more visually-appealing dance production."

Guest choreographer Mary Norton and company director Victoria Hutchinson present dances based on this year's faculty development theme, "Reconnecting with the Natural World." "The use of soft lighting and silhouettes in Norton's lyrical ballet 'Eclipse' to music by Felix Mendelssohn enhance the shifting overlapping patterns of light found in nature," said Hutchinson.

Norton began her ballet training at age three under the tutelage of LaNada Strom and currently teaches ballet at the Salisbury Studio of Dance. Her performance credits include soloist with the recently formed Eastern Shore Ballet Theatre and the Delaware Regional Ballet, and choreography for productions of "Godspell" and "West Side Story."

Hutchinson revives one of her modern dances that is also in the repertory of four American dance companies. Critic David Jones of the Oklahoma Daily News called it "memorable" and said, "'Field Crickets' contained the best dancing of the evening. The quartet of female dances executed insect-like contortions and twitches to communicate a scrappy sort of kinship that was both grim and moving."

The dance is an environmental collage of sound, light and movement, and features masks specially created for the production by Willy Richardson of Baltimore. Hutchinson also premieres what she hopes will become a signature work for the 25-member Dance Company. "Company Class," an elegant version of a typical modern dance class set to the music of George Frederick Handel, progresses from seated and standing exercises to across-the-floor combinations.

Back by popular demand is guest choreographer Peter Madden, whose innovative work audiences may remember from last year. During a guest residency last November, Madden set his second work on the company and said, "the dancers at SSU are great; they work hard, fast and professionally."

"Hickory Dickory" is choreographed to music by contemporary composers Phillip Glass, Michael Stearns and Ryuichi Sakamoto. Madden said the dance "could be a metaphor for how we perceive and deal with 'time' in contemporary life. It's a theme I return to again and again in my works for dance and theatre. It seems as if we either have all the time in the world, not enough time, or get stuck in the moment. In dance, I explore these ideas through changes in speed, rhythm and phrasing." Madden, a choreographer of national and international recognition, is also a leader in the field of movement studies and its applications to the performing arts, education and therapy. He was recently in Toronto, Canada to guest teach at York University.

Jazz dance is featured in guest choreographer Deborah Lombardo-Wehlan's "Are You Going With Me" to music of Pat Methany and Lyle Mays. Wehlan is the owner and artisitic director of D'Ann Danse Studios in Salisbury, and her professional credits include TV and commercial appearances and choreography for local high schools, community theater and performing groups.

Student choreography will be presented for the first time in this year's concert. Based creative and technical merit, an outside panel of judges selected two student dances from the November Student Dance Showcase. The winners were "Relationships," a modern dance by Karena Thek-Fairclough to the music of Kenny G, and "Goldrush," a soft glitter jazz dance by Amber Wright to music by Yello. Wright, a sophomore from Kent Island, is the president-elect of the SSU Dance Company, and Fairclough is a community member of the company studying at the University of Utah this semester.

Performances are Wednesday, April 22, at 7 p.m., Friday, April 24, at 8 p.m., and a family matinee Saturday, April 25, at 2 p.m. There is no Thursday performance. All performances will be in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

Tickets are $3 for adults, $2 for students and senior citizens, and free with ID to SSU students, faculty and staff. Children under 12 are free. Free admissions are asked to bring a can of food to donate to the Maryland Food Bank drive.

Tickets are sold at the door beginning one-half hour before the performance. Prior to performance, tickets will be sold at the Guerrieri University Center and through all Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council ticket outlets—Peninsula Bank, John Hanson Savings Bank and the SWAC Office. For further information, please call the Guerrieri Center at 548-4503, the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council at 543-ARTS or the Dance Company at 543-6353.

Immediately before and after each performance, a crafts and baked goods sale in the lobby of Holloway Hall will feature home decorations and foods created and donated by company parents and friends Kathryn Morgan and Edna Berkey. Proceeds will benefit the Dance Company.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Salisbury State University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled persons are encouraged to apply.

Crisis in Education Addressed at Forum

What is the purpose of education? Is the present educational system meeting that purpose?

These and other questions will be addressed at the Sociological Society's "Crisis in Education" forum on Saturday, April 11, in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center from 9:30 a.m.-3 p.m. Drawing from the disciplines of education, philosophy and sociology, the day-long forum will feature a panel discussion and participant dialogue on issues in contemporary, elementary, secondary and higher education, and their relationship to society.

Lending their unique perspectives will be Dr. Carolyn Bowden of the Education Department, Claire Katz of the Philosophy Department, and Dr. A.K. Talbot of the Sociology Department.

In order to provide a setting for the maximum input of those attending, the forum will begin with an informal brainstorming session, with coffee and pastry served. The question posed will be, "What does education mean to you?" The panelists will make their presentations from 10 a.m.-noon, followed by a complimentary buffet lunch.

The afternoon session will be devoted to an open discussion, based on the ideas suggested by the brainstorming, as well as those presented by the three panelists. For more information, please contact Mitch Rosenwald (548-9635) or Marion Leitao (957-2138).

Part-time students may elect to pay the Health Center fee to utilize the full range of services.

The University requires that students be immunized. Documented dates of immunizations should be forwarded to the Health Center. Students requiring immunizations will be contacted and scheduled for immunizations throughout the semester.

Festival Performers Run the Gamut

As the Salisbury Festival prepares for its 10th anniversary year, the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council has lined up an impressive array of local talent to fill its performance stages on May 2, running the gamut from bagpipes to bluegrass, ballet to brass. Performances run throughout Saturday afternoon at two different locations: on Government Plaza in front of the government office building downtown; and, new this year, on the steps of the post office on Main Street.

Performances begin at 10 a.m. and run at 45 minute intervals until 5 p.m.

Starting off the day at the post office, the Worsom Pipers fill the air with the distinct sound of Scottish bagpipes. Next, Van Williamson and Jim Mitchell will be collaborating on jazz guitars. Mitchell has recorded with many popular performers in New York City, including Barbra Streisand, Steve Lawrence and Edie Gorme, Tony Bennett and Leonard Bernstein. Williamson is news director of WSCL-FM and producer of "RFD: Radio Free Delmarva," a live radio variety show. Mitchell and Williamson have played together since 1990, including many performances as part of the house band on "RFD."

Later in the afternoon, Michael O'Louglin, Robin Cockey and Charlie Stegman will play folk and bluegrass music with a strong Irish flavor. The Living Faith Trio will present Southern gospel music, and The Joy Buzzers, a guitar duo, will perform acoustic rock music taken from the '50s to the present day. From Salisbury State, the Nomadic Brass Quintet and the Saxophone Quintet will perform. And from Parkside High School, the Parkside Players will be involving the audience in improvisational drama.

The Dixiekats, a favorite from last year, will be presenting a program of dixieland music at the Government Plaza stage, beginning the day's performances with the sound of New Orleans jazz.

For those who enjoy dance, this year's performance lineup includes many local dance schools and companies displaying their talents in ballet, jazz and even square dance. The Salisbury Studio of Dance, Dance Unlimited, the Eastern Shore Ballet Theatre, the Third Time Around Dancers, D'Ann Danse Studios, Dance Loft and Ocean Waves Square Dancers will be performing on Government Plaza.

The Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council co-sponsors the Salisbury Festival with the Salisbury Area Chamber of Commerce. For more information on the Salisbury Festival, call SWAC at 543-ARTS.

Composting in the 1990s

by Linda Langelo
Assistant Director of Horticulture

So what do you do with all the garden debris and leaves from your backyard? Compost? More and more Americans are interested in what to do with their rubbish. Americans are more concerned than ever about where it goes and what happens to it after it leaves their home. Composting is a way Americans can deal with their yard debris instead of bagging leaves that will help fill the local landfill; they can reuse it in their own yards. Americans are playing a more active role in the future of their own lives.

Composting is as easy as following a cake recipe and the results are realized within the next season. So take all your living debris and place it in a pile in your back yard. Now how to manage it? The right complement of factors, like ingredients in a cake recipe, need to be present to provide the best compost pile. This formula should have all the following factors: carbon/nitrogen ratio, 50-60 percent water ratio, 130-140 degree (F) temperature, 3/8 inch size of debris, a percentage of oxygen and a ph of 6-8.

Begin by collecting one part green debris such as grass clippings and mix with two parts brown such as leaves and plant debris. Take these green and brown parts and mix them in a pile that is no less than three-feet high and three-feet wide. The shape of the pile is very important. Water must be able to run off the top and quickly down the sides. So consider the shape of the pile as a gabled roof or as near pointed at the top as possible.

Next, keep the pile manageable. Don't build a huge pile that you can not turn to aerate and provide oxygen to the pile because you will need to turn the pile three times a week. Realistically, you will probably turn the pile whenever you get the chance.

Moisture for your pile should be your next concern. You need a level of 50-60 percent of water in porportion to the size of your pile. The best test for moisture is the hand held method. If you pick up a handful and squeeze it and it leaves your hand moist then your pile has the right amount of moisture. If you squeeze this handful of compost and your hand is dry or water drips then you have an incorrect amount of moisture.

Another essential ingredient for this formula is the proper ph—within 6-8. The more acidic your pile the more it will delay composting of the debris. You can add lime to your pile.

Any debris that you add should be no smaller than 3/8 inches or it will sit in the pile and not compost. With particle size, the little pieces hold little air and compost quickly. The big pieces compost slowly and hold air and surface for other debris to compost.

The carbon/nitrogen ratio of greens to browns should be greens less than 20 percent and browns over 60 percent of your pile. With all of this your final ingredient is the appropriate temperature of 130-140 Farenheit.

Sea Gull Sports Roundup

by Paul Ohanian
Sports Information Director

The men's lacrosse team enjoyed spring break with a pair of victories as the Gulls upped their winning streak to five games. SSU, ranked fifth in the national polls this week, ventured north to Massachusetts to defeat Springfield, 11-7, then capped the week with a 22-12 win over visiting Albany State. Senior Art Morley enjoyed his most productive afternoon as a Sea Gull with a five-goal, two-assist performance against Albany. Kevin Hohner, a two-time all-America midfielder, made his first start on attack a memorable one as he tallied three goals and three assists. Jeff Chenowith also netted three goals while Dan Gourley, Chris Murphy and Todd Cliggett each added two. SSU welcomes Guilford to Sea Gull Stadium this Saturday. The Gulls bombed the Quakers, 31-8, last year.

The softball team, 5-1 overall, is off to a good start under first-year coach Susan Muller. The Sea Gulls captured the championship of the Eastern Mennonite College Tournament last week by winning three of four games, including a 5-4 victory over Bridgewater in the title game. Kim Richardson's single with the bases loaded plated Monica Diggs with the winning run in the bottom of the seventh inning of the championship contest. Pitcher Sonja Akers improved her record to 4-0 with wins in the semifinal and final game. Sharri Hammond was 4-4 with two runs scored and Allison Tompkins was 3-4 with two RBIs in the championship game.

The men's tennis team capped its spring trip with a 7-2 win over Christopher Newport. The Gulls, 2-2 on the season, had victories by Brian Weist, Dave Hardesty, Eric Balliet and Mike Daw in singles competition.

The baseball team ended its spring trip with a 1-4 mark and takes a 4-8 overall record into action this week. SSU hosts Wesley on Wednesday and welcomes Catholic for a twinbill beginning at 1 p.m. on Sunday.

Saturday's performance has a special appearance by the "Black Elvis," Clearance Giddens. Giddens has appeared on the "Arsenio Hall Show" and plays regularly at Jimmy Buffet's Bar in Key West, FL. He has been featured in Rolling Stone and on many evening news/magazine programs. Greg Mann, a Salisbury State alumnus, has formed a special back-up band to work with Giddens.

There will be a special reception for all SSU alumni following Saturday's performance, sponsored by the Salisbury State Alumni Office. Tickets for the show are on sale in advance for $2 at the information desk in the Guerrieri University Center. Remaining tickets will be on sale at the door for $3.

Information Regarding Employee Prescription Cards

Anyone planning a trip out of the country who is on daily medication should contact the Personnel Office a few weeks before leaving. The Personnel Office will help arrange to obtain enough of the prescription to span the duration of an employee's absence from the area. A special form must be filed to accomplish this.

For all trips, it is recommended employees obtain an extra prescription from their doctor to take with them as a precaution. Many pharmacies will not refill medicine based on the label alone— pharmacists require an actual prescription from an employee's physician.

If traveling within the United States an employee's PCS card will be honored at most large pharmacies.

If employees lose or misplace their prescription card don't panic. Employees can still get a prescription filled by having their pharmacist key in 4181-1000 and their social security number followed by the birthdate of the family member needing the medicine. Retirees can do the same with 4181-4000. Contractual employees (or anyone who billed directly at home for their coverage) need to use 4181-3000.

If employees are forced to pay cash for a prescription, they may obtain a refund by filing a claim form. There is a minimum $12.50 charge for an employee's deductible and processing fees. Any prescription with a cost of $12.50 or less will not be refunded. Claim forms may be obtained by contacting the Personnel Office.

Employees should have their pharmacist call the PCS headquarters and talk with a professional there about any problems encountered when trying to fill a prescription. Each pharmacy has a special 800 number it can use for just such purposes. Sometimes the problem is as simple as an incorrect birthdate.

It is the employee's responsibility to notify the Personnel Office promptly when there is any change in family status. Example: children stop attending college and therefore aren't legally permitted to remain on an employee's policy (but are permitted to purchase coverage under their own name); children return to college after a semester or two of inactivity and are legally permitted to receive coverage under an employee's policy if they meet the age requirements; married people get divorced or legally separated; single people get married; babies arrive, etc. The quicker employees notify the Personnel Office the sooner appropriate coverage can be arranged.

Pfeiffer Portrays British Comic Actor

Starting Thursday, April 9, Salisbury State Theatre presents "Apology for the Life of an Actor," an original adaptation of the memoirs of 18th century comic actor Colley Cibber.

Bringing the personal accounts of Cibber to the stage is T. Paul Pfeiffer, director of theatre. Currently completing his doctoral studies Pfieffer's adaptation in script and in performance of Cibber's memoirs is equivalent to the dissertation.

Pfeiffer's interpretation gives an intimate account of Cibber's introduction to the English stage in 1690 where he soon became one of three distinguished actor-managers of the Drury Lane Theatre. Before retiring in the 1740s, Cibber was established as a leading figure in 18th century theatre in London where he frequently performed for royalty, traveling in the highest circles, all the while lending his comic talents to writing and performing restoration comedy. Most noted for foppish characters, Cibber was inspired by the best contemporary actors of his time, a hallmark not forgotten in Pfeiffer's adaptation.

In completion of his doctorate, Pfeiffer will be evaluated by visiting theatre faculty of Towson State University and University of

Accounting Program Offers Volunteer Service, Excellent Job Prospects

While most of us dread tax season, it can be especially daunting to elderly taxpayers. For others, a limited education has left them ill equipped to read and understand the complicated instructions that come in the mail with their 1040 form.

A group of SSU students is helping to turn confusion into caring.

Again this year, SSU students in the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business who have completed the tax course required for their accounting majors and have passed an IRS training program will complete tax returns for more than 800 people in the lower Eastern Shore community. As participants in the IRS's VITA (Voluntary Income Tax Assistance) program, these students will spend at least 30 hours each in the program.

For the people who bring in their taxes and get free help, the service is more than helpful. Yet the real winners may be the students themselves.

Maggie Jones is one who thinks so. A student and team captain, she supervises eight to 10 other students, making sure they report for work and have all the information they need to answer the clients' questions. The first-hand experience she's gaining has become an important part of her education.

"One really good aspect," she said, "is that we learn to bring together all the skills and techniques we learned in undergraduate work on a client basis.

"When I go into an accounting firm, I can say to myself, 'I already know how to work with clients.'"

The VITA teammates operate like a CPA firm in many ways. There is a supply team, to make sure all the necessary forms are on hand, and a quality control team ensures that the work done is the best possible. In addition, practicing professionals from the accounting community have volunteered to help when needed. Marketing students have adopted this project and are working to get the word out to taxpayers who may benefit. The Modern Languages Department has supplied translators for non-English speaking taxpayers.

The structure for the program was established by accounting professor Joseph Quinn, but carrying it out is largely up to the students themselves.

Quinn manages to provide support, but gives the students room to learn. "As faculty coordinator," he said "I get it started. But then I try to stand back from it."

He adds that their VITA experience may be fulfilling another of Salisbury State University's

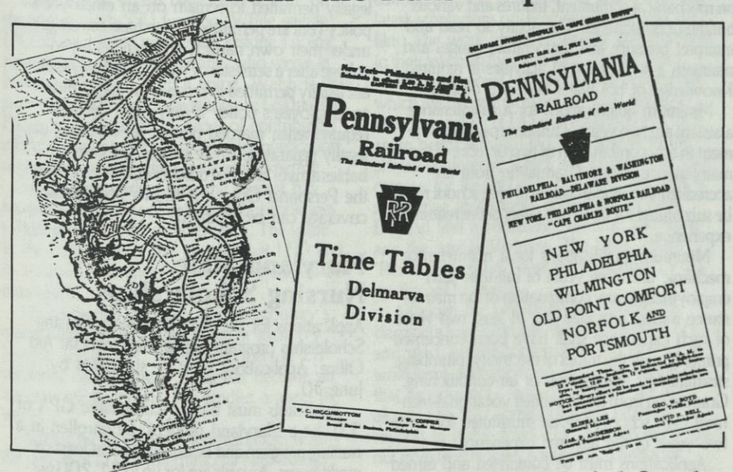
'Ridin' the Rails' Explores Local RR History



Step back in history and go "Ridin' the Rails" at an upcoming exhibit and symposium by the Research Center for Delmarva History and Culture.

Remember when you could catch the train on a nice summer's day at Easton—or Claiborne—or Hebron—or many points in between and ride all the way into Ocean City for less than you can get a fill-up at the gas station today? Those days are long gone, but the memories and effects of them are not.

The Research Center for Delmarva History and Culture at Salisbury State will recall some of those in an exhibit of photographs and memorabilia opening in the Atrium Gallery of the Guerrieri University Center on Thursday, April 30. The gallery is open Monday through Saturday, 11 a.m.-4 p.m.

The exhibit features a number of photographs of those remaining stations and landmarks of the railroads, often serving far different functions today, along with reproductions of similar views from the past. The contemporary views feature the photographic work of John Horney, a 1991 graduate of SSU and free-lance photographer.

Also included in the exhibit are a number of artifacts from the "railroadin'" era, along with such reminders of the age as tickets, uniforms, schedules, music and even spikes from dismantled rail lines. Serving as consultant on the exhibit is Kent Griffith, local railroad enthusiast and historian.

An examination of the far-reaching effects of the coming of the railroad to the Peninsula is the topic of a symposium, also titled "Ridin' the Rails," to be held at SSU on Saturday, May 9, and co-sponsored by the Westside Historical Society of Wicomico County.

Salisbury native, John Hayman, author of "Rails Along the Chesapeake," will be keynote speaker, discussing the history of the development of rail travel. Dr. Sue Fox, chair of the History Department at Wesley College in Dover, DE, will examine the visible changes brought by the railroad's effects on architecture and town life on the Peninsula.

Sylvia Bradley of SSU's History Department will discuss the creation of a "railroad town," Hebron, MD, and the effects when the railroad

Attention May Graduates

Commencement Exercises will be held on Saturday, May 23, at 10 a.m. in the Wicomico Youth & Civic Center. Detailed information will be mailed to graduates at a later date.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Crisis in Education Addressed at Forum

What is the purpose of education? Is the present educational system meeting that purpose?

These and other questions will be addressed at the Sociological Society's "Crisis in Education" forum on Saturday, April 11, in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center from 9:30 a.m.-3 p.m. Drawing from the disciplines of education, philosophy and sociology, the day-long forum will feature a panel discussion and participant dialogue on issues in contemporary, elementary, secondary and higher education, and their relationship to society.

Lending their unique perspectives will be Dr. Carolyn Bowden of the Education Department, Claire Katz of the Philosophy Department, and Dr. A.K. Talbot of the Sociology Department.

In order to provide a setting for the maximum input of those attending, the forum will begin with an informal brainstorming session, with coffee and pastry served. The question posed will be, "What does education mean to you?" The panelists will make their presentations from 10 a.m.-noon, followed by a complimentary buffet lunch.

The afternoon session will be devoted to an open discussion, based on the ideas suggested by the brainstorming, as well as those presented by the three panelists. For more information, please contact Mitch Rosenwald (548-9635) or Marion Leitao (957-2138).

Literature/Film Celebrates 20 Years

In the past 20 years, few art forms have changed so greatly—and have been such an eloquent witness to a changing world—as has film. And since 1972, the editors of a University publication have had ideal seats from which to watch it all unfold.

Dr. Thomas Erskine and James Welsh could not have known when they began the Literature/Film Quarterly (LFQ) that it would become the internationally respected journal it is today. And they certainly didn't think it would last as long as it has.

"Twenty years is a long time for a film periodical," said Welsh. "We were here before American Film—and now there are rumors that they're folding."

Erskine and Welsh began the venture on a shoestring, with SSU funding. While getting LFQ off the ground was largely Erskine's doing, today Welsh and his wife Anne, who serves as business manager, keep it going. Welsh is the journal's editor, associate editors are Erskine and Elizabeth Bellavance. A panel of contributing editors reviews articles submitted for publication, depending on the editor's area of expertise.

Since those early years, the journal has become financially self-sufficient, but continues to benefit from its on-campus office. The value to the University of the prestige that LFQ and its annual conferences have earned cannot be measured.

LFQ is carried by nearly all of this country's major libraries, including those at most Ivy League universities. With subscribers in 28 countries outside the U.S., it has become an important influence in film studies around the world.

Among the film study reference books singing the praises of LFQ is International Film, Radio and Television Journals, which carried these words from Anthony Slide in 1985:

"LFQ (has) consistently maintained a standard of thorough scholarship and high readability...(and has) earned a solid and respected place in the field of film scholarship."

Contributors to the journal come from highly respected universities in this country and abroad. Their approach to film study is more approachable to the average reader than that found in most scholarly publications. Rather than an in-depth analysis of the use of editing or darkness and light, an article in LFQ is apt to study "Woody Allen's Serious Comedy," an interview with Peter Bogdanovich will bring out how the story of "Mask" unfolded under his direction.

Anytime a book is made into a movie, critics cite the differences between the two. Literature/Film Quarterly takes a scholarly approach to such comparisons. In addition, articles in the journal examine the literary aspects of films: from contemporary to classic.

Erskine and Welsh both say that work on LFQ has enhanced their classroom work. As editors, they are constantly in touch with the latest scholarship on how stories are told on film. The work brings an energy and freshness to their teaching they and their students enjoy.

The most recent LFQ development is the one which the two are most proud. The Literature/Film Association (LFA) was estalished in 1989 as an outgrowth of LFQ. In addition to the annual conference, which will move off the SSU campus for the first time this year, the LFA is sponsoring an October conference in New England and a conference on film, television and the war in Vietnam. The latter, called "Remembering Tet," is set for November 19-21 on the SSU campus.

Although the University has relaxed his classroom load to enable Welsh to manage LFQ and work on the conferences, the job can at times seem overwhelming. He readily points out that he does not—and could not—do it all alone. The SSU community has provided support in many ways. "Dr. Erskine still helps out from time to time. A team effort keeps the journal going," said Welsh.

"Over the years," he continued, "we have been fortunate in finding people who possess the specialized skills we need to meet the goals we have set for ourselves."

With 20 years experience behind him, Welsh is only looking ahead, continuing to set high goals for himself and Literature/Film Quarterly.

Native Americans In Film Discussed

The "Humanities in Motion: 20 Years of Literature and Film" lecture series, funded in part by a grant from the Maryland Humanities Council, continues at 7 p.m. on April 14, in Devilbiss Auditorium when Dr. Thomas M. Leitch of the University of Delaware discusses the Hollywood representation of Native Americans in a talk titled "The Only Good Indian is a Hollywood Indian."

Leitch, an associate professor of English, is the author of three books: "What Stories Are: Narrative Theory and Interpretation," "Lionel Trilling: An Annotated Bibliography" and, most recently, "Find the Director, and Other Hitchcock Games" (University of Georgia Press, 1991). He currently serves as the president of the Literature/Film Association, and has served for several years as a contributing editor of Literature/Film Quarterly.

His reputation as a perceptive and witty speaker has spread throughout southern Delaware as a consequence of the many library talks he has given. He teaches cinema studies as well as English at the University of Delaware.

'Myth and Cinema' Subject of Lecture

Dr. Rebecca M. Pauly, associate professor of French and Italian at West Chester University, will be the next speaker in the "Humanities in Motion" lecture series at SSU, funded in part by a grant from the Maryland Humanities Council.

Pauly's lecture on "Myth and Cinema" will be keyed to the Film "Beauty and the Beast" directed by the French poet and playwright Jean Cocteau in 1946. The lecture is scheduled for Tuesday, April 21, at 7 p.m. in Devilbiss Auditorium.

Pauly is the author of "Le Berceau et la Bibliotheque" ("The Cradle and the Library," Stanford French and Italian Studies #62) and is currently completing a book titled, "The Transparent Illusion: Image and Ideology in French Text and Film," forthcoming from Peter Lang, Publishers.

She has served for several years as a contributing editor of Literature/Film Quarterly, published by Salisbury State and founded by SSU professors Tom Erskine and Jim Welsh in 1973.

Sea Gull Sports Roundup

By Paul Ohanian
Sports Information Director

The men's lacrosse team (7-1) captured its sixth straight win last Saturday as it routed visiting Guilford, 22-10. Senior Jeff Chenowith paced the offense with five goals and an assist and co-captain Kevin Hohner added three goals and one assist. Four other Gulls—Ben Berquist, Todd Cliggett, Eric Modesitt and Dave Webb—tallied two goals apiece as 12 players in all found the scoring column. SSU climbed one spot in the weekly rankings, moving to fourth behind Hobart, Nazareth and Ithaca. SSU visits Hamdpen-Sydney College this Saturday.

The softball team (8-5 overall) improved its conference record to 4-0 with a doubleheader sweep of ESAC-rival Shenandoah last Sunday. The Gulls pounded out 15 hits en route to a 17-2 romp in game one, then posted a 16-6 win in game two. Junior pitcher Sonja Akers picked up her fifth win of the year with a complete game performance in the opener, and also helped her own cause by going 3-3 at the plate with four RBIs. Sharrey Hammond finished 3-4 with three RBIs. Monica Diggs keyed a six-run first inning in game two with a bases loaded triple. Kim Roth (2-2) picked up the victory with relief help from Akers.

Dan Quinn highlighted SSU's day at the Captains Classic track meet in Newport News, VA, last Saturday by setting a new school-record in the hammer throw. Quinn's distance of 135'11" smashed the old record by 17 feet. Erin Green was Salisbury's top female runner with three top-six finishes. Green won second place in the 3000 meters (11:05), third in the 1500 (4:47) and sixth in the 800 (2:27). Tim Smith also captured second in the 5000 (15:47).

Junior righthander Tom Keating turned in the best performance of the week for the Sea Gull baseball team (5-11) as he hurled a complete-game one hitter against Catholic on Sunday. The Gulls won the game 5-1 before dropping the second game of the twinbill by the same score. Keating struck out four while walking three as he registered his first win of the season.

The men's tennis team (4-4) enjoyed a perfect weekend in Pennsylvania as the Gulls swept ESAC opponents Cabrini, 8-0, and Allentown, 9-0. Junior Ken Soliday led the Gulls both days with straight set wins at number one singles. He also teammed with Brian Weist to post number one doubles wins both Friday and Saturday. The Gulls, off to a 2-0 start in conference matches, are shooting for their fourth straight ESAC championship in 1992.

Meeting of Minds Under Baobab Tree

The Faculty Global Seminar is pondering the contemporary African condition and Africa's future under the baobab tree. Dr. Timothy M. Shaw of the Centres for African and Foreign Policy Studies, SSU's resident scholar from April 13-19, will discuss "The Future of South(ern) Africa" on Wednesday, April 15, from 7-9:30 p.m. in Fulton Hall, room 111. Visiting Chefs Week Means Varied Menus

Tim Walch (left), executive chef for Phillips Seafood House in Ocean City, was one of four visiting chefs from area restaurants who prepared their specialties for Dining Hall patrons this week. Also participating were Kevin O'Donnell of Harrison's Harbor Watch in Ocean City, Cheng and Lewis Sun of Imperial Gallery in Salisbury and Pete Engler of Nacho Pete's in Salisbury. Also pictured is Jon DeSormeau, executive chef for University dining services, who assisted the four chefs with meal preparation.

This week five area chefs donned their white jackets and displayed their culinary crafts, preparing such delectable delights as clams casino, moo goo gai pan, baked salmon and chicken fajitas.

But instead of expecting patrons of their area restaurants to savor their menu items, they were concocting dishes for 300-500 students in the Dining Hall as part of an ongoing food festival event titled "Visiting Chefs Week." For four consecutive days, chefs from dining establishments in Salisbury and Ocean City took turns preparing and serving some of their signature dishes.

"Participation in the event the last two years was so overwhelming that we decided to do it again this month," said Carmen DiSylvestro, associate director of dining services.

"The minimum crowd we had was 378 and the maximum was 576—this blew the chefs right out of the water because they never thought they could feed that many people at one time," he added.

Dining Services provides alternatives to cafeteria style dining such as this ongoing gala food affair because the staff wants to break the monotony of cafeteria style dining for students in as innovative and creative a manner as possible.

"We also want to go out into the community and find restaurants that students might want to patronize—they can be bringing mom and dad there during a visit or just going out with friends for a change of pace," said DiSylvestro.

Chef Kevin O'Donnell of Harrison's Harbor Watch in Ocean City launched the week's festivities on Monday, April 6. He served oyster Baltimore, barbeque shrimp wrapped in bacon, oyster champagne, clams casino, clams and oysters on the half shell, lemon pepper mackerel, steamed spiced shrimp, grilled tuna and mahi-mahi.

Imperial Gallery was back on Tuesday, April 7, "by popular demand," said DiSylvestro. "Chinese food is very well accepted here and the students were really impressed with their last menu."

Cheng Sun, owner of Imperial Gallery in the Twilley Shopping Centre, and his son, Lewis, manager, prepared beef and broccoli, moo goo gai pan, stir fry mixed vegetables, imperial fried rice, kung-pao shrimp, egg rolls with hot mustard and duck sauce, and fortune cookies.

"My father and I think that this is a good opportunity for students who are afraid to try Chinese food to taste it and see whether or not they like it," said Lewis Sun. "A lot of students at the last dinner said that they had never tried it before and found out that it really was good. They told their friends, and as a result, many people were exposed to a wider variety of food," he said.

This year's Visiting Chefs Week was unique in that it included a local restauranteer who graduated summa cum laude from SSU three years ago. Pete Engler, owner of Nacho Pete's (a fast food Mexican restaurant in Salisbury), received the Perdue School of Business's highest award—the $5,000 Richard Bernstein Achievement Award for Excellence based on his academic excellence and potential for business success.

"Pete's is a classic story of how he got started," said DiSylvestro. "He proves the point that if your drive is strong enough, you can overcome obstacles and achieve your goals."

"This is a wonderful opportunity for me to give something back to the school," said Engler. "If it hadn't been for my years at SSU and the $5,000 Bernstein Award, I never would have been able to open Nacho Pete's. By seeing that I was able to turn my marketing ideas into a successful business, I hope that students will be encouraged in their own future business endeavors," he said.

On Wednesday, April 8, Engler served chicken fajitas, black bean soup, vegetarian beans, sopaipillas (a sweet fried bread) and Mexican corn bread.

"I wanted to offer a heart healthy dinner to the students," he said. "We have a lot of college students working with us at Nacho Pete's and they are all health conscious. I wanted to let students know that they can have exciting food that is good to eat and still have it be good for them," he added.

Chef Tim Walch of Phillips Seafood House in Ocean City rounded out the program on Thursday, April 9, with steamed spiced shrimp, baked salmon, wild rice, steamed green beans and peanut butter pie.

"I am always looking for new challenges because there is always something to be learned," said Walch. "I was interested in seeing how large the dining sevices operation was at SSU and I wanted to see first hand how they handle such a large volume—especially what shortcuts they use."

"I worked for Phillips Crab House in Ocean City when I was a student at SSU," said DiSylvestro. "I learned so much from them and now a lot of our students work for them as well—they are always calling me and asking if I have any students who are intested in working there. This gave me an opportunity to reciprocate for all they've done."

Working closely with DiSylvestro is Salisbury State's executive chef, Jon DeSormeau, a graduate of New York's Culinary Institute of America. The participating chefs submitted their ingredient lists and DeSormeau determined how many people needed to be served. "The biggest problem is being able to convert a recipe for 10-12 into 400-500 servings," said DeSormeau, "but our sophisticated computerized recipe system makes the task manageable."

"We let the chefs set the tempo and we work around it," said DiSylvestro. "We build a menu around whatever foods they submit. I make sure that there is a well balanced meal, including a vegetarian entree, soup, salad, etc.," he added.

The atmosphere in the Salisbury Room is more formal than regular cafeteria style dining, which basically means no baseball caps, sweats or cutoffs. There are linen table cloths, candles and either classical music, jazz or blues to help create a pleasant dining ambiance.

Area restauranteers who are interested in participating in future Visiting Chefs Weeks at SSU should call DiSylvestro at 543-6107.

Art Institute & Gallery Spring Show Plans

The Art Institute & Gallery is making plans for its 39th annual Spring Fine Arts Show. The show will be held this year in the Flanders Room at the Wicomico Youth & Civic Center.

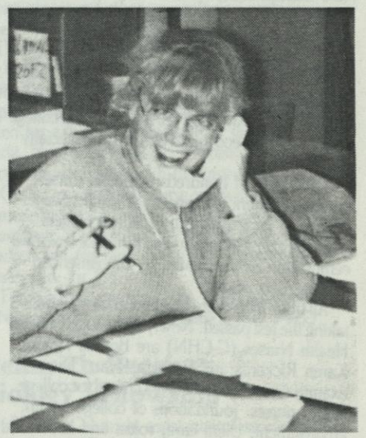
Some additions to the show this year include a silent auction, a live auction and guided tours of the show. The show will be held Friday, April 24, through Sunday, April 26. Local artist Jim Rehak has donated a painting, "Into the Park," for the raffle.

The silent auction will be open Friday from 7-9 p.m. and again Saturday from 10 a.m.-5:30 p.m. Included in the silent auction will be a variety of items: custom portraits by local artists, baked goods, gift certificates and a variety of services from local professionals and consultants. The live auction begins at 7:30 p.m. Saturday. Both auctions will take place in the Flanders Room during regular Spring Show hours.

A new feature this year is guided tours of the show; one tour is for children and the other for adults. Saturday at 1 p.m. Pat France, an art student at UMES, will contact a guided tour for students in grades six, seven and eight. Attendance is limited and preregistration is required. Call the AI&G at 546-4748 for information about registering for the children's tour.

The second tour, conducted by Page Hammond, a local art historian and art instructor at Salisbury State, is on Sunday at 2 p.m. Preregistration is not required for this tour; anyone interested in participating need only arrive at the Flanders Room before 2 p.m.

Show hours are Friday, 7-9 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m.-9 p.m.; and Sunday, 1-6 p.m. A $2 donation is requested at the door. For more information about the show, call Lynne Rosenthal at 546-4748 or Alex Ryan at 742-9522 or 968-1503. For information about entering as an exhibitor, call Susan Parker at 546-0218, evenings. Entry forms are also available at the Art Institute & Gallery on U.S. Rt. 50 at Lemmon Hill Lane in Salisbury. The gallery is open Monday through Saturday, noon-4 p.m.



SSU Phone Home. For the last two weeks some 20 Salisbury State University students have been calling alumni to update them on University activities and seek support during the annual Alumni Phonathon. Students represent sophomore through senior classes and a variety of majors from elementary education to business. The money they raise goes to such areas as scholarships, faculty research and classroom equipment purchases. Pictured is Susanna Schmid, a sophomore political science major from Oxford, MD.

Health Center Nurses Pass the Test

Although the first college health service was established at Amherst, MA, in 1859, college health was not recognized as a nursing specialty until 1991.

Then last fall hundreds of health nurses, whose experiences range from small college settings to large university medical centers, gathered at test sites nationwide to take a pioneer certification exam created by the American Nurses Association.

All three University Health Center staff nurses taking the test passed. Newly certified as College Health Nurses (C-CHN) are Brenda Hooks, Karen Rickards and Barbara Ryan. The examination tested five areas critical for college health nurses: foundations of college health, environment, client care, roles, and issues and trends.

The SSU Health Center nursing staff is made up entirely of certified registered nurses including three Adult Nurse Practitioners (C-ANP), Rosemary Cupp, Ann T. Patey and John Zimmerman. Because of practitioner certification, these latter three were exempt from the CHN test. Together SSU's Health Center nursing staff handles some 18,000 student visits during the academic year.

Piano Classes, Lessons Offered in the Fall Term

Piano classes and private lessons in piano are being offered this fall. Class Piano I (MUSA 205-001, Monday and Wednesdays, 8:55-9:50 a.m.) and Class Piano II (MUSA 205-001, Monday and Wednesdays, 10-10:50 a.m.) will be held in the new piano lab located in Fulton Hall.

The lab is a wonderful facility using electronic Roland pianos with 88 weighted keys that give the sound and feel of an acoustic piano. In addition, these instruments have the ability to produce different keyboard sounds such as harpsichord, jazz piano, etc., and to record one's own practicing. Also, the lab includes computer stations with keyboards for self-tutoring.

The prerequisite for Class Piano I is music fundamentals (MUSC 200) or permission by the instructor. Students who have already had private piano lessons might be eligible for Class Piano II or individual studio lessons (MUSA 390-006). In certain cases, a student's background could CLEP him or her out of Class Piano; the student would then be able to register for individual lessons.

Anyone interested in class piano or applied piano lessons please contact Linda Cockey in the Music Department (Fulton Hall, room 242) before preregistering. Enrollment is limited.

For students who have had prior piano lessons and reached a certain level of proficiency, harpsichord and organ lessons are available. Please contact Dr. Nancy Cooper in the Music Department before preregistering.

Women's Soccer Club

There is an important meeting for anyone interested in playing women's soccer next fall. The meeting is on Wednesday, April 15, at 7 p.m. in Maggs Gym, room 205.

If you are unable to attend the meeting, please contact Wayne Gorrow in the Campus Recreation Office, or call 543-6349.

Gehnrich Receives Biology Fellowship

Dr. Stephen Gehnrich, assistant professor in the Department of Biological Sciences, was recently awarded a PEW Fellowship by the Mount Desert Island Biological Laboratory (MDIBL) in Maine.

Gehnrich will be conducting research on the regulation of salt excretion in sharks. MDIBL is a prestigious marine laboratory, best known for its research contributions to the comparative physiology of the kidney and body fluids.

Can You Pass This Test?

Have you had active military duty? Have you passed your 10-year anniversary working with the State of Maryland? Are you in the Maryland Retirement System?

If you answer yes to all three questions, come to the Personnel Office and complete a form to receive credit for military years. (Bring your DD214/separation papers.)

The Maryland Retirement System will add your years of military service (up to a maximum of five) to your actual work years.

declined. A slide presentation focusing on the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic RR, linking Maryland's western shore with the ocean, will be presented by local railroad historian Jim Jackson. Many of the Shore's remaining depots and physical artifacts are becoming a focus of historic preservation and possible tourism sites; this will be the topic explored by Griffith, an active participant in efforts to save several such sites.

A panel of speakers, including Dr. William Wroten as chair, Donald Whaley of the SSU History Department, and County Extension Ag agent Wayne Shaff will make comments and lead the audience in a concluding roundtable disucssion.

The symposium is limited to the first 75 registrants; the registration fee of $15 includes lunch, refreshments and a symposium packet.

Anyone interested in attending the symposium should contact the Research Center at (410) 543-6312.

goals by giving the students a window on the community in which they live. "It can be a kind of social culture shock," he said. "Many of our students are white and come from the upper middle class. They come out of this program with a whole new positive attitude and feeling about people at the lower income levels of society."

The VITA students work at five sites on the lower Shore: Wicomico County Social Services, the Blackwell Library at SSU, and at public libraries in Ocean City, Hurlock and Cambridge. Schedules vary, but they are available in the public libraries on Saturdays from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. through April 11.

For Roger Young, participating in VITA was just one of the many things he values from his years as an accounting major at SSU. Young graduated in May 1990 and went on to earn the prestigious Sells Award: presented to the top 100 scorers among the 75,000 who take the CPA test nationwide. Young is one of three Sells Award recipients that the Perdue School of Business is proud to count among recent graduates.

APRIL 16, 1992 VOL. XIII NO. 25

Cotton, Inc. CEO Great Leader Speaker

J. Nicholas Hahn, president and chief executive officer of Cotton Incorporated, discusses the transformation of U.S. cotton into a worldwide industry when the Great Leader Lecture Series resumes this spring.

Sponsored by the Perdue School of Business, Hahn's presentation is on Tuesday, April 28, at 11 a.m. in the Wicomico Room of the Guerrieri University Center. The lecture is free and open to the public.

How did one of America's oldest agricultural industries become one of its most advanced and competitive? The answer has to do with concerted leadership on the part of America's 35,000 cotton producers. It has to do with U.S. competiveness—an essential lesson for the 1990s and for the next century. It is the story of the U.S. cotton industry and its exclusive marketing and research company: Cotton Incorporated.

Since the inception of Cotton Incorporated in the early 1970s, the U.S. cotton industry has transformed itself from a fragmented domestic business into a cohesive, worldwide enterprise. In the last 20 years, the American cotton industry has spent time, energy and resources building for the future.

The results are impressive: Expanding markets at home and abroad, revolutionary new technology, endless product innovation and dramatically increased consumer awareness and demand for U.S. cotton. Consider two examples of this success: While the United States produces 13 percent of total world trade in goods and services, American cotton has captured one-third of the world's trade in cotton. And

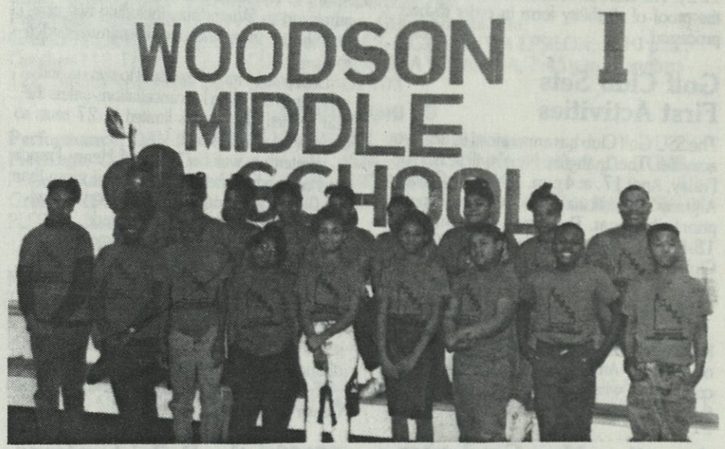
STEPPing Out For Area Middle School Students



Sixth grade students from Woodson Middle School who are participating in a special project sponsored by the Education Department proudly display their T-shirts which they designed themselves.

If you ask a group of sixth graders at Woodson Middle School in Crisfield what STEPP means, they will proudly tell you that it means "Striving to Excel Personally and Professionally."

Donning special red and black T-shirts which they designed themselves, these 20 students might be spotted on the steps of Independence Hall, touring the new Ward Museum of Wildfowl Art or attending a career fair in science and mathematics.

They are participating in a special project which is being sponsored by the Education Department. STEPP encourages minority students to earn good grades, to go to college and to consider careers in teaching.

Project director Dr. Ellen V. Whitford explains that STEPP was developed in response to a national and local need for minority teachers.

"Since public schools serve students from a variety of cultural, racial and religious backgrounds, it follows that the teachers in the schools should also reflect that cultural diversity," said Whitford. "Students should learn that teachers, too, can come from many different backgrounds.

"In addition, minority teachers can break down stereotypes and serve as role models who may encourage minority children to strive for success," she continued. "Unfortunately, there is a greater need for minority teachers than there are minority individuals who are planning

'Radio Reception' Is SWAC Fundraiser

From the nights when "The Shadow" reigned to today when the Flamingo Brothers, two very hip pink plastic birds, stand guard at the stage of RFD-Radio Free Delmarva, the medium of radio has fascinated listeners.

The Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council celebrates the glories of radio past and pleasures of radio present in "Radio Reception, a Night on the Town with Radio," on Saturday, May 16.

"Radio has been a special part of American and Delmarva life. We take it so much for granted that we sometimes fail to recognize the artistry that goes into its production," said Davina Grace Hill, executive director of SWAC. "We hope this evening will not only be fun, but leave us a little more appreciative of that humble plastic box in the dashboard and on the nightstand."

The evening begins at 6 p.m. at the Guerrieri University Center's Wicomico Room. While excerpts of old radio programs and radio music play, patrons may enjoy a reception of gourmet desserts, including chocolate truffles, mini-eclairs, fresh fruit with chocolate sauce, baked brie with garlic and almonds, iced cappucino, flavored coffees and a cash bar. Dessert is followed by a salute to "Vintage Radio" programs by Darryl Nixon, owner of radio station OC 104. Decorating the room will be a display of old-time radios assembled just for the occasion.

Then, at 7:30 p.m. patrons move across campus to Holloway Hall Auditorium where the focus shifts to radio present. Patrons become members of a live radio audience for the May

How To Use Your Vision Plan

For employees with the state vision plan, prior to having your eyes (or those of your dependents) examined you need to obtain a claim form. If you did not receive one automatically on the 24th month anniversary of your last visit you may obtain one by calling 1-800-654-3926.

Any family member who is a student or disabled and 20 years or older must also obtain a Certification of Dependent Eligibility form from the Personnel Office (Holloway Hall, room 222). The claim form must be submitted with the proof of eligibility form in order to be processed.

Golf Club Sets First Activities

The SSU Golf Club has announced its first two activities. The "Inaugural Nine" will be held on Friday, April 17, at 4 p.m. at Nutter's Crossing. A group instructional clinic will be offered just prior to this event. The second event will be an 18-hole tournament at Nassawango Country Club at 1 p.m. on Saturday, April 25. Further details on both events are available at the Campus Recreation Office in Maggs Gym.

Over 50 students, faculty and staff of all skill levels have already joined the newest sports club on campus. Any member of the campus community who enjoys the game is invited to join. Sign up at campus recreation.

Attention May Graduates

Commencement Exercises will be held on Saturday, May 23, at 10 a.m. in the Wicomico Youth & Civic Center. Detailed information will be mailed to graduates at a later date.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Winterthur Bus Trip

The Guerrieri University Center and the Horticulture Department are sponsoring a bus trip to Winterthur Museum and Gardens on Friday, May 1.

The bus leaves the Dogwood parking lot, on the south side of the Guerrieri Center, at 7:15 a.m. and returns at approximately 6 p.m. There is a brief coffee stop before entering the museum. Lunch can be purchased on the grounds. No stops are made on the return trip and no food or beverages are allowed on the bus.

Sign-up for everyone is at the Guerrieri Center information desk beginning Monday, April 17. The cost is $15 and includes bus and admission to Winterthur, including two one-hour house tours and one 45-minute garden tour.

Each person must be present to sign up and no refunds are given for cancellations unless the seat is filled. The bus is limited to 27 seats so early sign-up is advised.

Winterthur was the home of Henry Francis du Pont and houses a collection of more than 50,000 objects housed in a nine-story sprawling building on grounds that include 200 landscaped acres outside Wilmington, DE. DuPont was one of America's preminnent collectors of American antiques. He was also an avid gardener able to realize his grand vision of a naturalistic garden in the English landscape style. This combination of interests leads to the distinctive appeal of the place today.

For additional information call the Guerrieri Center Office at 543-6100.

'Ridin' the Rails' Explores Local RR History

Remember when you could catch the train on a nice summer's day at Easton—or Claiborne—or Hebron—or many points in between and ride all the way into Ocean City for less than you can get a fill-up at the gas station today? Those days are long gone, but the memories and effects of them are not.

The Research Center for Delmarva History and Culture at Salisbury State will recall some of those in an exhibit of photographs and memorabilia opening in the Atrium Gallery of the Guerrieri University Center on Thursday, April 30. The gallery is open Monday through Saturday, 11 a.m.-4 p.m.

The exhibit features a number of photographs of those remaining stations and landmarks of the railroads, often serving far different functions today, along with reproductions of similar views from the past. The contemporary views feature the photographic work of John Horney, a 1991 graduate of SSU and free-lance photographer.

Also included in the exhibit are a number of artifacts from the "railroadin'" era, along with such reminders of the age as tickets, uniforms, schedules, music and even spikes from dismantled rail lines. Serving as consultant on the exhibit is Kent Griffith, local railroad enthusiast and historian.

An examination of the far-reaching effects of the coming of the railroad to the Peninsula is the topic of a symposium, also titled "Ridin' the Rails," to be held at SSU on Saturday, May 9, and co-sponsored by the Westside Historical Society of Wicomico County.

Hiking Trip Planned

The Outdoor Club would like to request the honor of everyone's presence on its next trip, a fun-filled weekend of hiking in Shenandoah National Park, VA, on April 24-26. If interested sign up at the Monday meetings at 9 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room A of the Guerrieri University Center.

Call Kelley Rogers at 546-4395 for more information.

Information Regarding Employee Prescription Cards

Anyone planning a trip out of the country who is on daily medication should contact the Personnel Office a few weeks before leaving. The Personnel Office will help arrange to obtain enough of the prescription to span the duration of an employee's absence from the area. A special form must be filed to accomplish this.

For all trips, it is recommended employees obtain an extra prescription from their doctor to take with them as a precaution. Many pharmacies will not refill medicine based on the label alone—pharmacists require an actual prescription from an employee's physician.

If traveling within the United States an employee's PCS card will be honored at most large pharmacies.

If employees lose or misplace their prescription card don't panic. Employees can still get a prescription filled by having their pharmacist key in 4181-1000 and their social security number followed by the birthdate of the family member needing the medicine. Retirees can do the same with 4181-4000. Contractual employees (or anyone who billed directly at home for their coverage) need to use 4181-3000.

If employees are forced to pay cash for a prescription, they may obtain a refund by filing a claim form. There is a minimum $12.50 charge for an employee's deductible and processing fees. Any prescription with a cost of $12.50 or less will not be refunded. Claim forms may be obtained by contacting the Personnel Office.

Employees should have their pharmacist call the PCS headquarters and talk with a professional there about any problems encountered when trying to fill a prescription. Each pharmacy has a special 800 number it can use for just such purposes. Sometimes the problem is as simple as an incorrect birthdate.

It is the employee's responsibility to notify the Personnel Office promptly when there is any change in family status. Example: children stop attending college and therefore aren't legally permitted to remain on an employee's policy (but are permitted to purchase coverage under their own name); children return to college after a semester or two of inactivity and are legally permitted to receive coverage under an employee's policy if they meet the age requirements; married people get divorced or legally separated; single people get married; babies arrive, etc. The quicker employees notify the Personnel Office the sooner appropriate coverage can be arranged.

Groundskeeper

The University has an immediate opening for a groundkeeper in the Physical Plant. This is a nine-month (March 1-November 30) contractual position (no paid benefits) paying $6 an hour for a 40-hour week running from Thursday through Monday.

The work includes, but is not limited to, operating mowers and field lining equipment, policing, athletic equipment set-up, seeding, aerating, etc. High school graduates who have a valid driver's license are preferred.

Interested applicants may complete an application in the Personnel Office, room 222, Holloway Hall, Salisbury State University by April 22.

Salisbury State University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, minorities and disabled persons are encouraged to apply.

Oscar-Winning Writer Lectures Here April 30

With the Academy Awards recently in the news it is most appropriate that Oscar-winning screenwriter Daniel Taradash will be speaking here on Thursday, April 30, at 7 p.m. in Devilbiss Auditorium about his adaptation of "From Here to Eternity," which swept the Academy Awards in 1953.

Taradash later served as president of the Motion Picture Academy in 1973-74. The Taradash lecture at Salisbury State is part of the dedication week activities for the newly constructed Fulton Hall and is funded in part by a grant from the Maryland Humanities Council. The public is invited.

The following Saturday (May 2) at 8 p.m. Taradash will introduce his film adaptation of "Picnic," starring Kim Novak and William Holden, to be shown at the Island Roxy as part of the Chincoteague Island Big-Screen Movie Weekend. The Chincoteague Island Film Festival will showcase several films from the 1950s including the "African Queen" (Friday, May 1, 8 p.m.), "The Forbidden Planet" (Saturday, May 2, 10:30 a.m.), "Singin' in the Rain" (Saturday, 1:30 p.m.), "Picnic" and "The Lavender Hill Mob" (Sunday, May 3, 2 p.m.).

Taradash was educated at Harvard before going to Hollywood in 1938 to work on the screen version of the Clifford Odets play "Golden Boy" (1939). Most of later scripts were adaptations of novels, including "From Here to Eternity" (1953), "Desiree" (1954) and "Hawaii" (1966), and plays including "Bell, Book and Candle" (1958), as well as "Golden Boy" and "Picnic."

Literature/Film Quarterly is produced at Salisbury State and is now in its 20th year of publication, a remarkable achievement. The "Humanities in Motion" lecture series which brings Taradash to the Eastern Shore is subtitled "20 Years of Literature and Film." Other speakers in the series are Dr. David Lavery of Memphis State University on the topic of "Autobiography and Film" (March 31), Dr. Thomas M. Leitch of the University of Delaware on the Hollywood representation of Native Americans (April 14) and Dr. Rebecca Pauly of West Chester University on "Myth and Cinema" (April 21). All of the lectures are in Devilbiss Auditorium at 7 p.m.

The series is funded by the Maryland Humanities Council, the Fulton School of the Liberal Arts, and the Salisbury State Cultural Events Committee.

Sea Gull Sports Roundup

by Paul Ohanian, Sports Information Director

The men's lacrosse winning streak reached seven games last Saturday as the Sea Gulls tamed the Tigers of Hampden-Sydney 21-6. SSU, ranked fourth in the nation, improved to 8-1 on the year. Senior Jeff Chenowith scored three times in the first period to give the Gulls a 6-0 lead after 15 minutes. The Sea Gull defense held the Tigers scoreless for the first 19 minutes while SSU opened a 9-0 lead on the way to a 10-3 halftime edge. Kevin Hohner finished with a game-high four goals and three assists. Art Morley added two goals and three assists, and Dan Gourley and Bobby Calabritto each scored twice. The Gulls visit seventh-ranked Gettysburg on Saturday. Nearly as hot as the men's squad is the women's lacrosse team, winners of three straight. SSU improved to 6-3 on the year with last Saturday's 17-16 shootout win over St. Mary's. Joanne Fotia led the offense with five goals while Kim Benz, Flossy Owens and Carolyn Hyman each added three. Kris Hart made 16 saves in goal. The women host Washington College on Thursday at 4:30 p.m. and welcome Frostburg State on Saturday at noon in their final two home games of the season. The men's and women's track teams both captured top honors at last Saturday's Bison Invitational at Gallaudet College. The Sea Gull men outdistanced an 11-team field with 96 points, while the women scored 130 points to edge second place Catholic by five points. Jeremy Rallo had first place finishes in the shot put and javelin and added a third in the discus to lead the men. Tim Smith placed first in both the 5,000 and 10,000 meter races. Erin Green led the women with wins in the 1,500 and 3,000 and a third in the 800. Her time of 10:54 in the 3,000 bettered her own school-record by two seconds. The softball team swept a pair from Stockton State last Saturday before dropping a pair to top-ranked Trenton State on Sunday. Diane Racine's RBI single in the ninth inning scored Monica Diggs with the winning run in game one against Stockton. Kim Richardson's bases loaded triple keyed SSU's game two victory. Sonja Akers improved her pitching record to 7-2 with wins in both games. The Gulls didn't fare as well against Trenton, losing 11-0 and 12-0 with just two hits in each game against the defending Division III champions. The Gulls stand at 10-9 entering Thursday's ESAC doubleheader at Allentown.

Mayor Schmoke To Speak at Business League Dinner

Mayor Kurt L. Schmoke of Baltimore will be the guest speaker at the Delmarva Business League's first annual Dr. Booker T. Washington Awards Banquet to be held Saturday, May 2, at the Delmar Convention Center in honor of the late educator and founder of the National Business League.

Activities begin with a 5 p.m. social hour which Schmoke will attend, followed by dinner at 6 p.m. Black tie is optional.

Tickets are $20 per person. Businesses and organizations are encouraged to purchase tables of 8, 12, 14 or 16, and advertise in the souvenir program booklet. As an affiliate of the NBL, the oldest African-American trade organization in the nation, the Delmarva chapter is involved in advocacy, informational seminars, networking and technical assistance.

James Purnell, Jr. of Berlin who serves as banquet committee chairman, says the league is raising funds to help defray its operational expenditures for the 1992-93 fiscal year. Outstanding black business leaders and educators from the lower Shore will be honored as well.

Schmoke, 42, was elected mayor in November 1987 and was re-elected to a second term in November 1991. A native of Baltimore, he attended the city's public schools and graduated with a degree in history from Yale University in 1971. After attending Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar, he received his degree in 1976 from the Harvard Law School.

For tickets or more information, call the league at 860-2640.

Rodgers Earns Nursing Doctorate

Shielda Rodgers, assistant professor of nursing, was recently awarded the Doctor of Philosophy degree in nursing from the University of Maryland at Baltimore.

Her dissertation research, "Minority Student Success in Predominantly White Schools of Nursing: Cognitive and Noncognitive Factors," was conducted in five universities in Virginia and Maryland. The research examined the role that cognitve factors (Scholastic Aptitude Test scores and high school grades) and noncognitive factors (academic self concept, social isolation and self esteem) play in a student's ability to be successful.

Results indicated that success for black students was significantly related to academic self concept and high school grades. Self esteem for black students was significantly higher than white students but was not a factor in academic achievement.

Small at Conference On Women's History

Dr. Clara L. Small, assistant professor of history, recently attended the Rochester (NY) Institute of Technology Women's conference titled "Women's History: A Patchwork of Many Lives," from March 20-22.

The Women's Conference emphasized the fact that although women of every class and ethnicity have served as leaders in social, economic and cultural change, their roles have been overlooked and devalued in most scholarly work. The purpose of the conference was to acknowledge that the lives of women are composed of significant multiple roles, choices, responsibilities, options and challenges. The conference also celebrated Women's History Month by taking steps to appreciate diverse perspectives and by addressing the roles of women in the workplace, in the home, in education and in society.

Some of the topics explored at the conference were "Advocacy: The Next Plane for Women," "Breast Cancer: Developing Radical Responses to a Hidden and Growing Epidemic," "A World Without Women: The Clerical Culture of Western Science," "Abortion," "Healthy Choices for Healthy Living," "Women's Health Issues," "Gender Stereotyping," "Overcoming Obstacles," "Race and Gender," "Report vs. Rapport: Men and Women in Communication," "Feminism: An Open Forum," "Common Problems, Diverse Solutions: Quality of Life Issues Facing Contemporary Women," "Networking and Mentoring," "Acknowledging Diversity in Curriculum: A Focus on Women and People of Color," and numerous other gender related topics. The keynote speaker for the conference was New York Congresswoman Louise Slaughter.

Cotton Incorporated is headed by Hahn, who became its president and CEO in 1982. Hahn is a frequent speaker before business and professional organizations and has been invited to address The Conference Board, the Commonwealth Club of California, the American Marketing Association and Columbia University Graduate School of Business, among others.

Hahn started his career in 1962 at Colonial Woolen Mills in Cleveland, OH, and in 1964 he joined Dan River Mills in New York. careers in teaching. STEPP is designed as an intervention program to encourage and nurture minority students who have the potential to become teachers," she said.

The students in STEPP, 20 sixth-grade boys and girls, were selected by their teachers because they have the academic ability to go to college. In sixth grade, students start making decisions about the courses they will take and the subjects they will study. If students choose courses which will not prepare them for college, they may get behind before they know it.

STEPP's activities are designed to help these students develop positive attitudes toward school and toward themselves.

"For example, they went on a field trip to the historic areas of Philadelphia and had special lessons at school on American history," explained Whitford. "For them, Independence Hall and the Liberty Bell are more than bits of history from textbooks—they've actually seen them," she said.

Other activities assure that a college campus is not a foreign or unfriendly place. SSU's Education Department faculty recently treated them to a pizza party along with a tour of the campus. And there are plans to visit other campuses as well.

Education majors at SSU are scheduled to visit Woodson Middle School this spring and work on special projects with the STEPP students. Some of the STEPP students will attend a special math and science summer program which will allow them to stay on the University's campus for two weeks.

Still other activities encourage them to work toward helping others. Students who are considering careers in teaching should have the chance to experience the rewards of reading a story to a child who can't yet read or of helping a fellow student solve a homework question. The STEPP students are planning a service project for this spring which will allow them to volunteer their time working with other students.

The STEPP program is funded through the Lisa Kolodny Memorial Fund. This fund was established with the Salisbury State University Foundation to encourage volunteer activities in the schools in memory of Lisa Kolodny, an SSU education major who was tragically killed in a fire. Her grandparents set up this memorial fund in the hope that it would benefit children in the community.

"And through this project, students are already benefiting," said Whitford. "If the project is successful and some of these children do go on to become teachers, even other children will benefit. It's a long-term investment, but hopefully there will be significant returns for education on the Eastern Shore."

Bach's Lunch Returns For Spring Series

Bach's Lunch returns to St. Peter's Episcopal Church on April 21 for six consecutive Tuesdays. The series of half-hour lunchtime concerts, co-sponsored by the Music Department of St. Peter's Church and the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council, is now in its sixth season of presenting 12 mini-concerts per year—six in the spring.

The concerts begin at 12:15 p.m. and end at 12:45 p.m. "Bach's Lunch offers an alternative to the harried lunch hour," said Davina Grace Hill, executive director of the Arts Council. "Bring a bag lunch, purchase a soda or brownie at the door, relax and feel free to munch while listening to good music."

The series begins on April 21 with the SSU Brass Quintet, followed on April 28 by the SSU Saxophone Quartet. Last fall, these two groups, under the direction of Dr. Richard Johnson, shared a half-hour Bach's Lunch concert and proved so popular that they have returned in the spring, each with concerts of their own.

On May 5, Dr. Michael O'Loughlin, Robin Cockey and Charlie Stegman present a program of folk and bluegrass music with strong Irish flavor.

Mae Higgins follows with the distinctive sound of the oboe on May 12, then Linda Winchurch's classical guitar stylings are on May 19.

The final concert of the season brings Jacqueline Clarys and Daniel Hopkins, members of the Soldier's Chorus of the U.S. Army Field Band, in a special Memorial Day performance dedicated to area U.S. armed forces veterans.

'Are Humans Superior To Animals' Discussed

Do you enjoy hearing controversial issues discussed in an intelligent, thoughtful way? If so, consider attending the 12th annual Spring Philosophy Symposium on Saturday, April 25.

The topic for this year's symposium is "Are Humans Superior to Animals?" The event is sponsored by the SSU Philosophical Society, the Fulton School of Liberal Arts, the Salisbury State Program Board and the Honors Program. The Symposium will be held in Caruthers Auditorium and begins at 9:30 a.m. (Come at 9:15 for coffee and donuts.)

Dr. Jerry Miller of the Philosophy Department said, in discussing this year's program, that "our purpose is to bring thoughtful, philosophical reflection to bear on a topic which often generates more heat than light. We'll have two visiting philosophers, and we expect them to discuss both the ethical issues We'll have two visiting philosophers, and we expect them to discuss both the ethical issues which have been raised regarding the treatment of animals, and the question of whether there are fundamental differences between humans and animals."

Sophanes Presents 'An Evening of One Acts'

Sophanes, the student theatre organization, presents "An Evening of One Acts" on May 1-3 and 7-9. Each of the three presentations are directed and performed by SSU students.

The first presentation, "A Marriage Proposal," directed by Jen Clymer, (sophomore, communication arts major, from Phillipsburg, NJ) is a Russian-based comedy consisting of three characters. Clay Eichleberger plays a young man asking for his girlfriend's hand in marriage. He must ask his girlfriend's father, played by Don Atkinson, for his permission to marry his daughter, played by Pam Niebert. The play shows the difficulties the characters face to be together.

The second presentation, directed by Jim Waltz, (junior, psychology and communication arts major, from New Castle, DE) is taken from the play "Dolores," a drama concerned with two sisters who dislike one another. One sister, Dolores, played by Stacy Pushkar, performs a dramatic action which finds her going to her sister, Sondria, played by Kelle Hare, for help. "Dolores" has its funny moments as well.

67th Honors Convocation Is Annual Student Salute, Dr. Kathleen Geipe, '76, Is Speaker

Salisbury State will honor some 400 outstanding scholars and student leaders at its 67th annual Honors Convocation on Friday, May 1, at 3:30 p.m. in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

"Honors Convocation is that time of the year we salute those students who have distinguished themselves in their academic and student leadership pursuits," said Dr. K. Nelson Butler, vice president of academic affairs. "Through their efforts they gain individual recognition but also give rise to pride from their family and friends and the University."

The Honors Convocation, which dates back to the founding of the University in 1925, this year recognizes students in nearly 60 different areas of academic life. These awards reflect organizations as diverse as international honor societies to the Wall Street Journal to local patrons and clubs saluting civic leaders such as Sam and Marilyn Seidel and the late Doris Gay Calcott.

According to tradition, each year the Honors Convocation Committee chooses a member of the SSU Alumni Association to give the address.

Dr. Kathleen Geipe, a 1976 graduate with a Bachelor of Science in biology, is this year's Honor's Convocation speaker. The title of her speech is "Success: Plan on It."

Geipe, who earned her D.D.S. from the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery, University of Maryland Dental School, is a pioneer for women in dentistry in Maryland. She was the first woman dentist on the Eastern Shore and has had a private practice in Salisbury for over a decade. She was the first woman president of the Eastern Shore Dental Society. She is also the first woman delegate, the first woman trustee and the first woman nominated president of the Maryland State Dental Association, and the first woman member of the Maryland delegation to the American Dental Association.

She is a fellow of the Pierre Fauchard International Dental Honor Society and a member of the American Dental Association and the American Academy of Periodontology.

Her community involvement and service is extensive. From 1981-87 she served as director of the Out Patient Dental Clinic at the Holly Center. For six years she was on the Coastal Hospice board of directors and served as its president in 1986-87. She was also on the Go-Getters board of directors for six years serving as its president from 1988-89. She was on the professional advisory board of the Epilepsy Association of the Eastern Shore and is a member of the Wicomico Rotary Club.

Despite many professional and community commitments, she makes time for some favorite hobbies which she said include "wave running, gourmet dining and relaxing where it's warm." Here is a listing of Honors Convocation awards: recognition of Dean's List students, honor society initiates, Phi Kappa Phi initiates and "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges," Achievement Key, Campus Life, Honors Program, Art Department Meritorious, Biology Faculty, School of Business Outstanding Senior, Purchasing Management Association of Maryland, the Joanne Grant Scholarship in Theatre, The Leland Starnes Memorial, Duane C. Winterthur Bus Trip

The Guerrieri University Center and the Horticulture Department are sponsoring a bus trip to Winterthur Museum and Gardens on Friday, May 1.

The bus leaves the Dogwood parking lot, on the south side of the Guerrieri Center, at 7:15 a.m. and returns at approximately 6 p.m. There is a brief coffee stop before entering the museum. Lunch can be purchased on the grounds. No stops are made on the return trip and no food or beverages are allowed on the bus.

Sign-up for everyone is at the Guerrieri Center information desk beginning Monday, April 17. The cost is $15 and includes bus and admission to Winterthur, including two one-hour house tours and one 45-minute garden tour.

Each person must be present to sign up and no refunds are given for cancellations unless the seat is filled. The bus is limited to 27 seats so early sign-up is advised.

Winterthur was the home of Henry Francis du Pont and houses a collection of more than 50,000 objects housed in a nine-story sprawling building on grounds that include 200 landscaped acres outside Wilmington, DE. DuPont was one of America's preminment collectors of American antiques. He was also an avid gardener able to realize his grand vision of a naturalistic garden in the English landscape style. This combination of interests leads to the distinctive appeal of the place today.

For additional information call the Guerrieri Center Office at 543-6100.

Attention May Graduates

Commencement Exercises will be held on Saturday, May 23, at 10 a.m. in the Wicomico Youth & Civic Center. Detailed information will be mailed to graduates at a later date.

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

Respiratory Therapy Is Fully Accredited

Out of 171 respiratory therapy programs that were reviewed for accreditation in 1991 by the Joint Review Committee for Respiratory Therapy Education (JRCRTE), the respiratory therapy program at Salisbury State was one of only 14 other RT programs that received full five-year unrestricted accreditation, according to Ted Wiberg, chair of the SSU Department of Respiratory Therapy.

Wiberg credits this accomplishment to the dedicated faculty, staff and students and administrative support that makes the program excel. Anyone interested in pursuing a health career in the respiratory therapy profession should contact Wiberg at (410) 543-6418.

JRCRTE is a member of the Council on Allied Health Education and Accreditation (CAHEA).

SSU Grad's Work In Ward Museum Preview

When J. Joseph Sweet was an undergraduate visual arts major at Salisbury State, he frequently visited the Ward Museum in Holloway Hall on campus.

Almost a decade later, Sweet's work is part of the Preview of the Ward Museum of Wildfowl Art's new building in Salisbury. His painting, "Rest," was among those chosen from works by an international field of artists to be part of the Leigh Yawkey Woodson Art Museum's "Birds in Art" exhibit. The prestigious annual traveling exhibit forms the highlight of the Ward Museum's Preview, April 12-May 25. This year's show marked the second time in a row Sweet's work was chosen for the prestigious exhibit.

Sweet, who resides in Bowie, MD, is a full-time professional artist working in computer design and graphics—a profession which leaves him little time for his own painting. He considers himself primarily a wildfowl painter, although he looks forward to expanding his subject matter.

Sweet credits the Ward Museum—especially its annual fall wildfowl art exhibition—for sparking his interest in wildfowl art. He says he entered last year's "Birds in Art" on a whim, without any expectation of being chosen. The second year, he says, was even sweeter, for it proved his selection was not a one-time thing.

Sweet's father, also a wildfowl artist, was chosen for the 1988 and 1989 "Birds in Art" shows, but father and son have yet to be selected in the same year. "We're like two ships passing in the night," said the younger Sweet.

Sweet's wildfowl paintings—he produces about one a year—illustrate a realistically rendered bird against a muted, almost abstract background. Sweet says he considers his style "naturalistic," but places aesthetics first. "I don't feel it is necessary to create an overall realistic image," he said.

"Birds in Art" is on view at the Ward Museum of Wildfowl Art, 909 Schumaker Drive, Salisbury, through May 25. Admission to the preview is free and hours are Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m.; and Sunday, noon-5 p.m.

Attention Graduating Loan Borrowers

All students borrowing under the Stafford (formerly Guaranteed Student Loan)/SLS loan program, on or after July 1, 1987, are required to attend an exit interview with financial aid personnel.

It is mandatory that they attend one of the following sessions: Tuesday, May 5, 5 p.m., Nanticoke Rooms A and B, Guerrieri University Center; or Wednesday, May 6, 5 p.m., Nanticoke Rooms A and B, Guerrieri University Center.

For those who choose not to attend, their school records and diploma will be withheld.

Students on an internship, working or student teaching must make arrangements to attend.

Faculty, Staff Start Minority Scholarship

The University's faculty and staff are making a financial commitment to help increase the campus' minority enrollment.

"We are competing with other colleges and universities which offer scholarships to attract minority students," said Leon Burks, associate dean of admissions at SSU, which currently has the lowest percentage of minority students among four-year colleges and universities in the University of Maryland System.

"Understanding SSU's situation," said Burks, who initiated efforts to establish the scholarship, "the faculty and staff here have taken it upon themselves to help in the initial funding of this minority scholarship."

"We believe," said Burks, "that by establishing the Charles H. Chipman Scholarship we will enhance the ability of the University to attract minority students and improve the harmony among all students here."

Thus far, the University community has donated $3,000 toward the Charles H. Chipman Scholarship fund.

Dr. Chipman moved to Salisbury in 1915 and for the next half century was the prime mover in promoting advancement for African-Americans through education in Wicomico County and on the Eastern Shore. He ultimately served as president of the Maryland Education Association. He was a respected and beloved leader in the Salisbury business and religious communities. Salisbury State awarded him an honorary doctorate in 1974.

The SSU Chipman Scholarship will be based on the student's high school record and ACT or SAT results upon entering SSU. However, if students are academically equal, then financial need probably will be the determining factor for the award.

"Over the past few years it has been our hope to receive a large financial donation to assist SSU with minority recruitment," said Burks. "This has been difficult and not very successful. Now we are requesting businesses, civic organizations and friends to donate to the Charles H. Chipman Scholarship to provide funding for qualified students. Our faculty and staff have made a strong financial commitment to our students, and we trust the community will want to do likewise."

The Salisbury State University Foundation Office will handle all donations. Please make checks payable to SSU Foundation and indicate C. H. Chipman Scholarship.

Chamber Ensembles Performance Is April 29

The Fulton School of Liberal Arts and the Department of Music will present a recital by the chamber ensembles in room 112 of Fulton Hall on Wednesday, April 29, at 7 p.m.

Three chamber ensembles will present a variety of repertoire spanning the 17th to 20th centuries. The SSU Brass Quintet will perform works by American composers Victor Ewald and Charles Ives. The SSU Saxophone Quartet will present works by Henry Cowell, Peter Tcaikowsky, Johann Sebastian Bach and Henry Purcell.

The Chamber Winds, comprised of players from the SSU Wind Sinfonia and Salisbury Symphony Orchestra, will present two late-20th century chamber pieces composed for 10 wind players whose instrumentation comprise brass and woodwind quintets. Vincent Persichetti's "Seranade No. 1, Op. 1," written in 1963, is conceived in five short movements. "Concertino for Wind and Brass Quintets," written by Robert Washburn in 1966, is conceived in two movements. Both compositions demonstrate a mastery of scoring for brass and woodwind quintets and a virtuosic caliber of writing in the contemporary chamber medium.

Chamber ensembles from Salisbury State maintain an extensive performance schedule throughout the academic year. Inclusive to recital requirements, 1991-92 on- and off-campus performances have included "Savor the Symphony," St. Peter's Episcopal Church Bach Lunch, the Salisbury Festival and the Maryland Teachers Association Conference in Ocean City. The Chamber Music program is under the auspices of Dr. Richard L. Johnson, assistant professor of music and director of wind studies at SSU.

The recital is being presented as part of the week of activities celebrating the opening of the new Fulton Hall. Admission is free and open to the public. For further information regarding this event or other upcoming University recitals and concerts, contact the Department of Music at 543-6385.

by Paul Ohanian, Sports Information Director

It's a busy week in Sea Gull sports as several teams close out their '92 seasons with tournaments and championships through Saturday. The men's tennis squad finishes its season with the ESAC Tournament on Friday and Saturday. Coach Dean Burroughs' team seeks its fourth straight conference championship, and will have the luxury of playing at home. Matches begin at 12:30 p.m. on Friday and continue through Saturday afternoon. Ken Soliday, Dave Hardesty, Brian Weist and Eric Balliett are all likely to be top singles seeds in their respective flights when the pairings are announced.

The men's and women's track teams host their only home meet of the season this Saturday when the annual Sea Gull Invitational begins at 9:30 a.m. The SSU women finished fourth of 16 teams in last week's Cardinal Classic in Washington, D.C. while the men placed eighth among 16 squads. Senior Erin Green set a new school-record of 10:41 in winning the 3,000 meters, and also finished second in the 1,500 meters. Tim Smith won the 10,000 meters while establishing a new meet-record with a time of 32:54.

The women's lacrosse team (7-4) finishes its season at the Maryland State Tournament on Saturday and Sunday. Despite five goals by Flossy Owens and three by Joanne Fotia, the Gulls had their four-game win streak snapped last Saturday with a narrow 11-10 loss to undefeated Frostburg State.

The baseball team (7-14) hosts Shenandoah in an important ESAC doubleheader this Saturday. The Gulls split four games last week, pounding Washington 14-2 and Christopher Newport 12-2 at home before dropping a twinbill at Frostburg, 12-5 and 5-0. Dave Shull was 4-9 with a triple, four runs and three RBIs in the two wins.

Not to be forgotten is the men's lacrosse team, 10-1 overall coming off last Saturday's come-from-behind overtime win at Gettysburg. The Gulls have moved to third in the USILA poll and ride a nine-game win streak into Chestertown this weekend for the annual "War on the Shore" against Washington. Art Morley's fifth goal of the game, 29 seconds into sudden-death, was the winner against seventh-ranked Gettysburg. WC is ranked eighth this week.

Oscar-Winning Writer Lectures Here April 30

With the Academy Awards recently in the news it is most appropriate that Oscar-winning screenwriter Daniel Taradash will be speaking here on Thursday, April 30, at 7 p.m. in Devilbiss Auditorium about his adaptation of "From Here to Eternity," which swept the Academy Awards in 1953.

Taradash later served as president of the Motion Picture Academy in 1973-74. The Taradash lecture at Salisbury State is part of the dedication week activities for the newly constructed Fulton Hall and is funded in part by a grant from the Maryland Humanities Council. The public is invited.

The following Saturday (May 2) at 8 p.m. Taradash will introduce his film adaptation of "Picnic," starring Kim Novak and William Holden, to be shown at the Island Roxy as part of the Chincoteague Island Big-Screen Movie Weekend. The Chincoteague Island Film Festival will showcase several films from the 1950s including the "African Queen" (Friday, May 1, 8 p.m.), "The Forbidden Planet" (Saturday, May 2, 10:30 a.m.), "Singin' in the Rain" (Saturday, 1:30 p.m.), "Picnic" and "The Lavender Hill Mob" (Sunday, May 3, 2 p.m.).

The series is funded by the Maryland Humanities Council, the Fulton School of the Liberal Arts, and the Salisbury State Cultural Events Committee.

GUEST CHOREOGRAPHER Mary Norton of the Salisbury Studio of Dance will be one of the featured guest choreographers in the Salisbury State Dance Company's upcoming concert "Reconnecting with the Natural World." The Dance Company performs Wednesday, April 22, at 7 p.m., Friday, April 24, at 8 p.m. and Saturday, April 25, at 2 p.m. All performances are in Holloway Hall Auditorium. Tickets are $3 for adults, $2 for students and senior citizens and free with ID to SSU students, faculty and staff. For more information contact the Guerrieri University Center at 548-4503, the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council at 543-ARTS or the Dance Company at 543-6353.

DiGiovanna Lectures To Del Tech Students

Dr. Augustine DiGiovanna, associate professor of biology, recently presented a lecture to occupational therapy assistant students at Delaware Technical and Community College.

DiGiovanna's lecture was titled "A New Perception of Human Aging and the Effects of Aging on the Skin." Topics included demographics of the elderly, overall effects of aging on the body, distinctions between aging and disease, and aging of the skin. Anne Lawton, program director, was especially pleased that DiGiovanna's presentation highlighted relationships between aging and the roles of occupational therapists.

DiGiovanna is currently teaching Biology of Human Aging at SSU. The course is part of SSU's minor in gerontology.

Film Book Includes Article by Welsh

Jim Welsh, an associate professor of English, is included in a book recently published by the University Press of Kentucky titled "Columbia Pictures: Portrait of a Studio," edited by Bernard F. Dick of Fairleigh Dickinson University.

Part I of the book offers "The History of Columbia, 1920-1991: From the Brothers Cohn to Sony Corp," a 70-page survey written by Dick. Part II, titled "The Art of Columbia," consists of essays and interviews covering directors (such as Frank Capra), screenwriters (such as Daniel Taradash), stars (such as Rita Hayworth) and important pictures produced by Columbia over the past 70 years, written by several scholars, including Jeanine Basinger, curator of the Wesleyan Cinema Archives, Joy Gould Boyum, who teaches at New York University and has reviewed for The Wall Street Journal and Newsday, and Charles Maland of the University of Tennessee, whose book "Chaplin and American Culture" won the 1990 Theatre Library Association Award.

Welsh's contribution, titled "A Paradigm for Justice," covers "A Soldier's Story," a Best Picture Oscar nominee for 1984, starring Howard E. Rollins, Jr., Denzel Washington, Adolph Caesar, Patti LaBelle and Robert Townsend. It was adapted by director Norman Jewison and playwright Charles Fuller from "A Soldier's Play," which won the Pulitzer Prize in 1981.

Welsh considers the film, which concerns the murder of a black soldier in Louisiana during World War II, a breakthrough picture for African Americans which prepared the way for such later features as "The Color Purple" (1985), "Glory" (1989), and films of Spike Lee and John Singleton, demonstrating that crossover audiences would patronize intelligent films treating ethnic subjects. "A Soldiers Story" was made on a budget of $5 million and generated over $30 million in box office revenues.

Welsh is one of the founding editors of Literature/Film Quarterly, an international journal published by Salisbury State that is now celebrating its 20th anniversary. He organized the "Humanities in Motion" lecture series, funded in part by a grant from the Maryland Humanities Council, that brought the Oscar-winning Columbia screenwriter Daniel Taradash to Salisbury State in April. He has served as a consulting editor for Metropolitan Magazine since 1991. He is listed in the forthcoming edition of "Who's Who in Entertainment," to be published by Marquis Who's Who in 1992.

Fleming Published In Catholic Periodical

Fleming Published In Catholic Periodical Dr. Jessie L. Fleming, professor of music/ music education, has written an article which has been published in the spring 1992 issue of The Living Light.

The article, "Will Catholics Sing?," was written at the request of the executive editor of the publication to respond to Thomas Day's book,"Why Catholics Can't Sing." Fleming offered several reasons for the low level of enthusiasm for liturgical music in the Catholic church, including the premise that the centrality of television and other media in our society has led to a decline in participatory activities in general. "This phenomenon can also be seen in the lack of class response by our students," said Fleming.

The Living Light is a periodical published by the U.S. Catholic Conference and is dedicated to promoting dialogue with educators among many religious traditions and with those in the secular world.

Feline Committee In Need of Help

The SSU feline committee, established to catch some of the wild cats around campus and find homes for them, has been hard at work, and thanks to the cooperation of faculty, staff and students, through donations of money, food and time, four female cats went off campus into new and loving homes.

With each female cat capable of producing five kittens in each litter, and three litters a year, at least 60 more kittens have been prevented from living at SSU. But there are still three or more producing female cats who need to be caught and one of them just had a litter of four female kittens.

Anyone who would like to give a good home to a three-week old kitten, who is now tame, loving and very energetic, please call Mia Vye in the President's Office at 543-6012. Or if interested in an older cat, the committee is still seeking homes for two female, sweet cats (white/gray, white/gray/black) who are about a year old. Thanks to all for making this project work.

Fulton Hall Dedication: 1st New Academic Building In More Than a Decade

Salisbury State dedicates its first new classroom building in more than a decade, the $16 million Fulton Hall, on Friday, May 1, at 10 a.m.

The name Fulton Hall was chosen to honor Charles and Martha Fulton of Snow Hill, who endowed the School of Liberal Arts in 1989 with a $2.5 million gift.

"The Fulton's endowment enabled us to begin fulfilling the enormous potential this school has to offer the region and the state," said Dr. Bellavance. "Now we have a new facility and community resource which reflects the caliber of programs offered at the Fulton School."

Gov. William Donald Schaefer said, "Charles and Martha Fulton's generous gift is an outstanding example of the private sector's cooperation with state government toward educating and training our future workforce.

"This wonderful new facility will provide a great atmosphere for young people to study music, theatre and art," said Gov. Schaefer.

Word is spreading fast about the impressive technology and array of equipment housed in the graceful structure.

According to Dr. Thomas G. Elliot, chair of the Music Department and conductor of the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra, "A number of musicians come here from Peabody and other schools to play in the orchestra. When we had our first rehearsal in Fulton Hall, they raved about the facilities."

This state-of-the-art complex includes a custom-designed black box theatre, an expanded University art gallery, a modern music library, an electronic music studio, a ceramics studio with outdoor courtyard for raku and other special firings, photographic darkrooms including color, and a full complement of rehearsal halls and studio spaces.

In addition, one wing, all newly equipped, is completely devoted to computer services for students.

This is the first new state-supported structure on campus since Maggs gymnasium, which opened in 1977. New construction since then, mostly dorms and the Guerrieri University Center, has been paid for with non-tax dollars.

The most expensive construction project in SSU history, Fulton Hall is an 85,000 square foot complex which covers approximately the same amount of land as Holloway Hall, the campus administration building, and provides some 12,000 square feet more space than the new Guerrieri University Center, which opened in 1988.

A sister structure to Holloway Hall, whose soaring classical columns and weathered copper cupola have become emblematic of the University, Fulton Hall also is Georgian in style with Flemish bond brickwork, a high peaked slate roof, a two-story columned entrance, and ornamental bricking. Roof dormers, curving pathways, small brick plazas and a gently arced one-story portico add to its friendliness.

Like Holloway, Fulton Hall is less a massive structure than a series of wings, each with its own personality and function. The new complex houses a variety of disciplines and brings together under one roof for the first time in the history of the

Personal Safety Tips

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you feel uncomfortable walking alone at night, call for an escort. Officers are available during the hours of darkness for escorts on campus and to nearby off-campus locations. Volunteer student escorts are available from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Call 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

Sea Gull Sports Roundup

by Paul Ohanian, Sports Information Director

It's billed as the "War on the Shore," but last Saturday's SSU-Washington lacrosse game could more accurately be called an ambush as the Gulls scored early and often on the way to a 22-8 victory. For third-ranked Salisbury State, now 11-1, the winning streak reached 10 games heading into this weekend's regular season finale at West Chester.

Jeff Chenowith (four goals, four assists) scored twice in the first seven minutes last week as the Gulls tallied the game's first seven goals and led 10-1 midway through the second period. Kevin Hohner finished with four goals and two assists and Art Morley continued his hot play of late with three goals and four assists. Pairings for the NCAA Division III Tournament will be announced this Sunday evening at 8 p.m., with first-round games beginning on Sunday, May 10.

The women's lacrosse team concluded its season last Saturday by winning the Maryland State Tournament in Essex. The Sea Gulls finished a perfect 6-0 in the one-day, round-robin event. Salisbury ended the season by winning four of its last five regular season games and finished with an 8-4 record on the year.

The men's tennis team captured its fourth straight Eastern States Athletic Conference championship last weekend by easily outdistancing the field. SSU won all six singles championships and two of three doubles titles to amass a tournament-record 52 points.

Allentown and Frostburg State tied for a distant second with 20.5 points each. Ken Soliday, Dave Hardesty, Brian Weist and Michael Daw won both singles and doubles crowns. Matt Salisbury and Jason Quigley won singles championships. SSU finished 8-4 on the season.

The women's softball team (14-11 overall, 8-0 in ESAC) wrapped up its second straight conference title with two doubleheader sweeps last weekend. The Gulls defeated Allentown twice on Friday and Marywood twice on Saturday to successfully defend their championship. Pitcher Sonja Akers picked up three wins to raise her record to 10-2 on the season. SSU finishes the year at home on May 5 with a twinbill against Kean.

The baseball team swept a doubleheader at home against Shenandoah last Saturday. The Gulls won game one 2-1 in 11 innings, then captured game two 7-3 as Doug Burig hurled a complete game for his second win of the year. SSU improved to 10-16 overall and 3-3 in ESAC games.

The men's and women's track teams both easily won their respective competitions in last weekend's track invitational. Kirsten Owings won four individual events and Erin Green won three to pace the women. Jeremy Rallo had three first place finishes and Pete Pietras and Tim Smith had two wins to lead the men. Both Sea Gull squads are in this week's Mason/Dixon Championship Meet at Frostburg.

Student Advocacy Group Interest Meeting May 6

Ramona Arthur, a hub campus director for the Campus Outreach Opportunity League (COOL), will be visiting SSU Wednesday, May 6, to meet with students to explore establishing a COOL affiliate on campus. Forty-five minute interest meetings will be held at 10 a.m., 11 a.m. and 2 p.m., all in room Nanticoke C of the Guerrieri University Center.

According to literature from the national organization, COOL's mission is to "strenghten, through service and in an environment of diversity, the capacity of students for sustained thoughtful action, and to foster a student voice in the community to address the challenges we face as a society."

SSU students interested in community service activities are invited to attend any of the interest meetings and to participate in the process of establishing a campus affiliate. For more information contact Barry King, Office of the Dean of Students, on the second floor of the Guerrieri University Center.

Community Performers Featured at Festival

Local performers have been a featured part of the Salisbury Festival since its inception. The performers on Saturday, May 2, will be no exception to past years' tradition of diversity and excellence.

The Fesitval has 30-minute performances on two stages, beginning at 10 a.m. and running consecutively until 5 p.m.

The natural stage created by the steps at the Government Building (N. Division and Rt. 50) will begin with Dixieland jazz and then feature dance throughout the day. The Dixie Kats Dixieland Band, who have been together for four years, were a big hit last year and their infectious beat will kick off the day. The Eastern Shore Majorettes, whose ages range from 5-15, will twirl from 11:30 a.m.-noon. Following the majoriettes will be the Third Time Around Dancers, an ensemble of senior citizens aged 55-84. The newly formed Eastern Shore Ballet Theatre and the Salisbury Studio of Dance will follow from 12:30-1:15 p.m.

At 1:15 p.m. the jazz dancers of Dance Unlimited will return for their sixth engagement at the Festival. Following them will be a completely different style of dance, the uniquely American square dance brought to the Festival by the Ocean Waves Square Dance Club. From Pocomoke, the Dance Loft will give a sampling of ballet, jazz and tap dance from 2:45 - 3:30 p.m. The D'Ann Danse Studio will round out the day's dance performances. But the day has one more, final act at the Government Plaza stage—the perennial rousing favorite of the Veney Gospel Singers. Jazz to gospel, it will be a toe-tapping day at the Government Plaza stage.

Over at the second community performance stage, located this year on the steps of the Post Office Building on Main St., diversity of performance styles with smaller ensembles is the hallmark of the day's music. The sounds of Scottish bagpipes, Worsom Pipers, lead off the day's entertainment at 10 a.m. The Parkside Players, a dramatic improvisation troupe of Parkside High School students, will take the stage at 10:45 a.m. followed by the Jazz stylings of the Mitchell-Williamson Duo. Jazz continues when the UMES Jazz Ensemble, led by John Lamkin, takes over at 12:15 p.m. Jazz then gives way to gospel at 1 p.m. with the Living Faith Gospel Trio. Instrumental music comes to the fore at 1:45 p.m. when the SSU Brass Quintet, nicknamed the Nomadic Brass Quintet, performs. Classic and acoustic rock, interpreted by the Joy Buzzers, a local acoustic duo, will range over the music map from Elvis Presley to the Beatles, Buddy Holly to The Ramones. Brass music comes back with the SSU Saxophone Quartet at 3:15 p.m. and the day concludes on a Celtic note similar to the one on which it bagan with the Irish folk music of the O'Loughlin-Cockey-Stegman Trio.

Colman McCarthy To Visit Campus

Colman McCarthy, distinguished columnist for The Washington Post and founder/director of the Center for Teaching Peace at Washington, D.C., will be here on Monday, May 4, to speak to classes and give a major address.

McCarthy's address is at 7 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center. The public is cordially invited to attend.

McCarthy provided the funds and leadership for establishing the associated Center for Teaching Peace here. Dr. Phillip Bosserman, professor of sociology, is director of the Center and Joan Maloof is associate director and runs the Center's programs. Its offices are located in Fulton Hall, room 205.

McCarthy will address students in two classes: 10 a.m., the Senior Seminar in Sociology, room 108, Caruthers Hall; and 1:15 p.m., Social Problems, room 120, Potomac Hall. Also, McCarthy will teach conflict resolution along with the Center for Teaching Peace staff at 3 p.m. in room 111 of Fulton Hall. Anyone is invited to attend the sessions.

'Love Song Waltzes' Mother's Day Concert

The University Concert Choir performs Johannes Brahms' "Liebeslieder Waltzer" and Randall Thompson's "Frostiana" on Sunday, May 10, at 2 p.m. and a second performance on Monday, May 11, at 8 p.m. Both performances are in Fulton Hall, room 112.

The "Love Song Waltzes" will be sung in German and the choral work consists of 18 waltzes for mixed voices and four-hand piano accompaniment. The "Frostiana" is a collection of seven choral works based on the poetry of Robert Frost.

Both performances are free and the public is invited.

Sophanes Presents 'An Evening of One Acts'

Sophanes, the student theatre organization, presents "An Evening of One Acts" on May 1-3 and 7-9. Each of the three presentations are directed and performed by SSU students.

The first presentation, "A Marriage Proposal," directed by Jen Clymer, (sophomore, communication arts major, from Phillipsburg, NJ) is a Russian-based comedy consisting of three characters. Clay Eichleberger plays a young man asking for his girlfriend's hand in marriage. He must ask his girlfriend's father, played by Don Atkinson, for his permission to marry his daughter, played by Pam Niebert. The play shows the difficulties the characters face to be together.

The second presentation, directed by Jim Waltz, (junior, psychology and communication arts major, from New Castle, DE) is taken from the play "Dolores," a drama concerned with two sisters who dislike one another. One sister, Dolores, played by Stacy Pushkar, performs a dramatic action which finds her going to her sister, Sondria, played by Kelle Hare, for help. "Dolores" has its funny moments as well.

The final presentation, directed by Craig Davenport, (junior communication arts major, Salisbury) is "A Long Christmas Dinner." Approximately Davenport's 40th involvement in a show, his play traces a family for 90 years in 30 minutes. The 12 characters do not have the benefit of makeup so they must rely totally on their acting abilities to convince the audience they have aged.

For a change of pace Heather Campbell will do three monologues between each "Act." Campbell is doing the monologues for her Senior Honor's project under the supervision of Paul Pfeiffer, director of theatre at SSU.

For more information on tickets call the theatre box office at 543-6228.

Oscar-Winning Writer Lectures Here April 30

With the Academy Awards recently in the news it is most appropriate that Oscar-winning screenwriter Daniel Taradash will be speaking here on Thursday, April 30, at 7 p.m. in Devilbiss Auditorium about his adaptation of "From Here to Eternity," which swept the Academy Awards in 1953.

Taradash later served as president of the Motion Picture Academy in 1973-74. The Taradash lecture at Salisbury State is part of the dedication week activities for the newly constructed Fulton Hall and is funded in part by a grant from the Maryland Humanities Council. The public is invited.

The following Saturday (May 2) at 8 p.m. Taradash will introduce his film adaptation of "Picnic," starring Kim Novak and William Holden, to be shown at the Island Roxy as part of the Chincoteague Island Big-Screen Movie Weekend. The Chincoteague Island Film Festival will showcase several films from the 1950s including the "African Queen" (Friday, May 1, 8 p.m.), "The Forbidden Planet" (Saturday, May 2, 10:30 a.m.), "Singin' in the Rain" (Saturday, 1:30 p.m.), "Picnic" and "The Lavender Hill Mob" (Sunday, May 3, 2 p.m.).

The series is funded by the Maryland Humanities Council, the Fulton School of the Liberal Arts, and the Salisbury State Cultural Events Committee.

It's An Irish Bach's Lunch

On Tuesday, May 5, "Bach's Lunch" will turn to folk music when the trio of Michael O'Loughlin, Robin Cockey and Charlie Stegman present a program of folk and bluegrass music with a strong Irish influence.

"American folk music is greatly influenced by the Irish and Scottish musical traditions from where it originated; jigs and reels have evolved into bluegrass and Texas swing; ballads of love lost have simply changed motif from leaving Ireland to leaving anywhere, USA," said Davina Grace Hill, executive director of the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council. "It is poignant music and it is also toe-tapping, whooping good-time music."

"Bach's Lunch" is a series of half-hour lunchtime concerts and is co-sponsored by the Music Department of St. Peter's Church and the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council, now in its sixth season of presenting 12 lunch-time concerts per year.

The "Bach's Lunch" concerts last a half-hour exactly, beginning at 12:15 p.m. and ending at 12:45 p.m. For more information call 543-ARTS.

20. Dress Code

This is a formal academic occasion and should be viewed as such in dress and demeanor.

The academic robe is black and the recommended dress, therefore, is:

A. Women

1. Black dress shoes (or some other dark color)—no white or other light color.
2. Dress hose, preferably not white or a light color.
3. A dress which does not have a high neckline or stand-up collar. It should not show above the V-neckline on the robe. Since the academic robe has a zipper front closing, the dress will show only near the lower hem and, therefore, preferably should be a dark color, rather than white or very light.
4. No visible jewelry. Fraternity or sorority pins/ribbons may be worn; these are academic emblems and are not considered jewelry as such.
5. No flowers on the academic robe and no flowers are to be carried to the stage.

B. Men

1. Black dress shoes (or some dark color) - no sneakers or light color sport shoes with thick rubber soles.
2. Dark color socks—no white athletic socks.
3. Dress slacks, preferably a dark or neutral color.
4. Dress shirt, preferably white or a light color.
5. Dress tie (four-in-hand tie with windsor knot). (Shirt collar and tie will show above the V-neckline of the academic robe.)
6. Suit coat or sport coat will not be seen under the robe and is, therefore, optional (the Civic Center is air conditioned).
7. No visible jewelry. Fraternity or sorority pins/ribbons may be worn; these are academic emblems and are not considered jewelry as such.

C. Both

1. The mortarboard (academic hat) is to be worn with the front point over the forehead below the front hairline so the flat board is parallel to the floor. (Not worn on the back of the head with the board pointing upward.) No decoration of any kind is to be placed on the mortarboard.
2. Candidates for the bachelor's degree should come into the auditorium with the tassel on the right, hanging near the right eye. After the degrees are conferred the tassel is shifted to the left side. The signal for shifting the tassel will be given by the president.
3. Candidates for the master's degree should place the tassel at the left front of the mortarboard prior to entering the auditorium and should not shift it.
4. Master's degree candidates will wear the robe, but will carry the hood over the left arm until they reach the stage, where it will be placed on the candidate. Faculty marshals will give you more specific information.
5. Graduates will receive graduation picture information from Market South, specialists in graduation and event photography. This information will arrive at your permanent address in the near future.

21. Graduation Decorum—Graduation ceremonies are by their very nature festive occasions. The festivity manifests itself in many ways including the dress of the students and faculty adorned in academic regalia and the warmth, joy and satisfaction of accomplishment. The ceremonies are also marked by seriousness where the actual conferring of degrees signifies long, hard work on the part of everyone involved: students, faculty, administrators, parents and spouses. As a consequence of the serious nature of the ceremony, students are expected to maintain a measure of decorum consonant with the occasion. Applause and other recognition of the conferring of degrees should be limited to a joint effort at the conclusion of each graduation group (e.g., B.S., B.A., etc.).

RADIOS WANTED - Van Williamson of WSCL-FM radio in Salisbury and producer of "Radio Free Delmarva," and Carol Bloodsworth, Salisbury State University Publications Director, look over some of the old-time radios that will be on display during "Radio Reception: A Night of the Town with Radio" at SSU Saturday, May 16. More radios are needed for an exhibit.

Calling All Radios for 'Radio Reception'

Van Williamson, news director of WSCL—FM, likes plastic deco styles. John Bozman, Salisbury Daily Times columnist, is partial to wood. For Carol Bloodsworth, director of publications at Salisbury State, her favorite is an RCA Victor "Nipper" that belonged to her mother, who worked for RCA during World War II.

What they are all fans of is old time radios, whose designs are as varied as the materials from which they're made. The dominant mass medium for the first half of the century, radio was housed in both wood and wonderfully hued plastics. Their creators took inspiration from everything, including gothic cathedrals, railroad engines and Walt Disney cartoons.

On Saturday, May 16, the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council (SWAC) is sponsoring a tribute to radio past and present titled, "Radio Reception: A Night on the Town with Radio," at SSU. As part of the festivities, the Arts Council is asking people to lend their old radios for exhibition at the reception.

"We would like to borrow the radios for the evening, not to play but display," said Davina Grace Hill, executive director of SWAC. "The cabinets are both nostalgic and fun, and they often have remarkable designs."

The radio exhibit is part of an evening which starts at 6 p.m. in the Guerrieri University Center. While music and selections from old radio programs play, guests will enjoy a gourmet dessert reception. Darryl Nixon, owner of OC 104, will present a reminiscence on "Vintage Radio" programs. And at 7:30 p.m. patrons move to Holloway Hall Auditorium where they become members of a live radio audience for "Radio Free Delmarva," the nationally recognized, award-winning variety program on WSCL. Afterward is a half-price drink at Parrot's Celebrated Foods.

"Radio Reception" is co-sponsored by WSCL and the Radio Association of Delmarva. The ticket which includes the reception, admittance to "RFD" and half-price drink at Parrot's is $10.

The reservation deadline is Wednesday, May 6. Please call SWAC at 543-ARTS if you would like to attend or lend a radio for display at the reception.

Composting Components Topic of CEO Meeting

The Community Environmental Organization (CEO) will hold its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday, May 6, at 7 p.m. in Caruthers Hall, room 102.

Dr. Lew Carr, extension agricultural engineer with the University of Maryland College Park, will discuss key components of composting.

CEO, a volunteer organization dedicated to promoting recycling in Wicomico County, is composed of private citizens as well as members of the business and education communities. The monthly meetings are open to anyone interested in recycling.

"CEO was formed to create a public awareness of the need to recycle in Wicomico County," said Fred McLane, president. Several projects the organization is involved in include: distribution of recycling literature at local festivals and civic events, conducting a recycling poster contest in area schools, establishing a speakers' bureau and surveying local businesses to determine the composition of their waste streams.

"Education is the key to a successful recycling program for our country," said McLane.

For more information about CEO, write to: Community Environmental Organization, P.O. Box 2402, Salisbury, MD 21802.

Riley Keynote Speaker For Pocomoke Fair

The master of ceremonies is William Polk Miles, grandson of former Maryland Del. Myrtle A. Polk who provided the inspiration to revive the fair after more than 40 years absence from the Pocomoke scene.

Ninety-year-old Frank Bailey, whose grandfather was born into slavery and who has become quite an authority on local folklore, will also be on hand to share some of his memories from the early years of the fair.

The buffet-style dinner featuring roast turkey and top sirloin is on Friday, May 15, at 6:30 p.m. at the Days Inn, south of Pocomoke on Rt. 13. B.F.A. Students Display Their Work

Bachelor of Fine Art students will be exhibiting their work at the Downtown Plaza in Salisbury at the previous Lad 'n Lassie shop window.

Five out of the six students will be featuring sculpture, photography, fiber crafts, painting, drawing and silk screen works, some available for purchase. The art show is by Melissa Cullen, Ruth O'Mara, Linda Ship, Laura Twiford and Nikki Rich. The exhibit runs April 27 through May 9.

Salisbury Festival: Arts and Crafts Tradition

The photo caption from a May 17, 1981 news story on the second Arts on the Plaza, the precursor of the Salisbury Festival, reads "Pottery for all Ages. Young children and adults alike were entranced with the wheel work of Eric Hertz during the arts festival on the Downtown Plaza. From a blob of clay he made pots and bowls before audiences all day at the festival which drew large crowds of people."

It is 11 years since that photo was taken. The Arts on the Plaza festivities have grown expansively and for 10 years now the event has been known as the Salisbury Festival. And Hertz and the Arts Council's arts and crafts booths continue to be at the center of all the action.

No longer sporting a beard and a pony tail, Hertz has been one of the many artists and craftmakers who return year after year to participate in the Festival. He no longer works at the pottery wheel during the Festival but the work he has produced at home, delicate bowls and plates, wind chimes and oil and potpourri containers continue to attract sizeable crowds throughout the day.

For the 1992 Salisbury Festival there will be more for everyone to enjoy and see. Fine watercolors will be in abundance with the work of perennial Festival favorites Grover Cantwell, Keith Whitelock and Myrna McGrath. Newcomers to the watercolor entries of the Festival are Ed Schramm of Easton, the Worcester Watercolor Society and Julie Molyneux Hoenen. Hand-crafted jewelry will be featured by Karen Sweet of Silver Spring, Patricia Robertson of Kensington, and Mary Ann Kinsella-Meier and Florence Vold who make jewelry out of postage stamps. Exquisite folk art carvings will be represented by Jack O'Brien of Centreville and Susan Hutchins of Crisfield. Photography by Salisburians David Sisk and Dick Adkins, and by Doug McConnell of Cambridge will also be available.

Furniture crafts by Sandra Williams and country crafts by Dorothy Mumford, both of Salisbury, will be joined by other country crafts by Judy Bozman of Westover and James Jarrett of East New Market.

The arts and craft booths will encircle the lawn at the Old Courthouse, run on both sides of North Division St. above Main St., and will run east on Main St. along the side of the Old Courthouse. At either end of the arts and craft booths will be the Arts Council's two performance stages, on the steps of the Government Plaza and on the steps of the Downtown Post Office.

Recycling Conference To Be Held in Cambridge

Horn Point Environmental Laboratories, located in Cambridge, will serve as host for the Eastern Shore Recycling Conference on Thursday, May 21. Scheduled from 7:30 a.m.-4 p.m., the conference will examine various recycling problems and potentials found on the Eastern Shore.

Several organizations are co-sponsoring the one-day event: CEES; Horn Point Environmental Labs; Earth Day Committee; Delmarva Advisory Council; and the Community Environmental Organization (CEO).

Lori Scozzafava, solid waste minimization and recycling chief from the Maryland Department of the Environment, will be the keynote speaker. Experts from the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service, Chesapeake Mills, Westreet Industries and the Atlantic Recycling Paper Companies, as well as the recycling coordinators from Kent County and Ocean City will also be speaking.

Workshops are planned for both morning and afternoon sessions about composting, paper and cardboard, community recycling, and regionalization and market co-oping. The steel, plastics, paper and cardboard industries will have displays and information available to attendees as well.

According to Fred McLane, president of CEO, "The conference will provide a unique opportunity to meet and discuss recycling needs with people who have developed solutions within their recycling programs." Representatives from all counties on the Delmarva Peninsula have been invited to attend, along with numerous processing businesses.

"Attendees will be provided with information on current and future recycling trends," said McLane.

Registrations will be accepted on a first come, first served basis as space is limited. To register, send your name, mailing address and telephone number with a check for $15 made payable to Reach, Inc., P.O. Box 1108, Cambridge, MD 21613. Deadline for registration is Thursday, May 7.

Pajama Party Benefits AIDS Research

The Residence Life Office is planning a major charity event to benefit AIDS research (pending all final confirmations) on Friday, May 1, in the Wicomico Room in the Guerrieri University Center.

The residence life staff is dedicated to the social and academic development of students and has recently begun to discover ways to serve the community as well. Most recently, residence life sponsored a Halloween costume ball in October and raised close to $500 for the Joseph House.

Once again residence life is becoming actively involved in community service and exploring ways of hosting events which will serve a dual purpose—the SSU Pajama Party will do just that. The pajama party is intended to offer students a social outlet and an environment free of the presence of alcohol yet loaded with fun. In addition, the event will simultaneously raise money for a worthy cause.

Admission to the event is $1 with pajamas and $2 without pajamas and will include free refreshments. All students are invited.

Gilchrest, McMillen Discuss Environment

Members of environmental groups, students, faculty and members of the community are invited to attend and question the incumbent and his challenger for the 1st District seat in Congress.

of the University, performing and fine arts programs in the Fulton School of Liberal Arts.

Dr. Sharon Rubin, dean of the Fulton School, anticipates a "synergy" taking place between the different arts, now in the same building. "I anticipate exciting things happening we can't even guess about yet," she said. "By having all of our fine arts together we can encourage the kind of cutting edge collaboration and exploration which is so exciting in a university setting," said Rubin.

Fulton Hall was designed by Gzesh and Associates in joint venture with Bohlin, Powell, Larkin and Cywinski of Pittsburgh and Baltimore. The contractor was J. Roland Dashiell and Sons of Salisbury.

on the influences on the development of each artist's particular specialization. For instance, Jose Dovis hand throws plates, mugs, bowls and pitchers and has said, "My work in clay really represents a link between my artistic interests and background and the country lifestyle. The ideas come from living in the country and looking at the animals and from my European heritage. Also, the early American pottery had a great influence on my work."

Later in the day, Cavallaro has planned a kind of "pot-luck" dinner to dedicate the new facility, welcome the artists and thank Charles R. and Martha N. Fulton for their generosity to the University. The Art Department clay classes, the featured artists and local potters will bring food to the dinner in specially created pieces of functional clay art work. Each serving dish will reflect the actual food served. Dishes include turkey, cabbage and after-dinner candy. The dinner will celebrate the way in which ceramic art contributes to and enhances everyday life. The dinner is closed to the public, but the pieces will be on display following the dinner.

The ceramics will be on display in the art showcases at Fulton Hall through May 15. For more information call 543-6273.

Perdue Student Going To Summer Institute

University student Grovena M. Young was one of 36 students selected nationwide to participate in the Graduate Management Admission Council's third annual Minority Summer Institute (MSI) at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

A senior majoring in accounting in the Perdue School of Business, Young will be spending six weeks this summer along with other talented minority men and women taking part in a series of activities designed to help them investigate careers as business faculty members.

"This is a relatively new program and I am extremely proud, as are all the Perdue School faculty, that one of our students is getting deserved recognition," said Dr. Richard F. Bebee, dean of the Perdue School. "I also think that this attests to the quality of our business program."

Young was one of 350 students from over 400 schools throughout the country, including such prestigious institutions as Harvard, Princeton and Yale, competing for this award. When asked how she felt about having such strong competition, Young replied, "While that is impressive to me, I don't think that the name of the school necessarily determines one's success.

"Just because a school has a name, that

Whack & Hack Open Moves to Nutters, Protesters Mobilize

According to the University watchdog organization, Spoof Out, representatives of the People for the Ethical Treatment of Golf and Tennis Balls (PETGTB), protesting so-called "Acts of Intolerence" by faculty and staff at SSU, will be picketing this year's Whack & Hack Open.

The annual event, popular among the more intellectual and erudite in the campus community, will be held this year at Nutters Crossing Golf Course in Salisbury for hackers and at the SSU tennis courts for whackers on Monday June 1. This marks the first time the eight-year-old event has been held at Nutters.

"After seven years at Nassawango Country Club," said Whack & Hack chair Harry Womack, "there were few branches left for us to aim at. Nutters, with its $300,000 homes and inviting windows, offers the golfers at SSU the opportunity to revitalize their games."

When apprised of the pending picket by PETGTBers, Womack disdainfully replied, "Ah, let them eat pie! Listen, we go out there one

Undergraduate Symposium Gives Students The Chance To Reap Rewards of Research

Concerned about the shortage of scientists in higher education and research, Dr. Phillip Creighton, dean of the Henson School of Science and Technology, has investigated methods of recruiting undergraduates to the sciences.

Believing that "people get turned off when they feel separate from science," Creighton sought to draw students into a greater appreciation of their discipline. He focused on finding a reliable method of involving students in research and settled on the Undergraduate Research Symposium where student-faculty research would be presented, utilizing the format of a professional meeting.

"One goal is to have the students become familar with the opportunities of research," said Creighton. But on a more profound level, Creighton wanted to tempt students into the professional world where they could experience the rewards of doing science on a personal level. By working closely with faculty, the students would gain a first-hand appreciation of their discipline.

When Creighton assumed his position with SSU in the summer of 1990, he asked department chairs to make undergraduate research a requirement of each department. He also requested that research courses in the School of Science carry an obligation to present student findings. The symposium provided a vehicle for students to present their work and symposium announcements went out that fall.

The first symposium was held in May 1991. Students from the departments of math, physics, chemistry, geography and biology presented results of independent or faculty-directed research. "The students," Creighton said, "went into it with a great deal of apprehension but at the end felt exhilaration at having been accepted as colleagues; it's a great boost. Many students said they would do it again, and others said they would recommend it to their friends.

"I was so impressed with the sophistication of our students," said Creighton. The first time I got up before a professional association, my knees were knocking and I thought I was going to die a slow death. But I was so proud of our students. They were composed and well prepared. It was a gratifying experience."

Mary Antlfinger Norton, who was a senior in chemistry when she participated in a poster display segment of the symposium, admitted she wasn't thrilled initially, because of the extra work demanded. "But I enjoyed the symposium. It increased my knowledge beyond the textbooks. You learned by doing.

"It was nice to see what the collective group was doing," said Norton. "So much of research is individual, you spend 200 hours working on your own, so it was nice to see what others were doing." Norton, who is now a chemistry lab instructor at SSU, has found that she is better prepared to face her students. "Conducting your own research makes you more independent in your lab work. You are better able to anticipate what you need, and what the students will ask."

This year faculty are even more interested now that they have seen it work. SSU's vice president of academic affairs, Dr. K. Nelson

Personal Safety Tips Offered

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Office of Public Safety, 543-6222.

SATURN V Laser Light Rock Concert Is May 8

The SATURN V Laser Light rock concert is on Friday, May 8. Coordinated by Variety Showcase chairperson, Mary Mattax, the event features two, high-power laser systems and a whole bank of computers and laser projectors.

The Laser tour began in 1991 by the Brain Winthrop International, Lts. SATURN V tours with a Panasonic/Ramsa 10,000 watt "Dolby" concert system featuring 30 speaker cabinets and the so-called "wall of bass."

A vivid scene is created by as light lasers project full-color images on a gigantic 500 square foot screen. The other laser (argon) shoots beams out over the audience. The beams hit crystal mirrors throughout the room to form a virtual 3-D spider web of lasers. This is also known as the "Star Wars Effect." Fog jets, mirror balls, mirror cans and custom computer graphics complete the spectacular package.

The sounds of U2, Pink Floyd, Guns and Roses, The Cure, INXS and the Grateful Dead are featured. Many of the songs are pre-programmed to offer beautifully choreographed effects.

"It's the first time ever that a touring laser concert has offered an electric screen. This means that during the show, we can raise up the screen and shoot full color beams and tunnels out over the audience. The possibilities are limitless," said Winthrop.

The SATURN V concert has been contracted for two shows, at 8 p.m. and 10 p.m., in Holloway Hall Auditorium, free to the campus community. For further information please contact the SSPB at 543-6197.

2. The commencement speaker will be Dr. Judith A. Sturnick, president, Keene State College, Keene, NH.

3. Physically Disabled Guests - Accessible seating is provided on the main floor of the arena. Ask an usher for the location as you enter the Civic Center.

4. Hearing Impaired - Signers are present for the entire graduation ceremony. Seating for an optimum view of the individual(s) signing is in the first level of the grandstands close to and on either side of the stage. Seating is not reserved, therefore, early arrival is suggested. Ask an usher for the location as you enter the Civic Center.

5. Caps, gowns and master's hoods and announcements (quantities are limited) will be distributed through The Book Rack beginning April 20. These may be retained by the graduates and need not be returned following the ceremony. Problems with caps and gowns will be corrected prior to the ceremony by the bookstore employees at the Civic Center, in Flanders Room No. 1 near the snack bar to the left of the arena entrances. Bookstore hours, Monday-Thursday, are 8:30 a.m.-6 p.m. Bookstore hours on Friday are 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m. The bookstore will be open on Friday, May 22, from 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m. Graduates must pick up the necessary items on or before 3 p.m. on May 22.

7. The faculty marshals will give each graduate a 3x5 card containing his/her name and the school (e.g. Perdue School of Business). The card is then given to Dr. Nelson Butler when the graduate reaches the stage and, at the same time, the graduate is to announce his/her name. Dr. Butler will then know who the person is and how to pronounce the name correctly. The name on the card must not be changed for any reason.

20. Dress Code

This is a formal academic occasion and should be viewed as such in dress and demeanor.

The academic robe is black and the recommended dress, therefore, is:

A. Women

1. Black dress shoes (or some other dark color)—no white or other light color.
2. Dress hose, preferably not white or a light color.
3. A dress which does not have a high neckline or stand-up collar. It should not show above the V-neckline on the robe. Since the academic robe has a zipper front closing, the dress will show only near the lower hem and, therefore, preferably should be a dark color, rather than white or very light.
4. No visible jewelry. Fraternity or sorority pins/ribbons may be worn; these are academic emblems and are not considered jewelry as such.
5. No flowers on the academic robe and no flowers are to be carried to the stage.

B. Men

1. Black dress shoes (or some dark color) - no sneakers or light color sport shoes with thick rubber soles.
2. Dark color socks—no white athletic socks.
3. Dress slacks, preferably a dark or neutral color.
4. Dress shirt, preferably white or a light color.
5. Dress tie (four-in-hand tie with windsor knot). (Shirt collar and tie will show above the V-neckline of the academic robe.)
6. Suit coat or sport coat will not be seen under the robe and is, therefore, optional (the Civic Center is air conditioned).
7. No visible jewelry. Fraternity or sorority pins/ribbons may be worn; these are academic emblems and are not considered jewelry as such.

C. Both

1. The mortarboard (academic hat) is to be worn with the front point over the forehead below the front hairline so the flat board is parallel to the floor. (Not worn on the back of the head with the board pointing upward.) No decoration of any kind is to be placed on the mortarboard.
2. Candidates for the bachelor's degree should come into the auditorium with the tassel on the right, hanging near the right eye. After the degrees are conferred the tassel is shifted to the left side. The signal for shifting the tassel will be given by the president.
3. Candidates for the master's degree should place the tassel at the left front of the mortarboard prior to entering the auditorium and should not shift it.
4. Master's degree candidates will wear the robe, but will carry the hood over the left arm until they reach the stage, where it will be placed on the candidate. Faculty marshals will give you more specific information.
5. Graduates will receive graduation picture information from Market South, specialists in graduation and event photography. This information will arrive at your permanent address in the near future.

21. Graduation Decorum—Graduation ceremonies are by their very nature festive occasions. The festivity manifests itself in many ways including the dress of the students and faculty adorned in academic regalia and the warmth, joy and satisfaction of accomplishment. The ceremonies are also marked by seriousness where the actual conferring of degrees signifies long, hard work on the part of everyone involved: students, faculty, administrators, parents and spouses. As a consequence of the serious nature of the ceremony, students are expected to maintain a measure of decorum consonant with the occasion. Applause and other recognition of the conferring of degrees should be limited to a joint effort at the conclusion of each graduation group (e.g., B.S., B.A., etc.).

Wind Sinfonia Performance Is May 12

The Fulton School of Liberal Arts and the Department of Music present the University Wind Sinfonia in concert on Tuesday, May 12, in Holloway Hall Auditorium. The performance begins at 8 p.m. and is free and open to the public.

Selections to be performed include "Canzon Vigesimatsettima No. 27" for brass choir by Giovanni Gabrieli, "Canzona" by Peter Mennin, "Lincolnshire Posy" by Percy Aldridge Grainger, "Suite in E-Flat For Military Band, OP 28A" by Gustz Holst based upon the score written for 28 players, "Concertino for Wind and Brass Quintets" by Robert Washburn and "Sur Le Bords Du Nil" by Camille Saint Saens.

The Wind Sinfonia was invited to appear at the Maryland Music Educators Association State In-service Conference at Ocean City last March. The ensemble participated as one of two ensembles in a conducting clinic titled "Developing Effective Instrutment Rehearsal and Conducting Techniques."

Dr. Richard L. Johnson, assistant professor of music and conductor of the Wind Sinfonia, served as conducting clinician.

The ensemble continues to be in demand for performances outside of the academic setting. Various chamber ensembles comprised of members from the Wind Sinfonia have appeared at the Maryland Educators Association State Conference, Savor the Symphony, St. Peter's Episcopal Church's Bach's Lunch, St. Francis De Sales' Chrism Mass and Asbury United Methodist Church's 213th Anniversary Sunday. Also, the Wind Sinfonia recital was part of the week celebration of the opening of the new Fulton School of Liberal Arts building.

For information regarding future performances by the Wind Sinfonia or chamber ensembles and other Department of Music activities, call 543-6385.

Nursing Department Celebrates Nurses Week

For years, America's registered nurses have served on the front lines of the health care delivery system: the medical units, surgical suites, recovery units, nursing homes, community health clinics, hospices and offices throughout the country. Now nurses are also taking on the challenges of serving on the leading edge of health care planning and policy making. As a result, nurses have become an invaluable force in both the present and the future of health care.

This year, America's two million registered nurses will celebrate their contributions to and leadership in America's health care system during National Nurses Week May 4-10. At Salisbury State, the Nursing Department will celebrate this year's theme, "Nursing: Shaping the Future of Health Care," at a pot-luck luncheon on Wednesday, May 13, from noon-2 p.m. at the Power Professional Building. All nursing and pre-nursing majors are invited.

SSU AMA Chapter Wins National Recognition

In only 18 months of existence the student American Marketing chapter at the Perdue School of Business has reached an admirable level of national recognition. In addition to winning a national excellence award in member services at the national conference in New Orleans, a few weeks ago, the students also won the Outstanding Chapter–Eastern Region award.

The annual awards competition points earned by the SSU chapter placed it tied in fifth position nationally among 400 plus university and college chapters. In addition, the advisor, Dr. Memo Diriker, was selected as the 1991-92 recipient of the Hugh G. Wales AMA Top Faculty Advisor of the Year award. Diriker, an assistant professor of marketing in the Perdue School, was selected from among 450 advisors and 23 finialists. He is only the 10th recipient nationwide of this prestigious award named for Hugh Wales, an educator who was instrumental in collegiate chapters of the American Marketing Association.

The AMA is an international organization that serves both marketing professionals and students. Collegiate chapters give students the opportunity to develop and use marketing skills as well as build a network of business contacts to enhance their professional development.

Perdue School students initiated an AMA chapter in 1990 with general meetings held the second Tuesday in each month. Membership is open to any full-time student.

U.S.A.'s BEST SAYS L.A.W. - Last fall's Sea Gull Century, a pair of bicycle rides, one 100 miles and the other 100 kilometers (62 miles), coordinated by the SSU Cycling Club, received the 1991 Challenge Award from the League of American Wheelman (L.A.W.), the nation's largest cycling organization. The Century, which attracted over 1,100 riders, was judged to have the most combined miles ridden by cyclists in any single ride in the country last year. The SSU Cycling Club received a certificate from L.A.W. acknowledging the award plus a Blackburn Repair Stand for use by club members and recognition in Bicycle USA magazine. Pictured are Century committee members: (left to right) Richard Yobst, Imogene Ragone, Dean Burroughs, James Phillips, Joseph Gilbert (Century director), Michael Boolukos and Stanley Shedaker. Five Math Students In Putnam Competition

Five mathematics majors—Robert A. Henkel of Lower Burrell, PA, Karen W. Patterson of Finksburg, Kellylyn Petrella of Harwood, Tom Flanigan of Marriottsville and Surai Thaneemit of Frederick—participated in the 52nd annual William Lowell Putnam Mathematical Competition. Henkel, a junior with a second major in physics, placed in the top 30 percent of the 2,325 students from 583 institutions who took the test.

According to Dr. Robert M. Tardiff, chair of the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science, "This examination, which is extremely challenging, is designed to identify mathematical talent and creativity. The top students are virtually guaranteed acceptance to first-rate graduate schools."

Gulls Host Ithaca In NCAA Tourney

by Paul Ohanian

Salisbury State opens play in the first round of the 1992 NCAA Division III Men's Lacrosse Championship Tournament at home Sunday, hosting Ithaca at 1 p.m. The game is a rematch of last year's first round contest, won by the Sea Gulls, 16-10. SSU, 12-1, finished the regular season with a 33-3 pounding of West Chester last Saturday, setting a school-record for goals in a game. The Gulls are ranked third in the final USILA poll, while Ithaca, 11-1, is ranked fifth.

Tickets for the game are $3 with presale available through Saturday at noon at the information desk in the Guerrieri University Center. The stadium ticket window will open at 11:30 a.m. on game day.

The Sea Gulls and Bombers have met six times previously, with SSU winning four times. They are 1-1 in postseason games, with Ithaca's 1978 tournament win balancing SSU's 1991 victory.

Salisbury and Ithaca have played three common opponents this season, with victories in all six contests. The three teams were Ohio Wesleyan, Alfred and St. Lawrence. SSU's lone defeat was to Roanoke in the second game of the year, while Ithaca fell at Hartwick three weeks ago.

Should the Gulls defeat Ithaca, they would face the winner of the Roanoke-Gettysburg game on May 17 in the national semifinal round. The national championship is on Sunday, May 24, at Franklin Field in Philadelphia.

In other sports news, the men's and women's track teams closed out their seasons at the Mason/Dixon Conference Championships last Saturday. The men placed fourth of eight teams, while the women finished fifth of six teams.

Jeremy Rallo led the men with a first-place finish in the shot put, third place in the discus and fourth in the hammer. Tim Smith was second in the 10,000 meter run and fourth in the 5,000. Dan Quinn added a second place finish in the hammer.

Erin Green was the women's top performer, winning first place in both the 1,500 meter run and the 3,000. Liz Leo finished third in the javelin while Mary Puderbaugh placed fourth in the 10,000 run and sixth in the 5,000.

The softball team split a doubleheader with visiting Kean on Sunday, winning game one 6-3 but losing the nightcap 4-3. The Gulls finished the season at 17-12. Sonja Akers pitched both ends of the twinbill, finishing the year with a 13-3 record and 0.87 ERA. Akers also added two hits and three RBIs to help her own cause in game one. Sharrey Hammond and Diane Racine collected two hits each in the second game, although the Gulls could not rally all the way back from a 4-0 deficit.

The baseball squad, 11-17, puts a wrap on its season Saturday as the Gulls host York in a doubleheader. The first game begins at 1 p.m.

Nursing, Health Sciences Faculty Present Seminars to High School Students

As part of a statewide program sponsored by the Maryland Science Center in Baltimore, three faculty members from the SSU School of Nursing and Health Sciences conducted in February and March a series of Saturday morning seminars for high school juniors and seniors.

Sidney Schneider, assistant professor of respiratory therapy, Cindy Cowall, assistant professor of medical technology, and Diane Hayes, instructor of medical technology, presented an in-depth study of respiratory care and laboratory medicine, both integral parts of the overall patient-care setting.

The students came from seven area high schools, including Wicomico, Cambridge-South Dorchester, Pocomoke, Stephen Decatur, Washington, Crisfield and Worcester Country. Students are selected by their guidance counselors based on strong interest and ability in science. Many of the students indicated in a post-course survey that they especially appreciated the extensive hands-on experience. This was in relation to the many laboratory analyses they were able to perform on their own specimens and to their operation of respiratory diagnostic instruments.

One of the actual tests performed by the students in the laboratory science portion was making and staining a microscope slide of their own blood, which they then examined under the microscope to decide the distribution of each of the different types of white blood cells. During another session they cultured their lab partners' throats to look for streptococcus bacteria which are better known as the causative agents of "Strep Throat." Also during the laboratory science component the students performed chemical and microscopic urine analyses, typed their own blood, measured their own cholesterol and toured the clinical laboratory at Peninsula Regional Medical Center. During the last session, the students viewed a video of an actual autopsy procedure.

During the respiratory care sessions, the emphasis was placed on both pediatric and adult care. The students saw a film on childbirth and discussed risk factors relative to newborn respiratory problems.

They were also able to discuss trauma situations with the appropriate respiratory care for an adult victim and to observe the operation of mechanical ventilators. Diagnostic experiences included "hands-on" pulmonary function testing, pulse oximetry, and ECG (electrocardiogram) and radiographic (X-ray) interpretation.

Both students and faculty alike found the sessions enjoyable and informative, especially the interaction in the laboratories as the students performed the testing themselves. "The students were alert, well-informed, polite and inquisitive," said Cowall, "a combination for which any teacher is thankful."

The faculty plan to continue the seminars next spring, again in cooperation with the Maryland Science Center. Students interested in the sessions should consult their high school guidance counselor or the Medical Technology Department of SSU at (410) 543-6331.

Butler, termed it "one of the most meaningful educational experiences in 20 years of higher education." He then allocated $5,000 in additional funds to support undergraduate research.

An additional 14 students are participating this year, bringing the number up to 50. This year selected students will also chair their sections. With several papers from last year submitted for publication, and students going on to graduate programs, Creighton is enthusiastic about the future. "Undergraduate research is one of the most beneficial experiences a student can engage in. I'm gratified to see other schools in the University beginning their own symposia this year. It's an exercise where everyone wins."

Pictured above is senior Grovena M. Young (middle), one of 36 students selected nationwide to participate in the Graduate Management Admission Council's third annual Minority Summer Institute, with Dr. Richard F. doesn't mean that you will know everything if you go there. SSU is a small school but I'm receiving a quality education. Perhaps because it is a smaller school, I've gotten more individual attention. My professors are always willing to help and they understand the pressure you're under as a student."

Young is grateful to Dr. Doran Tirtiroglu, an assistant professor in the Perdue School and mentor, for his support and encouragement. "Without his help I never would have been able to attend the institute this summer," said Young.

"This is one of the happiest moments of my career," said Tirtiroglu. "I am extremely happy that Grovena is being given this award and am totally confident that she will be successful. I also hope this starts a pipeline for future students."

MSI is structured to provide participants with a substantive and well-rounded look at the demands, responsibilities and rewards of an academic business career. It is funded by a $1.2 million grant from the Graduate Management Admissions Council.

A five-member selection committee of deans, doctoral program directors and faculty members was extremely impressed with Young's credentials and her acceptance was the result of a unanimous decision.

During the six-week Institute, Young will participate in a wide range of activities from formal coursework and doctoral research labs to informal sessions and discussions with current minority Ph.D. students and faculty.

All travel and living expenses are paid, as well as tuition, books and supplies. Each student receives a $2,500 stipend to make up for lost summer earnings. Upon successful completion of the coursework, Michigan awards six hours of college credit.

Young is vice president and co-founder of Progressive Black Women, an organization in Prince George's County dedicated to helping others such as the homeless and single mothers. Former vice president of the SSU chapter of the National Association of Accountants and a member of Omicron Delta Kappa, a national leadership honor society, she is the recipient of a $2,000 four-year renewable Other Race Grant based on her academic excellence.

"I think this is a very good opportunity, especially for a minority student like myself," said Young. "I hope that one day I can contribute and give back some of the opportunities I've been given to help somebody else."

Gilchrest, McMillen Discuss Environment

Congressmen Wayne Gilchrest and Tom McMillen will be on campus to discuss environmental issues and concerns on Thursday, May 7, at 8 p.m. in the Nanticoke Room of the Guerrieri University Center. The meeting is co-sponsored by the Friends of the Nanticoke River and Department of Political Science.

Members of environmental groups, students, faculty and members of the community are invited to attend and question the incumbent and his challenger for the 1st District seat in Congress.

Methods Students Attend Presentation

Dr. Amy Meekins and Dr. John Wolinski's elementary education reading methods classes attended a presentation on using "portfolios" in the elementary classroom recently.

The presentation, by Susie Price, an elementary classroom teacher from Maple Elementary School in Dorchester County, was part of an independent study project supervised by Meekins. During the presentation, Price discussed the use of portfolios as an alternative or supplement to traditional assessment procedures and typical standardized tests. Actual portfolios, which were developed as part of her project, were shared.

Price also discussed her positive experiences with "whole language" and answered students' questions. The presentation helped the students bridge the "theory to practice" gap concerning a new and increasingly popular classroom strategy.

Classical Guitar Next 'Bach's Lunch'

On Tuesday, May 19, Bach's Lunch will feature the classical guitar stylings of Linda Winchurch.

Bach's Lunch is a series of half-hour lunch-time concerts and is sponsored by the Music Department of St. Peter's Church and the Salisbury Wicomico Arts Council.

Winchurch lives in the Berlin area and performs throughout the region. She is a frequent performer at the Garden By the Sea restaurant in Virginia and most recently performed at the Salisbury Festival.

"Classical guitar sounds so very beautiful in St. Peter's Church. When Winchurch plays a selection from Bach, it feels like you stepped back in time, far away from the bustle of daily worklife," said Davina Grace Hill, executive director of the Arts Council.

The Bach's Lunch concerts begin at 12:15 p.m. and end at 12:45 p.m.

afternoon a year, about 60 to 80 of us, and we hack that little white rock around and have a really good time. Frankly, we put the hurtin' on those little buggers.

"Maybe some of the folks do deface their balls with the names of students or administrators," admitted Womack, "but, hey, it's done in a good-natured sort of way. Also, the telephone company evidently donates lots of balls cause I find several with Bell scrawled on them. Basically, we go out and have fun."

Cost for the golf package, which includes green fees, cart, dinner, beverages and hat, is $30 for SSU staff and faculty and $40 for non-SSU employees. Golfers can register as a foursome or individually. Foursomes will be put together randomly among the individual entrants.

A PUBLICATION FOR UNIVERSITY FACULTY, FRIENDS, STAFF AND STUDENTS

MAY 14, 1992 VOL. XIII NO. 29

Dr. Judith Sturnick, President of Keene State College, To Discuss Building Community at Commencement Ceremonies

Dr. Judith A. Sturnick, president of Keene State College in New Hampshire and editor of "Women at the Helm: Pathfinding Presidents at State Colleges and Universities," will deliver the Commencement address at the University's 67th year spring graduation on Saturday, May 23, at 10 a.m. in the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center.

Her speech will focus on the theme of building community.

Sturnick is chief executive officer for a residential, liberal arts college with an enrollment of 4,600 students. Under her leadership, Keene State successfully concluded a $3.5 million capital campaign, the first in the college's history.

She also established a continuing Fulbright Scholar Program on campus (in its fourth year and funded by alumni donations), developed the institution's first Honors Program, completed a major revision of the General Education requirements to include a philosophy statement, a freshman core of interdisciplinary courses and senior year capstone courses, and initiated a comprehensive plan for globalizing the curriculum.

Dr. Judith A. Sturnick, President Keene College

Sturnick established a unique international program with Belgorod State Pedagogical Institute and the city of Belgorod in the then U.S.S.R. for the exchange of students, faculty, administrators, business people and city officials. She designed and implemented a Collegewide Planning Committee and a President's Advisory Committee on Budget to recommend planning priorities and to link planning to the budget. She also established the new Office of the Vice President for Finance and Planning.

Previously, Sturnick served as president of the University of Maine at Farmington from 1983-87. While there she boosted enrollment by 22 percent (to 2,300) while also instituting a selective admissions process, tripled alumni giving and established a major scholarship fund.

She was vice president for academic affairs at Southwest State University in Minnesota from 1978-83, director of the Honors Program at Capital University in Ohio from 1977-78 and chair of the Department of English at Capital from 1970-77.

Sturnick received her B.A. in English and history from the University of North Dakota, her M.A. in English from Miami University in Ohio and her Ph.D. from Ohio State University.

Marketing Association Chapter, Diriker Win National Awards

If good marketing of your product means drawing favorable reviews early on and earning national awards, then a group of students at the Perdue School of Business has an excellent start at careers in that field.

In only its second year, SSU's American Marketing Association (AMA) chapter has been named the outstanding chapter in the Eastern Region of AMA and has been ranked fifth in the nation among more than 400 chapters including the University of California at Berkley, Penn State University, Texas A&M and Baruch College (NY).

"It's unusual to get the Outstanding Chapter award so quickly," said Ginny Shipe, AMA Collegiate Division director.

SSU faculty advisor Dr. Mehmet Diriker was astounded at the news. "We were shooting for an Outstanding New Chapter award," he beamed. "This is really a tribute to the students in the chapter. The management structure of the chapter is superb. It's designed for continuity."

At least part of the credit for this unheard of success goes to Diriker himself, or at least his students and 12 student judges from four

Union of African-American Students' Rally Staged Last Week

To the Campus Community:

As a matter of course, Salisbury State University respects each person's constitutional right to peaceably assemble and to hold open forums on the critical issues of our day. In keeping with this, I would like to commend the leadership of the Union of African-American Students as well as all of their supporters, for the orderly rally which was held on campus last week. As I said at the rally, the administration will examine the concerns expressed by our African-American students and will make every effort to continue to find solutions which are agreeable to all.

SSU already has made progress in some of these areas of concern: full-time African-American faculty represent 5.5 percent of the overall faculty at the University, above the national average of 4.5 percent; and we are on target for attaining the University of Maryland System goal of 6.1 percent minority enrollment at SSU for fall 1992. I should add that we will continue to make every effort to increase the current number of minority students and faculty.

Above all, we will continue to pursue a climate on campus which recognizes and appreciates the feelings as well the rights of individuals—a climate, which in the words of our Mission Statement, encourages "attitudes of integrity and fairness, respect for others [and] dedication to the pursuit of truth."

Thomas E. Bellavance
President

Mission Statement

The following was disseminated by the SSU Union of African-American Students at a rally on Thursday, May 7.

"The purpose of the protest today is to promote awareness of the acts of intolerance and racial incidents that have occurred on the campus of Salisbury State University. These incidents have not been isolated to the campus of Salisbury State University, but have also taken place on other Maryland campuses.

"The black student organizations from other institutions, along with the black students from Salisbury State have joined together to take a stand against racially motivated incidents. The solidarity of this union reflects a dedication and committment to ending injustice."

Personal Safety Tips Offered

These personal safety tips, compiled by the Office of Public Safety, apply when on campus as well as in the Salisbury area or wherever one resides. The precautions may lessen the likelihood of becoming a victim. Increasing awareness of crime prevention techniques may decrease the opportunity for a person to commit a criminal offense.

1. You are your own best protection.
2. Keep your door locked at all times. Don't unlock the door for strangers. Keep first floor windows locked.
3. Walk in well-lit areas and stay near the curb, away form alleys, entry ways and bushes where someone could be hiding.
4. Do not walk or jog alone after dark.
5. Avoid short cuts. Walk where there are other people present.
6. Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers. If a driver asks you for directions, stay far enough away so that you cannot be pulled into the car. Do not pick up strangers.
7. If you are being followed when walking, change directions, cross the street and vary your speed. Go to a well-lit place where there are other people. If followed by someone in a car, turn and walk in the other direction. Record the license number.
8. Park your car in a well-lit area and lock the doors.
9. If you need an escort to or from your car, call the Office of Public Safety, 543-6222.
10. Report any suspicious activity or crimes to the Public Safety Office.

For more information on personal safety, contact the Public Safety Office, located in Holloway Hall, room 022, 543-6222.

The Horn Point Environmental Education Program is conducted at the University of Maryland's Horn Point Environmental Laboratory campus. Consisting of 850 acres, the property is located on the Choptank River. It includes one-half mile of shoreline, two brackish marshes, 400 acres of woodland, 350 acres of fields and agricultural acreage. Annual Color Sweeps the Campus

by Linda Langelo, Assistant Director of Horticulture

Spring has come, again. Baskets appear on the pergola and containers are set at entrances of a variety of campus buildings. Once the Hershey Red azaleas go out of bloom around the campus, color will still peek out at us from all around.

The Holloway Hall entrance has six Oriental containers with a mix of Cleome "Rose Queen," Verbena Novalis and Begonia "Gin." At Fulton Hall red cannas are in the center with a deep red ivy geranium flowing over the sides and nicotiana and begonia "Whiskey" to fill the rest of the container. Added for a better display of color in smaller pots are white petunia, dianthus red, white and pink and more begonias.

Strolling further down campus to Caruthers Hall there are containers with a canna in the center, vinca "Pretty in Rose" and Red Elite geraniums. Coming to Devilbiss Hall, cannas sit in the center with Red Elite geraniums. Next we turn the corner to the pergola and 24 baskets of varied annuals catch our eye. All 24 baskets are paired into 12 matched baskets starting with pansy baskets of Jolly Joker. A pair of Super Elfin white impatiens are next with Red Elite geranium and ivy following. A mix of Verbena Novalis with more impatiens, all white petunia baskets, all white ageratum "Hawaii" and all blue ageratum "Blue Puffs."

Closest to the Guerrieri University Center side of the pergola are two pair of blue lobelia, "Crystal Palace" and blue browalia, "Blue Troll." Then the Guerrieri Center has containers filled with blue pansies, "Little Lucile" and pink with white pansy, "Rosey" and sedum in the center. The last of the containers about the fountain in the pergola area have cannas in the center with verbena novalis around the outside.

The annuals in Holloway circle are Jolly Joker pansies with Dusty Miller along the outer rim of the circle with red cannas in the center and cleome "Rose Queen" next to them.

Keep watching for these flowers to bloom and more exciting changes in the future.

Memorial Day Bach's Lunch

The concert series, Bach's Lunch, concludes with a special treat. On Tuesday, May 26, Sergeants First Class Jacqueline Clarys and Daniel Hopkins, members of the Soldier's Chorus of the U.S. Army Field Band, will perform in a special Memorial Day performance dedicated to area U.S. armed forces veterans.

The concert begins at 12:15 p.m. and ends at 12:45 p.m.

Survival of Arrival Needs Campus Support

The Residence Hall Association together with other departments on campus would like to welcome the new freshmen and transfer students to Salisbury State with a different kind of program called Survival of Arrival. The first SOA last fall was a tremendous success and faculty, staff and administrators are invited to be a part of that success.

This year's Survival of Arrival is slated for Monday, September 7, and Tuesday, September 8. A variety of activities including games, music and parents' reception is planned.

Hopefully, faculty, staff and administrators will take the opportunity to get involved in the new tradition and share the first two days with freshmen and transfer students. If you have questions, suggestions or answers, please contact Margo Hoffman at 548-3346, Carmen DiSylvestro at 543-6107 or Agata Liszkowska at 543-6313.

May 1992 Commencement Information

1. Commencement will be held at 10 a.m., Saturday, May 23, in the Wicomico County Youth and Civic Center. No tickets will be required, but it is suggested that graduates limit their number of guests to no more than eight. All graduates are requested to form for the processional at 9 a.m. in the side corridors adjacent to the main arena on the first floor of the Civic Center.

2. The commencement speaker will be Dr. Judith A. Sturnick, president, Keene State College, Keene, NH.

3. Physically Disabled Guests - Accessible seating is provided on the main floor of the arena. Ask an usher for the location as you enter the Civic Center.

4. Hearing Impaired - Signers are present for the entire graduation ceremony. Seating for an optimum view of the individual(s) signing is in the first level of the grandstands close to and on either side of the stage. Seating is not reserved, therefore, early arrival is suggested. Ask an usher for the location as you enter the Civic Center.

5. Caps, gowns and master's hoods and announcements (quantities are limited) will be distributed through The Book Rack beginning April 20. These may be retained by the graduates and need not be returned following the ceremony. Problems with caps and gowns will be corrected prior to the ceremony by the bookstore employees at the Civic Center, in Flanders Room No. 1 near the snack bar to the left of the arena entrances. Bookstore hours, Monday-Thursday, are 8:30 a.m.-6 p.m. Bookstore hours on Friday are 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m. The bookstore will be open on Friday, May 22, from 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m. Graduates must pick up the necessary items on or before 3 p.m. on May 22.

6. Students will be awarded degrees by school (e.g., Fulton School of Liberal Arts) and will be asked, by President Bellavance, to stand and remain standing until all degrees have been awarded for that school. Dr. Bellavance will then signal graduates to move the tassel from the right side to the left side of the mortarboard and then be seated.

7. The faculty marshals will give each graduate a 3x5 card containing his/her name and the school (e.g. Perdue School of Business). The card is then given to Dr. Nelson Butler when the graduate reaches the stage and, at the same time, the graduate is to announce his/her name. Dr. Butler will then know who the person is and how to pronounce the name correctly. The name on the card must not be changed for any reason.

8. During the recessional, graduates and faculty are to return to the area where they assembled prior to the ceremony. They should not stop or congregate in the lobby.

9. Degree candidates who do not plan to participate in the Commencement Exercise must notify the Registrar's Office by calling 543-6158 no later than Monday, May 18. All graduates will receive a blank folder at Commencement, and all diplomas will be mailed approximately six weeks after the ceremony.

10. Faculty and staff are requested to form the processional at 9:15 a.m. in the Midway Room of the Civic Center. Faculty members are required to attend; those who are unable to do so should inform their respective school dean.

20. Dress Code

This is a formal academic occasion and should be viewed as such in dress and demeanor.

The academic robe is black and the recommended dress, therefore, is:

A. Women

1. Black dress shoes (or some other dark color)—no white or other light color.
2. Dress hose, preferably not white or a light color.
3. A dress which does not have a high neckline or stand-up collar. It should not show above the V-neckline on the robe. Since the academic robe has a zipper front closing, the dress will show only near the lower hem and, therefore, preferably should be a dark color, rather than white or very light.
4. No visible jewelry. Fraternity or sorority pins/ribbons may be worn; these are academic emblems and are not considered jewelry as such.
5. No flowers on the academic robe and no flowers are to be carried to the stage.

B. Men

1. Black dress shoes (or some dark color) - no sneakers or light color sport shoes with thick rubber soles.
2. Dark color socks—no white athletic socks.
3. Dress slacks, preferably a dark or neutral color.
4. Dress shirt, preferably white or a light color.
5. Dress tie (four-in-hand tie with windsor knot). (Shirt collar and tie will show above the V-neckline of the academic robe.)
6. Suit coat or sport coat will not be seen under the robe and is, therefore, optional (the Civic Center is air conditioned).
7. No visible jewelry. Fraternity or sorority pins/ribbons may be worn; these are academic emblems and are not considered jewelry as such.

C. Both

1. The mortarboard (academic hat) is to be worn with the front point over the forehead below the front hairline so the flat board is parallel to the floor. (Not worn on the back of the head with the board pointing upward.) No decoration of any kind is to be placed on the mortarboard.
2. Candidates for the bachelor's degree should come into the auditorium with the tassel on the right, hanging near the right eye. After the degrees are conferred the tassel is shifted to the left side. The signal for shifting the tassel will be given by the president.
3. Candidates for the master's degree should place the tassel at the left front of the mortarboard prior to entering the auditorium and should not shift it.
4. Master's degree candidates will wear the robe, but will carry the hood over the left arm until they reach the stage, where it will be placed on the candidate. Faculty marshals will give you more specific information.
5. Graduates will receive graduation picture information from Market South, specialists in graduation and event photography. This information will arrive at your permanent address in the near future.

21. Graduation Decorum—Graduation ceremonies are by their very nature festive occasions. The festivity manifests itself in many ways including the dress of the students and faculty adorned in academic regalia and the warmth, joy and satisfaction of accomplishment. The ceremonies are also marked by seriousness where the actual conferring of degrees signifies long, hard work on the part of everyone involved: students, faculty, administrators, parents and spouses. As a consequence of the serious nature of the ceremony, students are expected to maintain a measure of decorum consonant with the occasion. Applause and other recognition of the conferring of degrees should be limited to a joint effort at the conclusion of each graduation group (e.g., B.S., B.A., etc.).

Theme of Foundation Gala An opportunity to enjoy an exciting evening of entertainment is once again available to guests at the eighth annual Salisbury State University Foundation Gala on Friday, May 29. The theme of the event is "Exotic Ports of Call" and features music, dancing and an impressive array of elegant dishes in each exotic port.

Robert Gearhart, director of institutional advancement at SSU, says that beginning at 7 p.m. guests will be feted at a bon voyage party at the pergola, the Greek garden area outside the Guerrieri University Center. At this time, they can enjoy an open bar and appetizers like marinated mussels, king crab legs, plain or spicy smoked blue fish, shrimp cocktail, Louisiana crayfish and a beef saute.

At 8 p.m., guests will receive boarding passes allowing them to enter "The SSU Seagull" through one of three "boarding areas." Three sections of the Guerrieri Center will be transformed for the evening. The Gulls Nest will become the Bavarian Room. Here guests can sample bratwurst, black bread and salt sticks, braised red cabbage, sauerbraten, spaetzle and wiener schnitzel. German and non-alcoholic beers will also be featured.

The Wicomico Room will become the Mediterranean Room. The food of Greece will be represented in the carved roasted leg of lamb, tyropitas, spanikopitas, dolmas and hummas. Another food station will contain food from Italy, such as fettucine alfredo, scampi, orzo and pasta fasuli (pasta with a bean sauce).

Yet another station represents Spain with a cerviche (scallops and fish marinated in lime), chorizo fritters with a mustard sauce, shrimp in a garlic sauce, and grilled chicken livers with sherry and paella, a dish containing saffron, mussels, chicken sausage and fish. An entry station will hold steamship or top rounds with a four pepper sauce and chicken breasts with blood orange sauce.

The main lounge will become the Orient Express and the food will include stir fried vegetables, rice, fried rice, egg rolls and pepper steak. On the main concourse an antipasto tray with provolone, fontina, peppers, salami, poscuitto and artichoke hearts will be available.

A dessert station will be set up at 10 p.m. in the Wicomico Room and until 11:30 p.m. guests can enjoy mini cannolis, biscottis, mini pecan tarts, melan al porto, petit fours, mini German chocolate cakes and chocolate dipped strawberries. Regular, international and decaffeinated coffee will be served.

Carmen DiSylvestro, associate director of University Dining Services, explained that this year's Gala has retained the most popular of last year's dishes. "The menu is enhanced by incorporating some new dishes, such as the Mediterranean. It's going to be a fun-filled evening."

While the variety and quality of the food is a highlight of the event each year, music and dancing are an integral part of the evening. A steel band will be playing Island music during the cocktail hour, a German band will perform in the Bavarian Room and a top 40 band will play in the Mediterranean Room from 8 p.m.-midnight. Just as on a cruise ship, a photographer will circulate to take pictures of guests.

John Hall, chair of the Gala, said, "It's a quality program being offered, with entertainment all night long. It gives a delightful feeling of being transported into another culture. And the food is as good as you find abroad."

"If you have not been there before, we can promise a pleasant and memorable evening for people of all ages," said Gearhart. Proceeds for the event go to further the mission of the SSU Foundation. The SSU Foundation, established for the encouragement and enrichment of education at the University, is incorporated as a voluntary association of community leaders solely for education, charitable and scientic purposes. Ticket chair Marge Shenasky expects 400 guests to attend the event. Ticket committee members are Liz Bellavance, Dorinda Fox, Marianna Holloway, Billye Sarbanes, Monica Joyce and Liz Layton. Tickets are $150 a couple and can be purchased from the SSU Foundation Office by calling 543-6175.

Faculty and Students Attend Math Meeting

Drs. Ben Fusara, Kathleen Shannon, Mohammad Moazzam, Lee May and Robert Tardiff, all members of the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science, as well as Kellylyn Petrella, Hank Seidel and Celeste Jordan, mathematics majors, attended the spring meeting of the Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D.C. section of the Mathematical Association of America held at the University of Virginia on April 25.

Petrella, Mitchell, Kavalsky and Melissa Pegg, who received national honors for their paper submitted to the Mathematical Contest in Modeling, were invited by the section to present those results. Petrella gave a presentation of their paper, "The Night the Lights Went Out In...."

Seidel and May presented their joint work on a theorem of the calculus. In that work, they dealt with numbers larger than the number of particles in the universe to achieve their results.

Fusaro was elected chair of the section.

Kellam To Study Public School Nursing

Dr. Barbara Kellam, associate professor of nursing, has been selected by the faculty of the School of Nursing and the Division of Continuing Education at the University of Colorado to participate with other faculty from across the nation in the national initiative known as Project SHARE.

Project SHARE is a three-year fellowship program, conducted during consecutive summers, which offers nursing school faculty from around the nation special training in contemporary school nurse issues. Project Fellows will use this training to guide school nurse continuing education at the local level.

The mission of Project SHARE is "to select highly qualified nursing-school faculty, to provide them with a setting for intensive inquiry, to arm them with state-of-the-art teaching technology, and to foster their commitment to educate the working school nurses of their communities," said Judith B. Igoe, associate professor/director of the School Health Programs at the University of Colorado.

Project Fellows return home to strengthen their ties with local school nurse leaders and offer new learning opportunities including a highly successful course on contemporary school health management know as Center City, USA. It is anticipated that consortiums will be developed and result in centers of excellence around the nation for school nurse training and research-service partnerships between elementary and secondary schools and nursing schools.

"While there is a growing children's health crisis in our country, national resources are shrinking, and the mounting burden of care is increasingly shifting to the nation's school nurses," said Igoe. School nurses now must draft policies for pupils with AIDS, know who can rescue abused children, and solve malnutrition and drug addiction problems, in addition to dealing with the many familiar childhood illnesses. The average school nurse today serves 1,700 students dispersed in three school buildings.

"The crisis is urgent and immediate; the profession will need to expand, both in number and in scope, to meet rapidly rising demands," said Igoe. "Professors must reach beyond the campuses to share their knowledge with the school nurse community."

Hutchinson Receives Temple Fellowship

Victoria V. Hutchinson, director of Salisbury State's Dance Company and instructor in the School of Education and Professional Studies, has been awarded a year's fellowship at Temple University leading to a doctor's degree in dance.

Called the Russell Conwell Fellowship in memory of Temple's founder, it provides a stipend to cover residency at the school in Philadelphia, plus tuition and a textbook allowance, all totaling more than $21,000.

"This signal honor for Victoria also reflects favorably on SSU as well. It is one more shining example of the quality of faculty at the institution," said Dr. K. Nelson Butler, vice president of academic affairs.

Ranked first among 42 fellowship nominees, Hutchinson will start her residency at Temple in August on a year's leave of absence from SSU.

After completing her course work at Temple, Hutchinson will write her dissertation, the final step toward her doctorate. She expects to devote it to developing a model program for teaching "creative movement" to youngsters in kindergarten and elementary school.

When young children learn to use their bodies expressively, she says, it engages the whole person and improves the child's basic learning skills.

Her rich background in teaching, performing and choreographing modern dance led to her selection for the fellowship in open competition at Temple, which offers one of the few doctoral programs for dance in the nation.

Among her achievements are a number of awards beginning when she was an undergraduate student at the University of Massachusetts. While there she was honored for "acting excellence" by the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C.

She finished her undergraduate work at the University of Utah earning a Bachelor of Fine Arts with honors. Next she was a scholarship student in New York City and Europe under Martha Graham, the grand dame of modern dance.

Later, as a graduate student she received the University of Arizona Fine Arts Creative Achievement Award. In 1986 she received an Illinois Art Council Choreography Fellowship. In 1983 she studied in India for seven months as a Fulbright Scholar under a master of the Kathak dance form which explores subleties of beat and rhythmn.

Before coming to SSU she worked as a freelance choreographer and dance teacher in Baltimore for private companies and community colleges.

Already well along in her studies for her doctorate at Temple, Hutchinson has been taking classes there part-time for the past year and a half, commuting the 300-mile roundtrip from Salisbury once or twice a week.

She joined the SSU faculty in 1990. In addition to her work with the Dance Company there and teaching schedule in the Physical Education Department she also serves as a guest choreographer and a movement consultant at colleges elsewhere.

Two other members of the Physical Education Department at SSU hold doctorates from Temple. They are Drs. Stevie Chepko and Christine Wagner.

different regions of the U.S. think so. Diriker was honored with the AMA's national Hugh G. Wales Faculty Advisor of the Year award.

The chapter is only 1 1/2 years old. The Marketing and Management Department is completing only its second year. The department chair, Dr. Wayne Decker, says that both awards mark "an important step for a young department.

"Within the marketing discipline, this makes other schools aware of us that weren't before," said Decker.

Decker explains that, especially in this current tight job market, the SSU chapter's national recognition can only help its members. "Anything that shows that the student has done work outside the classroom that is related to his or her profession will help," he said. "AMA membership and recognition is important not only because of what students learn as members, but also because of what it says about their character."

As for Diriker, Decker says that the Perdue School appreciates the work teachers do in service to their students. "This shows a lot of sacrifice of time on his part," said Decker. "It's good for the department when a faculty member devotes this amount of effort."

By attending the AMA's International Collegiate Conference in New Orleans in early April, members of SSU's chapter of the AMA had a chance to show what their chapter can accomplish. Perhaps more important, however, was the chance the conference gave them to test their marketing skills.

Christina Macabenta made a presentation about the chapter's involvement in the VITA program: marketing students helped attract clients for the SSU accounting students who were providing free income tax assistance. Mimi Carr and Jessie Engle made presentations before a leadership session on "Internationalizing Your Chapter."

Tami Perron, Dinah Dowell, Tatjana Stowell, Tracy Candisky and Doug Baxter designed and staffed a trade show style booth promoting the SSU chapter and the Delmarva region during the "One-on-One Display Session."

Diriker served as faculty moderator for a session on "Business to Business Marketing" and also moderated a faculty panel discussion at the conference.

Shipe explains that in entering the competition, members get experience in some of the work that awaits them in their marketing careers. Each chapter must submit a chapter plan in the fall and follow that up with an annual report in March. Except for its content, says Shipe, the annual report is exactly like one that the marketing division of a corporation would prepare.

While the experience is valuable to the students, the place they have earned for their chapter is also valuable to the school. The national recognition that this award carries helps not only the Marketing and Management Department, but the entire Perdue School of Business. SSU's vice president of academic affairs, Dr. K. Nelson Butler, explains that honors like this one mean that business schools which are unfamiliar with the Perdue School are "more likely to perceive it as a quality institution" when they learn of the award. And as the school works toward accreditation by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business, that kind of reputation is important.

Student Research Symposium Encourages Thinking 'Historically'

The first annual History Student Research Symposium was held on Saturday, May 2, in Fulton Hall, the newly opened home of the Fulton School of Liberal Arts. The event, which had been in the planning stages since September, saw the delivery of 47 student papers stretching from ancient Near Eastern religion to the recent Eastern European revolutions.

Each of the 10 sessions, representing research done by students in various classes in the History Department, was chaired by a faculty member who had helped in organizing the event and whose students were presenting papers.

The symposium served several purposes. First, it was a format for recognizing history students for their superior work in doing research on a variety of levels—from the introductory World Civilizations and U.S. history surveys, through the advanced undergraduate level, and finally through the master's level work. Students were able to see what sort of work is being done by their peers and what they might aspire to in future research.

Second, the department hopes that through the mechanism of the symposium, there will be a fostering of interest and encouragement in the "craft of history" on the part of students who attend the proceedings. The department's intention is to show the varieties of research which students are doing on all levels.

Third, the History Department intends to show students the rudiments of a professional conference and also to demonstrate that the format provides a means by which faculty might publicly honor those students. Students were encouraged to see that research is ongoing; that there is more than one solution, more than one interpretation to an issue or event.

Finally, through the research seminars, it is hoped that students will be encouraged to share opinions, results of research and constructive criticism. In this way, everyone will continue to grow and to think "historically."

Students and the titles of their papers follow: Michelle Wilson, "Anna Ella Carroll: A Woman Ahead of Her Time"; Mary Klein, "Blacks and the Church of England in Somerset County, Maryland"; Alice Paterra, "Nassawango Iron"; Michael Scott, "The Revells of Somerset County"; Melissa Pegg, "A History of Sparrows Point, Maryland"; Claudia Hannon, "Anti-Semitism: The Ugly Stain on American Society"; Sarah Bounds, "African Tradition Lives: the Religion of the Slaves"; James Thomas, "Jimmy Carter: the South Rises Again" and "A New York Yankee"; Clarence Jarrett, "A Living Fountain of Knowledge"; Jenna White, "My Family in the 1930's and 1940's"; Krista Thomas, "Life on the Eastern Shore During the Depression"; Laura Crance, "Love and War"; Lynn Osekowsky, "The Way of Life in the Great Depression"; Tammy Poore, "Life During World War II"; Scott Richard, "Soviet-Egyptian Relations, 1955-1978"; Amy MacWilliams, "The Winter of Aggression: Soviet Military Strategy in the Russo-Finnish Winter War"; Brian Frick, "A Look at the Hungarian Revolt of 1956"; Renee Ricciardi, "Vietnam, 1945-1954: Before American Involvement"; John Klien, "The Epistemological Foundation of Education Among the Greek Sophists"; Mark McClatchey, "Sparta: the Good, the Bad, and the Ugly"; David Culver, "The Development of Medical Thought in Ancient Greece"; Alison Barnes, "The Greek Woman: Madonna or Whore?"; Janet Hewitt, "Minoan-Mycenaean Religion and the Emergence of the Twelve Olympian Gods of Greece"; Robert Donohue, "Historical Evidence for the Foundations of Christianity"; Nathan Wright, "Three Mythical-Religious Systems: Mesopotamia, Egypt, and the Hebrews"; Susan Csonka, "Divinities and Mythology in Ancient Greece"; Heather Quinn, "Prehistoric Origins of Greek Religion"; Angelina Ratcliffe-Pezetti, "The Evolution of Female Deities in Greek Civilization"; Keith L. She received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters from Rivier College in New Hampshire in 1990.

Besides "Women at the Helm" (written and edited with Jane Milley and Catherine Tisinger), she also authored "Women's Studies: A Guide" in 1979. A member of the New England Board of Higher Education since 1987, Sturnick is vice chair of the Council of Liberal Arts Colleges and Universities for the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, a two-year post she will hold through 1993.

In 1991 she was selected by the New Hampshire Women in Higher Education as the namesake for the Judith A. Sturnick Award for "Leadership for Transition and Change," to be awarded annually by NHWHEA.

The class of 1992 includes 425 receiving the Bachelor of Science, 252 receiving the Bachelor of Arts, two receiving the Bachelor of Fine Arts and 33 receiving the Bachelor of Arts in Social Work. In addition 71 students will receive master's degrees: 33 the Master of Education, 16 the Master of Arts, 20 the Master of Business Administration and two the Master of Science.

On Friday, May 22, at 7:30 p.m., a pinning ceremony will honor the University's nursing graduates in Holloway Hall Auditorium.

Palmer Presents Columbus Program

William Palmer, associate professor in modern languages, presented a program on Christopher Columbus at the 19th annual Western Pennsylvania Conference on World Literature held recently at Duquesne University.

The theme of the conference was "The Encounter of Europe and the New World." Papers were presented by distinguished scholars from Italy, Spain, Brazil, Argentina and the United States. Palmer's presentation was featured at the conference banquet.

14 Faculty Research Grants Given

In an effort to facilitate and encourage research at Salisbury State University the Office of Grants and Sponsored Research with the support of the Grants Advisory Committee recently awarded 14 mini-grants totaling over $20,000 to 16 faculty members.

"We are especially grateful to Dr. K. Nelson Butler, SSU vice president of academic affairs, who added $3,000 to our funds to allow us to support two additional proposals. All of the proposals were impressive this year making the decision-making process a difficult one for the committee," said Dr. Karin Johnson, director of the Office of Grants and Sponsored Research.

Four of the five schools at SSU were recognized by the grants committee. Four members from the Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology were awarded research grants and another was awarded a stipend for research-related travel expenses. Dr. Edward Senkbeil of the Chemistry Department was awarded $1,335 for his research on "Analysis of Atrazine Residues in Soil and Water Samples"; Dr. Stephen Gehnrich of the Biology Department received $1,320 for his study "Sequencing of DNA Clones for Fish Gill Na-K ATPase"; Dr. C. Richard McKenzie was granted $1,500 toward his research of "Mathematics in Education"; and Dr. Asif Shakur of the Physics Department was granted $1,200 toward "An Automated Frequency Response Analyzer." Dr. Tom Jones of the Biology Department received a stipend of $750 toward expenses incurred while working on "A Comparison of Two Marsh Creek Systems In the Monie Bay National Estuarine Research Reserve."

Four members from the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business were awarded stipends towards research-related expenses. Dr. James Brodzinski of the Information/ Decision Sciences Department received $1,500 for expenses incurred while working on "Relative Efficacy of Regression and Neural Network Technology as Classification Methods for Determining Juvenile Recidivism"; Dr. Jean Hanebury and Dr. Benjamin Harrison received $1,200 each for research-related expenses on "Confronting the World: An Anaylsis of Successful Competitive Responses of Selected U.S. Manufacturers to Import Competition"; and Dr. Jean-Pierre Kuilboer received $1,000 toward expenses incurred while studying "Hypertext Prototype for Assessment of Business Telecommunications."

From the Charles R. and Martha N. Fulton School of Liberal Arts five members received mini-grants. Dr. Tom Erskine and James Welsh of the English Department received $750 each for "Proposal Research and Preparation for a 1994 National Endowment for the Arts Humanities Summer Institute"; Dr. Gary Harrington of the English Department received $1,500 for research-related expenses on "The Purification Plays and Authority"; Dr. Raymond A. Whall, Jr. of the English Department received $1,500 for preparation of the manuscript "Film Individualism and Community"; and Dr. Francis I. Kane of the Philosophy Department was awarded $1,500 for completion of a manuscript "Neither Beasts Nor Gods: Essays in Public Philosophy."

Two faculty members from the School of Education and Professional Studies were awarded stipends. Dr. John Bing of the Education Department was awarded $1,500 for his work on "Identification of Primary Gifted and Talented Students on the Lower Eastern Shore"; and Victoria Hutchinson of the Physical Education Department received $1,500 for her work on an "Early Childhood Movement Education Program."

Members of the Grants and Sponsored Research Advisory Committee included Dr. William Grogan from the Henson School of Science and Technology, Dr. Richard Palmer from the Perdue School of Business, Dr. Adeline Tryon from the Fulton School of Liberal Arts, Dr. Ellen Whitford from the School of Education and Professional Studies and Dr. Shielda Rodgers from the School of Nursing and Health Sciences.

"The committee members spent a great deal of time reviewing proposals and deserve much credit for their careful, objective reviews," said Johnson.

Khazeh Presents Paper At Conference

Dr. Kashi Khazeh, associate professor of finance at the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business at Salisbury State University, recently presented a paper at the 23rd annual meeting of the Midwest Decision Sciences Institute in Kansas City, MO.

The paper, "The Effects of the 1987 Stock Market Crash on the Small Investor: Perception vs. Reality," was co-authored by Dr. Wayne H. Decker, professor of management at SSU, and Dr. Robert C. Winder, associate professor of finance at Christopher Newport College. The paper was also accepted for publication in MDSI Proceedings.

The study contradicted the popular view that samll investors, shell-shocked by the crash of October 1987, left the stock market en masse to find higher ground. The overwhelming majority did not leave the stock market after the crash, nor did they attempt to contact their brokers at that time. With hindsight, the small investor surveyed regret that they did not take advantage of bargains created by the precipitous plunge in the Dow.

"This is not to say that small investors were unaffected by 'Black Monday,'" said Khazeh. "Our survey respondents believed that the market was safe before the crash, but are now uncertain. It has been said that 'time heals all wounds.' Perhaps the passage of additional time will mitigate the present concerns about the safety of the market."

On a positive note, the small investors surveyed believed their brokers behaved ethically during the stock market crash. In general, despite investor concern over the issue of churning, the brokerage industry was not a target of criticism.

However, the small investors surveyed exhibited a lack of knowledge of the current arbitration system for resolving disputes between investors and their brokers. "Because the number of these disputes has increased in recent years, and because this trend is likely to continue, regulators and government officials should address this problem proactively to maintain the trust that is essential to the smooth functioning of the equity market," said Khazeh.

A second concern with important public policy implications is program trading. "Individual investors clearly feel disadvantaged as a result of this institutional strategy," said Khazeh. This in part may explain why the respondents feel that the government has not done enough to make the market safer for small investors.

"Notwithstanding those concerns, there is ample evidence that the small and individual investors surveyed are optimistic and are in the market to stay," said Khazeh. "There is no support for the view that these investors should 'give up,' even in the face of the (presumably) superior abilibity and resources of the institutions. A majority of respondents believe that small investors were, and continue to be, selective in their choice of stocks.

"Overall, based on the data, those surveyed seem to be rational, long-term investors who consider safety diversification and income growth their principal goals," said Khazeh. "These investors witnessed the crash of October 1987, but they also know that in the last decade the Dow Jones Industrial Average increased by over 200 percent, with an average annual gain of 11.62 percent. These numbers speak for themselves, and small investors are listening."

SSU Dedicates $16 Million Fulton Hall— First New Academic Building in More Than a Decade

Salisbury State University dedicated its first new classroom building in more than a decade, the $16 million Fulton Hall, on Friday, May 1.

The name Fulton Hall was chosen to honor Charles and Martha Fulton of Snow Hill, who endowed the School of Liberal Arts in 1989 with a $2.5 million gift.

"The Fulton's endowment enabled us to begin fulfilling the enormous potential this school has to offer the region and the state," said Dr. Thomas E. Bellavance, president of SSU. "Now we have a new facility and community resource which reflects the caliber of programs offered at the Fulton School."

Gov. William Donald Schaefer said, "Charles and Martha Fulton's generous gift is an outstanding example of the private sector's cooperation with state government toward educating and training our future workforce.

"This wonderful new facility will provide a great atmosphere for young people to study music, theatre and art," said Gov. Schaefer.

Word is spreading fast about the impressive technology and array of equipment housed in the graceful structure.

According to Dr. Thomas G. Elliot, chair of the Music Department and conductor of the Salisbury Symphony Orchestra, "A number of musicians come here from Peabody and other schools to play in the orchestra. When we had our first rehearsal in Fulton Hall, they raved about the facilities."

This state-of-the-art complex includes a custom-designed black box theatre, an expanded University art gallery, a modern music library, an electronic music studio, a ceramics studio with outdoor courtyard for raku and other special firings, photographic darkrooms including color, and a full complement of rehearsal halls and studio spaces.

In addition, one wing, all newly equipped, is completely devoted to computer services for students.

This is the first new state-supported structure on campus since Maggs gymnasium, which opened in 1977. New construction since then, mostly dorms and a University Center, has been

Student Literacy Corps Attracts Student Volunteers

Twenty-three students at Salisbury State will be trained as literacy tutors this fall and sent into the local community to help selected adults and children improve their skills in reading, writing and critical thinking.

A part of the University's long-range plan to involve its students and faculty in real-life community problems, the new project is being carried out with the cooperation of the Wicomico County public schools and other local agencies concerned with reducing illiteracy in the general population.

Called the Student Literacy Corps, the SSU project is being financed as a two-year pilot program by a nearly $50,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Education which is funding the literacy corps nationally.

Science School Symposium Fosters Student Research

Concerned about the shortage of scientists in higher education and research, Dr. Phillip Creighton, dean of the Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology, has investigated methods of recruiting undergraduates to the sciences.

Believing that "people get turned off when they feel separate from science," Creighton sought to draw students in to a greater appreciation of their discipline. He focused on finding a reliable method of involving students in research and settled on the Undergraduate Research Symposium where student-faculty research would be presented, utilizing the format of a professional meeting.

"One goal is to have the students become familar with the opportunities of research," said Creighton. But on a more profound level, Creighton wanted to tempt students into the professional world where they could experience the rewards of doing science on a personal level. By working closely with faculty, the students would gain a first-hand appreciation of their discipline.

When Creighton assumed his position with SSU in the summer of 1990, he asked department chairs to make undergraudate research a requirement of each department. He also requested that research courses in the School of Science carry an obligation to present student findings. The symposium provided a vehicle for students to present their work and symposium announcements went out that fall.

The first symposium was held in May 1991. Students from the departments of math, physics, chemistry, geography and biology presented results of independent or faculty-directed research. "The students," Creighton said, "went into it with a great deal of apprehension but at the end felt exhilaration at having been accepted as colleagues; it's a great boost. Many students said they would do it again, and others said they would recommend it to their friends.

"I was so impressed with the sophistication of our students," said Creighton. The first time I got up before a professional association, my knees were knocking and I thought I was going to die a slow death. But I was so proud of our students. They were composed and well prepared. It was a gratifying experience."

Mary Antlefinger Norton, who was a senior in chemistry when she participated in a poster display segment of the symposium, admitted she wasn't thrilled initially, because of the extra work demanded. "But I enjoyed the symposium. It increased my knowledge beyond the textbooks. You learned by doing.

"It was nice to see what the collective group was doing," said Norton. "So much of research is individual, you spend 200 hours working on your own, so it was nice to see what others were doing."

Norton, who is now a chemistry lab instructor at SSU, has found that she is better

Science Teachers Trained at SSU this Summer

Dr. Ann Taylor of the School of Education and Professional Studies has received a grant in the amount of $72,000 from the Maryland Higher Education Commission funded by the Dwight D. Eisenhower Mathematics and Science Education Act.

Through the grant SSU will provide a summer training program for 20 middle school science teachers from Wicomico, Somerset and Worcester counties. The project will be implemented through an interdisciplinary team of educators from Salisbury State, the University of Maryland Eastern Shore and science supervisors from area middle schools.

The program is designed to make middle school science teachers aware of critical factors that often interfere with the processing and acquisition of science concepts among minorities and under prepared students who attempt to master science content. Social and cultural factors among minority students in general often result in science being viewed as attainable only for the exceptionally bright students. In-service training with teachers will emphasize the need to correct these deep seated beliefs and replace them with positive attitudes that will aid students in their overall orientation toward science.

Learning styles will be emphasized in the training workshops and will be related to how diverse groups organize, structure and synthesize information for transfer and retention. Taylor believes that more often than not minority students' learning styles are often unaddressed in traditional classrooms.

"This salient factor contributes to the poor performance these students often present," said Taylor. "In-service training will provide in-depth coverage of working successfully with information processing habits of minority students. Additionally, current models that have been successful in addressing minority learning styles will be introduced and integrated into the instructional presentations."

In-service training will stress the need to create success oriented environments where high expectations are communicated to all students regardless of their academic achievement levels. Additionally, in-service training will stress the need for cooperation among science teachers and teachers of other subjects so that the science content can be integrated across the curriculum.

Teachers will be given practice in applying cooperative learning in the science classroom and will receive strategies that will help them enhance critical thinking skills by the scientific method of problem solving. Teachers will learn how to evaluate their classroom activities to determine how appropriate they are in promoting critical thinking skills.

A main feature of the training program will be the science weekend institute which will be designed as an on-going reinforcement and support for in-service teachers and students who will participate in the middle school enhancement program. It will continue to assist teachers in refining their skills of imparting science content.

Under practicum supervision, in-service teachers will design, structure and present science lessons and receive immediate feedback from consultants in the program. Teachers will receive increased exposure to experts in the field of science through consultants in industry and professionals in the scientific community. These individuals will keep teachers abreast of new research and on-going technological changes in their respective areas.

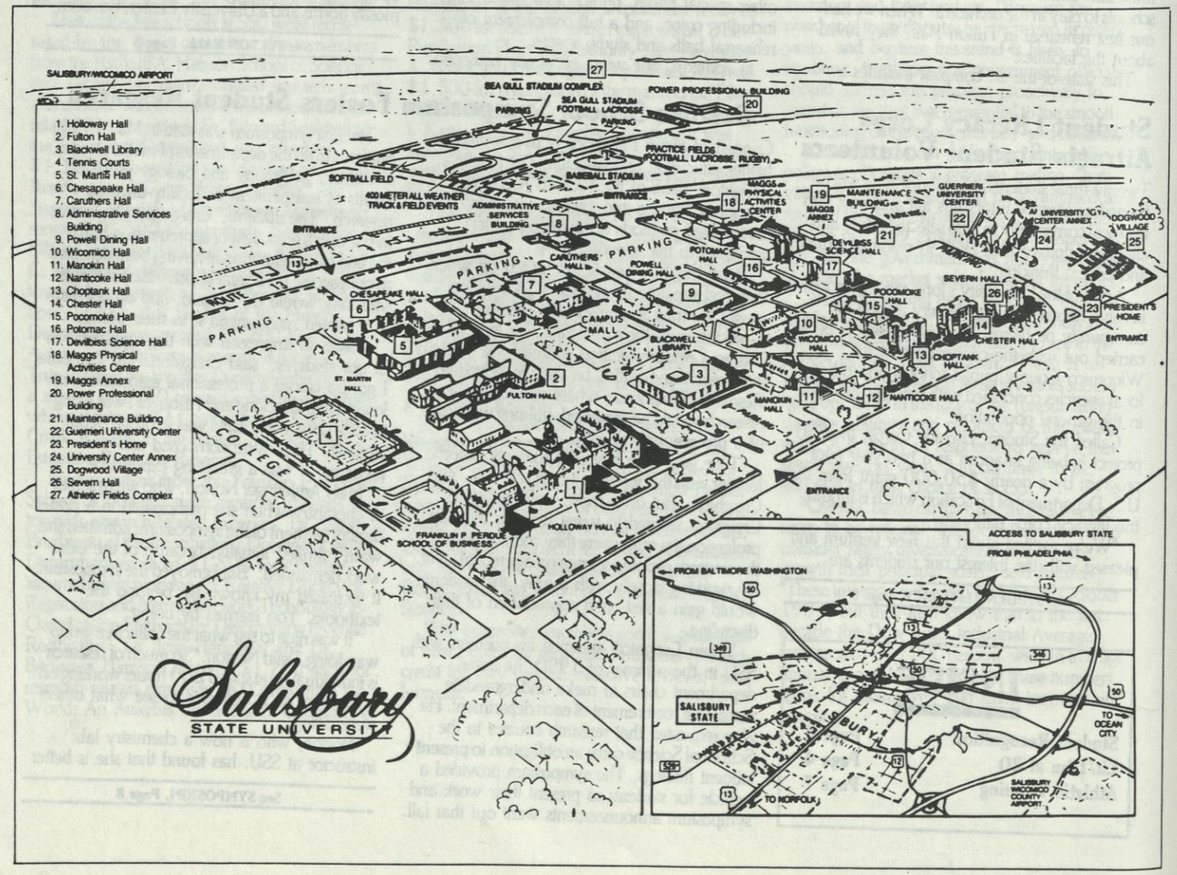
The science weekend institute will assist teachers in designing field-based experience that will bring science content into closer focus for middle school youth while increasing their problem-solving and observational skills. It will invite professionals from the various scientific societies to conduct workshops on fostering teacher training and preparation.

"It is broadly recognized that time spent on science during the academic day may not be adequate for sound concept formation and application of science principles," said Taylor. Thus, the science weekend institute will provide extended time for students to conduct diverse experiments in the different labs located at Salisbury State. During the science weekend institute, time will be allotted for students as well as teachers to take field trips to different science museums in the Washington, D.C./Baltimore area. This experience promises to arouse the natural curiosity in middle school children and to excite their imagination by seeing science in action.

Taylor credits Dr. Karin Johnson, director of grants and sponsored research at SSU, for the grant's ultimate success. Taylor who views herself as a student under Johnson's guidance and leadership often says her creativity matched with Johnson's professionalism, dedication and "grantmanship" is a winning combination.

Dr. Phillip Creighton, dean of the Henson School of Science and Technology, was the chief collaborator in the development of the grant. "He created the valuable interdisciplinary approach with the School of Education and Professional Studies which led to the development of strategies and techniques of approaching science education that will ultimately improve the status of science achievement among under-represented groups," said Taylor.

Map of the Campus and Surrounding Area



Officers in Salisbury State University's American Marketing Association chapter are Tracy Candisky, vice president of communication; Jessie Engle, board director; Tami Perron, president; Dr. Memo Diriker, faculty advisor; and Mimi Carr, senior executive vice president. SSU's AMA chapter was recently named the outstanding chapter in the Eastern Region of AMA and has been ranked fifth in the nation among more than 400 chapters.

SSU Marketing Students Garner National Recognition

If marketing of your product means drawing favorable reviews early on and earning national awards, then a group of students at the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business has an excellent start at careers in that field.

In only its second year, SSU's American Marketing Association (AMA) chapter has been named the outstanding chapter in the Eastern Region of AMA and has been ranked fifth in the nation among more than 400 chapters including the University of California at Berkley, Penn State University, Texas A&M and Baruch College (NY).

"It's unusual to get the Outstanding Chapter award so quickly," said Ginny Shipe, AMA Collegiate Division director.

SSU faculty advisor Dr. Mehmet Diriker was astounded at the news. "We were shooting for an Outstanding New Chapter award," he beamed. "This is really a tribute to the students in the chapter. The management structure of the chapter is superb. It's designed for continuity."

At least part of the credit for this unheard of success goes to Diriker himself, or at least his students and 12 student judges from four different regions of the U.S. think so. Diriker was honored with the AMA's national Hugh G. Wales Faculty Advisor of the Year award.

The chapter is only 1 1/2 years old. The Marketing and Management Department is completing only its second year. The department chair, Dr. Wayne Decker, says that both awards mark "an important step for a young department.

"Within the marketing discipline, this makes other schools aware of us that weren't before," said Decker.

Decker explains that, especially in this current tight job market, the SSU chapter's national recognition can only help its members. "Anything that shows that the student has done work outside the classroom that is related to his or her profession will help," he said. "AMA membership and recognition is important not only because of what students learn as members, but also because of what it says about their character."

As for Diriker, Decker says that the Perdue School appreciates the work teachers do in service to their students. "This shows a lot of sacrifice of time on his part," said Decker. "It's good for the department when a faculty member devotes this amount of effort."

By attending the AMA's International Collegiate Conference in New Orleans in early April, members of SSU's chapter of the AMA had a chance to show what their chapter can accomplish. Perhaps more important, however, was the chance the conference gave them to test their marketing skills.

Christina Macabenta made a presentation about the chapter's involvement in the VITA program: marketing students helped attract clients for the SSU accounting students who were providing free income tax assistance. Mimi Carr and Jessie Engle made presentations before a leadership session on "Internationalizing Your Chapter."

Tami Perron, Dinah Dowell, Tatjana Stowell, Tracy Candisky and Doug Baxter designed and staffed a trade show style booth promoting the SSU chapter and the Delmarva region during the "One-on-One Display Session."

Diriker served as faculty moderator for a session on "Business to Business Marketing" and also moderated a faculty panel discussion at the conference.

Shipe explains that in entering the competition, members get experience in some of the work that awaits them in their marketing careers. Each chapter must submit a chapter plan in the fall and follow that up with an annual report in March. Except for its content, says Shipe, the annual report is exactly like one that the marketing division of a corporation would prepare.

While the experience is valuable to the students, the place they have earned for their chapter is also valuable to the school.

The national recognition that this award carries helps not only the Marketing and Management Department, but the entire Perdue School of Business. SSU's vice president of academic affairs, Dr. K. And as the school works toward accreditation by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business, that kind of reputation is important.

Nursing at Salisbury Is International Effort

Kenya, Guatemala, Korea, Germany, Jordan, England, Brazil. All are countries where University nursing graduates and professors have worked, or are now working.

They are military nurses, a Fulbright professor, an international consultant, or deeply committed volunteers.

Salisbury, a small comprehensive university with a total enrollment of 5,800 students, is located in the heart of Maryland's Eastern Shore—one of the most scenic and historic areas in the mid-Atlantic states.

Despite this almost idyllic location, the University's nursing program uses Salisbury not as a retreat but a springboard to explore the world—literally. "Today nursing is a very mobile career," said Dr. Edna Quinn, who was a visiting Fulbright professor to Irbid, Jordan, before Operation Desert Storm.

Quinn brings an international perspective to her teaching. She spent four years establishing health clinics in the jungles of Brazil, and also lived in England for a year. As part of a popular nursing course, "Cultural Considerations in Nursing," she regularly takes Salisbury students to London. This year she also will be taking a class to Hawaii, Australia and New Zealand to study nursing practices on the Pacific rim. "At a time when we have a crisis in health care here and alternative systems are being explored, it is appropriate that we look at how other countries provide health care for their people," Quinn said.

Both Australia and New Zealand may have something to teach us. Each, for example, has an infant mortality rate lower than the U.S.

When visiting these countries SSU students meet with experts, and tour hospitals, midwifery services, community health clinics and nursing schools.

Not all assignments are traditional. A favorite is to eat in three different foreign nationality restaurants—to see how different cuisine may affect hospitalization. "If a visitor to the United States has trouble with American food, now I'll be able to better empathize," said one Salisbury student.

Nursing majors also may elect an interdisciplinary program which allows them to earn college credit from the SSU Department of English as well. As part of their studies in England, for example, they see some of the world's best theatre and visit historic sites and museums.

Values are an important part of nursing education at Salisbury. Recent graduate Mary Kay Colliton, now a nurse at the University of Virginia Medical Center, traveled at her own expense to the jungles of Guatemala the summer after she graduated. She worked in a small mountain clinic run by an American-born nurse there. The two were assisted by Salisbury nursing professor Beth Rettew.

"I remember one house call we made where a 15 or 16 year old girl had a knee so infected that she couldn't walk," said Colliton. "There were four children in the family who took care of one another. Their parents had died. They farmed and lived in huts. Seeing these children care for one another—the love they had, was overwhelming. Though they were in dire straits they tried to give us their food for the day as payment.

"They helped us so much more to appreciate the finer things in life—not in material things, but in friendshp and love. I received more from them than I gave."

Nursing has always meant involvement in the world. At Salisbury it's never been more apparent.

Work With 'At Risk' Kids Is Lesson of a Lifetime

Business students are always eager for hands-on experience, but in one class at the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business that means a lesson in some of life's harsher realities.

The students who signed up for Dr. Jean Hanebury's class on Business, Society and Ethics are getting a first-hand look at some of the problems facing American educators. As a course requirement, they are volunteer tutors for at-risk students in a Wicomico County middle school. And every one of the students is sure that this is a lesson that will last a lifetime.

Hanebury designed the course and has been teaching it at SSU for three years. She began to develop the idea at another university where she heard a business student provide a new definition of the Golden Rule: "Whoever has the gold," the student said, "makes the rules." After that encounter, she began to search for a way to make high ethical standards a part of business education.

In addition to reading assigned texts and debating some of the thornier issues of the day, students in her Business, Society and Ethics class volunteer for one to two hours a week in community service. They each keep a journal reflecting what they do and what the experience means to them.

Hanebury's young business scholars are enthusiastic about the experience, and distressed by the neediness of the children they tutor.

Most of the students are tutoring at Bennett Middle School in a program called "Shore Futures." For Andrew Mengason, that means returning to his alma mater. At first, it seemed to him nothing had changed. When he found students in danger of being left back or even dropping out because of their poor reading skills, he decided he was wrong. "How did we ever get to the point," he asked in his journal, "where middle school students were not functioning on the same level? Yes, not everyone was an 'A' student, but we all learned and progressed together."

Andrew's classmates had similar reactions. Toni Benjamin noted that in many cases both parents are working, so there may not be anyone at home to work with a child on his homework or help her discover the pleasures of reading a good book. Leslie Friend found that the child she works with is eager to learn and loves to read about things that interest her. What she needed was someone to take the time to do those things with her.

At mid-term, the students are already drawing conclusions about their own roles in the future of education. As Toni Benjamin pointed out, "The education system needs volunteers to be right there with the kids."

Bennett Middle School principal Stephenson Matthes is thrilled to see his students getting the moral support they need. "The college students become positive role models," he said. "Where can you get someone 18 or 20 years old who will spend time with kids?"

Matthes points out that it is difficult for a teacher to give a child this kind of one-to-one assistance without drawing attention to the child's needs. For middle school children, being different means being weird. Yet the personal touch is exactly what the children crave. Some of the students being tutored have shown poor attendance in the past. "But when the students know their tutor is coming over," said Matthes, "they make sure they're there."

The choices for community service are not limited to tutoring, either. Some students visit nursing homes—perhaps the one place where personal attention is even more highly valued. And the visits don't necessarily end when the semester does. Hanebury reports that one year, out of 35 students, five had continued weekly nursing home visits six months after the course had ended.

One of the biggest fans of the class is probably Dr. Richard Bebee, dean of the Perdue School of Business. "This kind of community involvement by college students should be part of their educational experience in preparing for a successful business career," he said.

"We are concerned about societal problems, not just learning how to make money."

Bebee points out that the benefits of learning by doing have long been recognized. "And getting involved in the community is an important part of what they need to learn," he added.

Bebee would have been very happy to hear the class discuss their experiences as tutors. Eric Weaver's classmates nodded in agreement with his conclusion: "It's the ethical responsibility of business to help shoulder a lot of the problems."

SSU Faculty Awarded $20,000 in Research Support

In an effort to facilitate and encourage research at Salisbury State the Office of Grants and Sponsored Research with the support of the Grants Advisory Committee recently awarded 14 mini-grants totaling over $20,000 to 16 faculty members.

"We are especially grateful to Dr. K. Nelson Butler, SSU vice president of academic affairs, who added $3,000 to our funds to allow us to support two additional proposals. All of the proposals were impressive this year making the decision-making process a difficult one for the committee," said Dr. Karin Johnson, director of the Office of Grants and Sponsored Research.

Four of the five schools at SSU were recognized by the grants committee. Four members from the Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology were awarded research grants and another was awarded a stipend for research-related travel expenses. Dr. Edward Senkbeil of the Chemistry Department was awarded $1,335 for his research on "Analysis of Atrazine Residues in Soil and Water Samples"; Dr. Stephen Gehnrich of the Biology Department received $1,320 for his study "Sequencing of DNA Clones for Fish Gill Na-K ATPase"; Dr. C. Richard McKenzie was granted $1,500 toward his research of "Mathematics in Education"; and Dr. Asif Shakur of the Physics Department was granted $1,200 toward "An Automated Frequency Response Analyzer." Dr. Tom Jones of the Biology Department received a stipend of $750 toward expenses incurred while working on "A Comparison of Two Marsh Creek Systems In the Monie Bay National Estuarine Research Reserve."

Four members from the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business were awarded stipends towards research-related expenses. Dr. James Brodzinski of the Information/ Decision Sciences Department received $1,500 for expenses incurred while working on "Relative Efficacy of Regression and Neural Network Technology as Classification Methods for Determining Juvenile Recidivism"; Dr. Jean Hanebury and Dr. Benjamin Harrison received $1,200 each for research-related expenses on "Confronting the World: An Anaylsis of Successful Competitive Responses of Selected U.S. Manufacturers to Import Competition"; and Dr. Jean-Pierre Kuilboer received $1,000 toward expenses incurred while studying "Hypertext Prototype for Assessment of Business Telecommunications."

From the Charles R. and Martha N. Fulton School of Liberal Arts five members received mini-grants. Dr. Tom Erskine and James Welsh of the English Department received $750 each for "Proposal Research and Preparation for a 1994 National Endowment for the Arts Humanities Summer Institute"; Dr. Gary Harrington of the English Department received $1,500 for research-related expenses on "The Purification Plays and Authority"; Dr. Raymond A. Whall, Jr. of the English Department received $1,500 for preparation of the manuscript "Film Individualism and Community"; and Dr. Francis I. Kane of the Philosophy Department was awarded $1,500 for completion of a manuscript "Neither Beasts Nor Gods: Essays in Public Philosophy."

Two faculty members from the School of Education and Professional Studies were awarded stipends. Dr. John Bing of the Education Department was awarded $1,500 for his work on "Identification of Primary Gifted and Talented Students on the Lower Eastern Shore"; and Victoria Hutchinson of the Physical Education Department received $1,500 for her work on an "Early Childhood Movement Education Program."

Members of the Grants and Sponsored Research Advisory Committee included Dr. William Grogan from the Henson School of Science and Technology, Dr. Richard Palmer from the Perdue School of Business, Dr. Adeline Tryon from the Fulton School of Liberal Arts, Dr. Ellen Whitford from the School of Education and Professional Studies and Dr. Shielda Rodgers from the School of Nursing and Health Sciences.

"The committee members spent a great deal of time reviewing proposals and deserve much credit for their careful, objective reviews," said Johnson.

Acclaimed Film Magazine Celebrates 20 Years in Print

A small scholarly magazine on cinema that began in 1973 as a fun extracurricular project for two English professors at Salisbury State University is celebrating its 20th anniversary as an internationally respected film quarterly that is carried by most of the nation's university and public libraries.

It also has subscribers in 28 other countries and recently won a grant from the foundation behind the Academy Awards to publish an index to all its past issues.

The Maryland university's Literature/Film Quarterly "is not trendy . . . and has consistently maintained a standard of thorough scholarship and high readability," according to a British book, "International Film, Radio and Television Journals."

Many film publications became politicized in the 1970s, according to James M. Welsh, who founded the magazine with colleague Thomas L. Erskine. They also were full of arcane, doctrinaire articles in language that only film experts could understand, he said.

"We consider ourselves old-fashioned, fuddy-duddy humanists" who publish articles that are both clearly written and knowledgeable about film, he said.

A recent issue of the quarterly, for example, was devoted largely to Woody Allen films, with additional articles on "Back to the Future" as quintessential comedy; on sex and moral purpose in the movie "Joseph Andrews" and on the influence of Charlie Chaplin, "the grandfather of comedy of social conscience," on playwright Bertolt Brecht.

Special issues have featured movies and Shakespeare, new German cinema and films on the Vietnam War.

A conference on television, movies and the Vietnam War is scheduled for November at the Eastern Shore campus; it will be sponsored by the Film/Literature Association, a three-year-old outgrowth of the quarterly.

The association will have its annual film conference this month at Maryland's Towson State University. The subject this year: literature, history and film.

The association also will sponsor a conference on "Gender and Genre in Psychodrama" in October at the University of Rhode Island.

Business Student Directing Local Farmers Market

Dawn Carey, a student in Salisbury State's Franklin P. Perdue School of Business and intern for the Maryland Department of Agriculture is shown at a Farmer's Market held recently at Salisbury's Wicomico Youth and Civic Center. As intern for the Department of Agriculture, Carey assists retail farmer's markets in Wicomico and Worcester counties.

The world of marketing and advertising may seem a far cry from the toils of farming, but for business student Dawn Carey, the two have combined, at least for the summer.

Carey, a student at the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business has begun an internship with the Maryland Department of Agriculture, assisting retail farmer's markets in Wicomico and Worcester counties. The placement gives her a chance to return to her roots. "I come from a farm family." Her parents, Don and Shirley Insley, operate a hog, grain and poultry farm in Tyaskin. The rationale for the farmer's market struck a nerve with Carey. "My family stopped growing produce because it's so hard to distribute and there is a shortage of good labor. But I miss it. I miss picking corn and cooking it for dinner."

Twenty-one year old Carey will serve as the coordinator for the Shore Fresh Growers Association, the organization that represents the Delmarva farmers participating in the market.

The system is simple. Farmers pay for the space and get the benefits of marketing surveys, advertising and promotion of the market. "The worst problem is finding farmers to participate in something new," said Carey. The program is open to watermen, aquaculturists and produce growers across Delmarva. Carey is happy that 30 growers have joined the association, twice as many as last year at this time.

Similar projects have been in existence in other parts of the state, beginning in 1989. Last year, sites in Ocean City and Salisbury were added. "The market has a tremendous potential," said Tony Evans, Carey's supervisor at the Maryland Department of Agriculture. "I'm looking forward to Mrs. Carey's assistance. I logged 3,800 miles on my truck last July, driving to the (Eastern Shore) markets."

Evans was put in touch with Carey through Reed Muller, director of undergraduate programs for the Perdue School. When Evans told Muller what he was looking for, "he came up with her name instantly." Evans interviewed Carey. "I knew right away I had a bell ringer here. Last week, she gave up part of her birthday to go to a grower's meeting. She's just a dynamite lady."

This summer, a second market location will be opened in downtown Salisbury, behind the Cannon Building. This market will be open from 2-6 p.m. on Tuesdays, beginning June 23. The concept was initiated by the Greater Salisbury Revitalization Committee. Carey has drawn up a survey for the downtown market to help establish the best time for the market. The survey is being distributed by the Salisbury Downtown Merchants Association. The other markets are located at the Salisbury Wicomico Youth and Civic Center and the Phillips Restaurant at 142nd Street in Ocean City, MD. Carey will have oversight of all three markets, including on-site supervision, and collect money from the farmers. She will also devote energy to designing and distributing fliers and other forms of advertising for the markets.

Evans pointed out that, "We have a strict producers-only policy. If you bring the food to the market, you have to be the producer. It's our guarantee to the consumer that the product is local and it is fresh."

Evans is pleased with the evolution of the farmer's market on the lower Shore and with his relationship with the participants. "Salisbury is a wonderful community. And we are forging a very strong link with SSU, an expanding institution. We hope it grows. The Business School is a fascinating project. There will be more and more partnerships of government and academia."

Carey chose Salisbury State on the recommendation of her brother, who graduated from the school. "Everybody knows Salisbury State's reputation, knows that it is a good school. And, I didn't want to go away from home. I wanted to use what was here."

Carey, who will graduate next December, has enjoyed her years at the Perdue School of Business. "It's gone by fast. You learn all aspects of marketing. The program hits all sides. You could start a job at any part of the process and not be lost.

"The professors were helpful," she added. "There are hard ones, but they're willing to help."

Carey would like to work for an advertising agency, but is willing to look anywhere to get work experience. She would like to stay on the Eastern Shore in order to be close to her family. Her husband, Art Carey, works for Schmidt Baking Company and is also from the Shore.

For the time being, Carey is anxious to work for the farmer's market. "I'd like to see it go, so the porduce won't go to waste. It's horrible when produce wastes on the truck. These issues are close to me. It's hard to make money in farming. I'd like to see them make some money."

Business Student Selected To Minority Summer Institute

University student Grovena M. Young was one of 36 students selected nationwide to participate in the Graduate Management Admission Council's third annual Minority Summer Institute (MSI) at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

A senior majoring in accounting in the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, Young will be spending six weeks this summer along with other talented minority men and women taking part in a series of activities designed to help them investigate careers as business faculty members.

"This is a relatively new program and I am extremely proud, as are all the Perdue School faculty, that one of our students is getting deserved recognition," said Dr. Richard F. Bebee, dean of the Perdue School. "I also think that this attests to the quality of our business program."

Young was one of 350 students from over 400 schools throughout the country, including such prestigious institutions as Harvard, Princeton and Yale, competing for this award. When asked how she felt about having such strong competition, Young replied, "While that is impressive to me, I don't think that the name of the school necessarily determines one's success.

"Just because a school has a name, that doesn't mean that you will know everything if you go there. SSU is a small school but I'm receiving a quality education. Perhaps because it is a smaller school, I've gotten more individual attention. My professors are always willing to help and they understand the pressure you're under as a student."

Young is grateful to Dr. Doran Tirtiroglu, an assistant professor in the Perdue School and mentor, for his support and encouragement. "Without his help I never would have been able to attend the institute this summer," said Young.

"This is one of the happiest moments of my career," said Tirtiroglu. "I am extremely happy that Grovena is being given this award and am totally confident that she will be successful. I also hope this starts a pipeline for future students."

MSI is structured to provide participants with a substantive and well-rounded look at the demands, responsibilities and rewards of an academic business career. It is funded by a $1.2 million grant from the Graduate Management Admissions Council.

A five-member selection committee of deans, doctoral program directors and faculty members was extremely impressed with Young's credentials and her acceptance was the result of a unanimous decision.

During the six-week Institute, Young will participate in a wide range of activities from formal coursework and doctoral research labs to informal sessions and discussions with current minority Ph.D. students and faculty.

All travel and living expenses are paid, as well as tuition, books and supplies. Each student receives a $2,500 stipend to make up for lost summer earnings. Upon successful completion of the coursework, Michigan awards six hours of college credit.

Young is vice president and co-founder of Progressive Black Women, an organization in Prince George's County dedicated to helping others such as the homeless and single mothers. Former vice president of the SSU chapter of the National Association of Accountants and a member of Omicron Delta Kappa, a national leadership honor society, she is the recipient of a $2,000 four- year renewable Other Race Grant based on her academic excellence.

"I think this is a very good opportunity, especially for a minority student like myself," said Young. "I hope that one day I can contribute and give back some of the opportunities I've been given to help somebody else."

Athletic Training Program Proves To Be Rigorous and Rewarding

A typical day for six Salisbury State students might include taping ankles, fitting equipment, doing flexibility exercises with athletes, giving out information on nutrition or going to the hospital to check on an injured player.

These six seniors are completing their degrees in the athletic training track of the physical education program. In order to graduate, they must complete 1,500 hours in sports medicine, which includes their internships at participating area high schools.

Students start their practicums in August before preseason sports begin and continue throughout the entire school year, covering all team sports events in addition to traveling to away games with the football teams.

They are responsible for the prevention, care, treatment and rehabilitation of all athletic injuries which might occur at any of the high schools' athletic events. Since the majority of injuries happen during practices and not at the games, they cover all practices as well.

"I usually put in about 25-40 hours a week not counting my class work," said Kimberly Bauer, a senior from Pasadena. "As an athletic trainer you also have to help students get ready for practices and games, follow up on any injuries, and there is a tremendous amount of paper work that goes along with the job."

"During the preseason, students cover an average of two practices a day, five to six days a week, in addition to their other responsibilities," said Mary Ann Fardelmann, SSU athletic training supervisor. "For example, student trainers fit equipment for the football players, checking helmets to make sure that air is allowed to flow through and making sure that shoulder pads are fitted properly.

"They also need to make sure that athletes are healthy," she continued. "If students have pre-existing conditions such as old ankle sprains, they will work on rehabilitation with them. Protective equipment and proper conditioning are extremely important," she added.

During the regular season, student trainers need to arrive at a game or practice before it starts and have to follow up on any injuries or complications that might have occured. A 3 1/2 hour game usually requires at least six hours of their time.

Salisbury State has a formal written contract with seven area high schools, providing a scholarship stipend for the student athletic trainers.

This is the second year that Gregg Budd, athletic director at Delmar High School, has used SSU student athletic trainers. In the past, the responsibility for athletic training has fallen on the school nurse and the coaches.

"That put a great deal of demand on their time," said Budd. These two students have taken a weight off everybody's shoulders. Our coaches and I have left a lot of things up to them—last year's student came in and them—last year's student came in and organized the whole athletic training program," he said. "He basically took a storage facility and turned it into a nice training room."

"I've seen concussions, sprains, strained muscles and fractured bones," said Bauer, who is interning at Stephen Decatur High. "You have to use your common sense and be prepared for situations you may never have encountered before—to rely on what you've been taught and follow your instincts. Fortunately, I haven't seen any serious injuries so far."

Melissa "Missy" Moscati of Baldwin wasn't as lucky. "My second week at Parkside High during a preseason practice, I had a varsity football player who took a helmet to the side and ended up with a ruptured spleen," she said.

"I was treating someone in the training room when the coach came and told me that one of his players had gone down. When I got there he was pale but said he was feeling better. I evaluated him for internal damage and sent him home with a friend, telling him what symptoms to look for," added Moscati.

"When I called him back later that day, he said he had pain in his shoulders—that's a primary indicator of internal damage (especially spleen damage). His sister was with him and I told her to call an ambulance. I met them at the hospital and he was immediately taken into surgery with what they thought was a ruptured liver. It wasn't until surgery that they realized it was his spleen. After coming through the surgery, he told me, 'If you hadn't done what you did, I could have died,'" she said.

"While the experience wasn't a fun one, it did show me that I do know what I'm doing," said Moscati. "I realized that if I could handle that situation, I could probably handle most anything. I've learned more working at the high school than I've learned in my three years at SSU. I never could have done it without the training I received at the University but you never really know what you can do until you have to do it on your own," she said."

The first athletic trainer at SSU was Hunter Smith, who graduated from James M. Bennett High and Tennessee Tech and is now head athletic trainer with the Indianapolis Colts. "He's sort of a legend around here," said Pat Lamboni, head athletic trainer at SSU. "He started the program here in 1972 and designed our current athletic training room. He also educated the administration and coaches about the need for an athletic training program at the University and set a foundation for us to follow."

Lamboni also praises his students for their dedication and hard work. "These six kids are the strength of the program," he said. "Everyone says it's Pat Lamboni's program, but it's not me at all. I just sit here and organize and guide—I don't work at the high schools. I don't put in the time for the students. Our students set the precedent and everyone who comes after them has to live up to what they've done," he added.

Of the seven students who graduated in the program last year, six went on to graduate school at the University of Kentucky, Louisiana State University, Northern Illinois University, Old Dominion University, Marshall University and Morningside College. "The other student got a job right away at Union Memorial Sports Medicine in Baltimore which is one of the biggest in the state," said Lamboni.

A 1991 SSU graduate, Joe Blauser is currently a graduate assistant at Marshall University. He is appreciative of the sports medicine experience he got at Parkside High during his senior year.

"I got a lot of hands-on experience which was invaluable as far as my evaluation skills were concerned," said Blauser. "I was forced to make my own decisions and as a result, my confidence level really increased. Here at Marhsall undergraduates don't get as much hands-on experience. Students work only one semester as an intern, and even then, they are supervised by a graduate student. This doesn't force them to make their own decisions and I see a difference between their confidence level and that of the SSU students," he added.

The athletic training program at SSU is designed to meet the National Athletic Trainers Association (NATA) requirements. Toward the end of their senior year, students have to pass a certification exam. According to Lamboni, of the 40 or 50 people who have gone through the program, only two are not certified and that's through choice. And about 95 percent of the athletic training graduates are still working in the field.

Former student, Jeff Wood, is now the athletic trainer at Cherokee High School in Marlton, NJ. "I've seen all of the programs around," said Wood. "Half of the schools don't offer what SSU's program does. It's probably the best on the East Coast regardless of the size of the school because it gives you an overall taste of things you could experience out in the field.

"Because of Pat's ties with Hunter Smith, I was able to do summer internships with the Indianapolis Colts and the Philadelphia Eagles," added Wood. "I still work summers with the Eagles. I never would have benefited from the ties Pat has with the NFL without having been at Salisbury State," he said.

"People go away to college and come away with no hard labor skills. That isn't the case with SSU's program—you know your job when you're done. One of my former students from Cherokee High is now interning at SSU—I encourage my students to go to Salisbury State and take advantage of an excellent program," he added.

University Offers an Array of Academic Aid to Students Based on Merit

Salisbury State University awards some $500,000 worth of academic scholarships annually to some of the top high school students from Maryland and its surrounding states. Scholarships are based on the student's academic performance in high school and the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) results.

The amount of the individual scholarships ranges from $1,000 to $5,000 and most are renewable for four years.

In addition to memorial, Alumni and full-tuition Presidential scholarships, awards are given from the Charles R. and Martha N. Fulton School of Liberal Arts, the Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology and the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business. Scholarships also are awarded to deserving students in any area of study from a million dollar scholarship fund set up last year by Allan and Patti Guerrieri of Ocean City.

Salisbury State attracts students from all counties in Maryland and has students attending from nearby states, particularly from Delaware, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

The admissions application automatically qualifies students for consideration for these scholarships. Normally the minimum requirements for consideration for scholarships are a 3.25 high school record in academic subjects and 1150 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, with a minimum of 500 in the verbal portion. Entering freshmen who meet minimum requirements are contacted by the appropriate awarding group.

Need-based financial aid totaling $5.5 million is also awarded in the form of grants, loans and College Work Study jobs. The University employs some one-fourth of its full-time students who earn $1.5 million annually through the Work Experience Program. Students may work in areas related to their career fields, and the University attempts to match abilities and interests to the job.

Salisbury State University is a four-year multi-purpose liberal arts and professional university with an enrollment of some 5,884. SSU offers degree programs in 32 disciplines and six graduate degree programs.

Located on the Eastern Shore 20 miles from the Chesapeake Bay, Salisbury is 2 1/2 hours from Baltimore, Washington, D.C., Norfolk, VA and Wilmington, DE. It is a half hour from Ocean City, MD.

Education Department Helps Local Students STEPP Out

If you ask a group of sixth graders at Woodson Middle School in Crisfield what STEPP means, they will proudly tell you that it means "Striving to Excel Personally and Professionally."

Donning special red and black T-shirts which they designed themselves, these 20 students might be spotted on the steps of Independence Hall, touring the new Ward Museum of Wildfowl Art or attending a career fair in science and mathematics.

They are participating in a special project which is being sponsored by the Education Department at Salisbury State. STEPP encourages minority students to earn good grades, to go to college and to consider careers in teaching.

Project director Dr. Ellen V. Whitford explains that STEPP was developed in response to a national and local need for minority teachers.

"Since public schools serve students from a variety of cultural, racial and religious backgrounds, it follows that the teachers in the schools should also reflect that cultural diversity," said Whitford. "Students should learn that teachers, too, can come from many different backgrounds.

"In addition, minority teachers can break down stereotypes and serve as role models who may encourage minority children to strive for success," she continued. "Unfortunately, there is a greater need for minority teachers than there are minority individuals who are planning careers in teaching. STEPP is designed as an intervention program to encourage and nurture minority students who have the potential to become teachers," she said.

The students in STEPP, 20 sixth-grade boys and girls, were selected by their teachers because they have the academic ability to go to college. In sixth grade, students start making decisions about the courses they will take and the subjects they will study. If students choose courses which will not prepare them for college, they may get behind before they know it.

STEPP's activities are designed to help these students develop positive attitudes toward school and toward themselves.

"For example, they went on a field trip to the historic areas of Philadelphia and had special lessons at school on American history," explained Whitford. "For them, Independence Hall and the Liberty Bell are more than bits of history from textbooks—they've actually seen them," she said.

Other activities assure that a college campus is not a foreign or unfriendly place. SSU's Education Department faculty recently treated them to a pizza party along with a tour of the campus. And there are plans to visit other campuses as well.

Education majors at SSU are scheduled to visit Woodson Middle School this spring and work on special projects with the STEPP students. Some of the STEPP students will attend a special math and science summer program which will allow them to stay on the University's campus for two weeks.

Still other activities encourage them to work toward helping others. Students who are considering careers in teaching should have the chance to experience the rewards of reading a story to a child who can't yet read or of helping a fellow student solve a homework question. The STEPP students are planning a service project for this spring which will allow them to volunteer their time working with other students.

Parent involvement has been an important part of the STEPP program from the outset. Mrs. Cherylle Collier-Mills, faculty sponsor of the program, contacted the parents and described the program to them in letters and home visits. Parents have served as chaperones on field trips and have given their suggestions for program activities.

"There are several key people responsible for the success of this program," said Whitford. "First is Mrs. Collier-Mills, faculty advisor and a teacher at Woodson Middle School, who is herself an excellent role model for the STEPP students—or her 'Stepp Children' as she calls them. Woodson principal Dr. Leo Lawson has given this project his full support and Dr. H DeWayne Whittington, superintendent of the Somerset County school district, has made resources of the district available for the project," she said.

The STEPP program is funded through the Lisa Kolodny Memorial Fund. This fund was established with the Salisbury State University Foundation to encourage volunteer activities in the schools in memory of Lisa Kolodny, an SSU education major who was tragically killed in a fire. Her grandparents set up this memorial fund in the hope that it would benefit children in the community.

"And through this project, students are already benefiting," said Whitford. "If the project is successful and some of these children do go on to become teachers, even other children will benefit. It's a long-term investment, but hopefully there will be significant returns for education on the Eastern Shore."

Faculty, Staff, Aid Minority Enrollment Here

Salisbury State University's faculty and staff are making a financial commitment to help increase the campus' minority enrollment.

"We are competing with other colleges and universities which offer scholarships to attract minority students," said Leon Burks, associate dean of admissions at SSU, which currently has the lowest percentage of minority students among four-year colleges and universities in the University of Maryland System.

"Understanding SSU's situation," said Burks, who initiated efforts to establish the scholarship, "the faculty and staff here have taken it upon themselves to help in the initial funding of this minority scholarship."

"We believe," said Burks, "that by establishing the Charles H. Chipman Scholarship we will enhance the ability of the University to attract minority students and improve the harmony among all students here."

Thus far, the University community has donated $3,000 toward the Charles H. Chipman Scholarship fund.

Dr. Chipman moved to Salisbury in 1915 and for the next half century was the prime mover in promoting advancement for African-Americans through education in Wicomico County and on the Eastern Shore. He ultimately served as president of the Maryland Education Association. He was a respected and beloved leader in the Salisbury business and religious communities. Salisbury State awarded him an honorary doctorate in 1974.

The SSU Chipman Scholarship will be based on the student's high school record and ACT or SAT results upon entering SSU. However, if students are academically equal, then financial need probably will be the determining factor for the award.

"Over the past few years it has been our hope to receive a large financial donation to assist SSU with minority recruitment," said Burks. "This has been difficult and not very successful. Now we are requesting businesses, civic organizations and friends to donate to the Charles H. Chipman Scholarship to provide funding for qualified students. Our faculty and staff have made a strong financial commitment to our students, and we trust the community will want to do likewise."

The Salisbury State University Foundation Office will handle all donations. Please make checks payable to SSU Foundation and indicate C. H. Chipman Scholarship.

Each Season a Winner for Sea Gull Sports Teams

The 1991-92 sports year proved to be quite successful for most of the Sea Gull teams once again as Salisbury State not only dominated its conference, but also made a splash on the national scene as well.

For the fifth straight year, SSU was the class of the Eastern States Athletic Conference, winning five of the ESAC's 11 sports championships. The Gulls claimed the conference's all-sports trophy, signifying overall athletic supremacy, for the fifth straight year. Salisbury won ESAC titles in volleyball, women's cross country, men's basketball, softball and men's tennis.

On the national scene, Salisbury State had a representative in the NCAA Tournament during each of the three playing seasons: fall, winter and spring. In the fall, the field hockey squad made its eighth consecutive national tournament appearance, advancing to the quarterfinal round before falling to eventual champion Trenton State. SSU finished 11-6-1 and had two players, Cheryl Ish and Tracy Wolfe, honored as first-team All-Americans.

The winter months were dominated by the men's basketball team, which climbed to number two in the national rankings while winning 27 straight games. The Gulls fell one game shy of the coveted "Final Four," however, losing to Jersey City State in the national quarterfinals of the NCAA Tournament. SSU finished 28-2 overall. Forward Andre Foreman, who became the NCAA's all-time scoring leader for Division III, was named the national Player-of-the-Year.

In the spring, the men's lacrosse team made its fourth straight NCAA Tournament appearance. The Gulls had their bid for a second consecutive trip to the championship game cut short by Ithaca in the quarterfinal round, however, and finished the year with a 12-2 mark. Junior defenseman Mike Esham was selected as a first-team All-American, while Kevin Hohner was named to the second team and Jeff Chenowith was picked on the third team.

Numerous other individuals recorded outstanding seasons and performances through the year as well. Some of these standouts were: Lisa Trelease, who won the conference championship in both singles and doubles tennis for the second straight year; Tim Smith and Erin Green on the men's and women's cross country and track teams, two excellent runners who just missed qualifying for the NCAA Championships; Mary Jo Tantalo, who set three new swimming records; Pierre Copes, the football team's all-purpose performer who led the club in four offensive categories; and Jennifer Boone, the basketball team's sharpshooting guard who finished among the national leaders in scoring.

paid for with non-tax dollars.

The most expensive construction project in SSU history, Fulton Hall is an 85,000 square foot complex which covers approximately the same amount of land as Holloway Hall, the campus administration building, and provides some 12,000 square feet more space than the new Guerrieri University Center, which opened in 1988.

A sister structure to Holloway Hall, whose soaring classical columns and weathered copper cupola have become emblematic of the University, Fulton Hall also is Georgian in style with Flemish bond brickwork, a high peaked slate roof, a two-story columned entrance, and ornamental bricking. Roof dormers, curving pathways, small brick plazas and a gently arced one-story portico add to its friendliness.

Like Holloway, Fulton Hall is less a massive structure than a series of wings, each with its own personality and function. The new complex houses a variety of disciplines and brings together under one roof for the first time in the history of the University, performing and fine arts programs in the Fulton School of Liberal Arts.

Dr. Sharon Rubin, dean of the Fulton School, anticipates a "synergy" taking place between the different arts, now in the same building. "I anticipate exciting things happening we can't even guess about yet," she said.

"By having all of our fine arts together we can encourage the kind of cutting edge collaboration and exploration which is so exciting in a university setting," said Rubin.

Fulton Hall was designed by Gzesh and Associates in joint venture with Bohlin, Powell, Larkin and Cywinski of Pittsburgh and Baltimore. The contractor was J. Roland Dashiell and Sons of Salisbury.

prepared to face her students. "Conducting your own research makes you more independent in your lab work. You are better able to anticipate what you need, and what the students will ask."

This year faculty are even more interested now that they have seen it work. SSU's vice president of academic affairs, Dr. K. Nelson Butler, termed it "one of the most meaningful educational experiences in 20 years of higher education." He then allocated $5,000 in additional funds to support undergraduate research.

An additional 14 students are participating this year, bringing the number up to 50. This year selected students will also chair their sections.

With several papers from last year submitted for publication, and students going on to graduate programs, Creighton is enthusiastic about the future. "Undergraduate research is one of the most beneficial experiences a student can engage in. I'm gratified to see other schools in the University beginning their own symposia this year. It's an exercise where everyone wins."

Middle School Students Enjoy Halloween Treat

Students from the Eastern Shore filled Halloween bags with facts and dates from American history when they joined students from the University for a field trip to the historic sites of Philadelphia on October 30.

Approximately 130 middle school students along with teachers and guidance counselors from Wicomico, Worcester and Somerset counties participated. The trip included stops at the Philadelphia Visitors' Center, Independence Hall, the Liberty Bell and Franklin Court. According to some students, the most important fact they learned on the trip is that Independence Mall is not a shopping mall.

The middle school students are part of the "Shore Future" project, a cooperative effort of local schools and Salisbury State to encourage students to develop positive attitudes toward school, set goals for graduation from high school and start thinking about the possibility of attending college.

Students from Woodson Middle School in Marion also went along. These students are part of the STEPP program—Students "Striving to Excel Personally and Professionally." They are part of an SSU initiative to encourage middle school students to consider careers in education.

The trip was organized by Dr. Ellen V. Whiford and Mrs. Judith Kennan who coordinate the Shore Future project and the STEPP program for the SSU Education Department. Salisbury State students majoring in secondary social studies planned lessons and activities which highlighted this educational experience. The students planned and taught lessons before the trip and developed activities—such as a scavenger hunt—which focused on the important lessons to be learned during the trip. After the trip several groups of students wrote school newspaper articles describing what they had seen and learned.

The SSU students who volunteered to teach lessons and chaperone the trip are: Diane Herz, Katherine Jones, Jeff Payne, Dawn Sheetz and Ted Steels. Also, SSU education majors Marie Rottiers, Melissa Thomas and Tracy Slezak chaperoned.

showing in it," said the project's director, Dr. I. Eugene White, assistant professor of psychology at SSU. "We planned for an enrollment of 15 students and were happily surprised when 23 registered for the tutor training.

"We're finding," he continued, "that many students want to help those in need through volunteer work. This course will show them one effective way to do it while earning credits toward their undergraduate degrees."

The three-credit, one-semester course, called "Literacy and Community Involvement," is offered to education majors as an elective and is open to any other undergraduate for general education credit.

During the first four weeks of the course, the students will undergo intensive training as literacy tutors under the overall direction of Dr. Ellen Whitford, assistant professor in the SSU School of Education and Professional Studies. Working with her will be Dr. Amy S. Meekins, assistant professor of education, and Dr. Patricia Killian, assistant professor of English.

When they are ready for tutoring, the students will be given their choice of working with an individual in one of three groups: adult illiterates, elementary school children who need help, or individuals of foreign descent, usually Hispanic or Asian, who are using English as a second language.

Illiterate adults will be selected for tutoring through Literacy Works/Project Read at the Wicomico County Library. The SSU tutors who choose to work with adults will be trained by the program's coordinators, Linda Parry and Salee German.

"We think the SSU program is a wonderful opportunity for us," Parry said. "We are continually looking for volunteers to tutor adults seeking help."

Elementary school children will be selected for the tutoring by public school officials. Marian B. Church, county supervisor of elementary education, said, "We feel the services of the SSU tutors will be of tremendous benefit to the students of our county who are in need of additional assistance."

Persons of foreign descent in need of tutoring will be selected with the help of both school officials and the Eastern Baptist Association, a local agency working with Hispanics and Asians.

Dr. James P. Cooper, migrant coordinator for the Baptist Association, pointed out there are many individuals with valuable job skills who cannot get jobs making use of them because they cannot read or write English. "The program definitely will be of help," he said.

The SSU tutors will work with their subjects four hours a week for 10 weeks under the supervision of SSU faculty members and officials of the outside agencies involved. Testing before and after the tutoring will measure its effectiveness.

After completing the tutoring training, the students will finish the semester with a weekly seminar conducted by SSU faculty. Designed to enhance the student's awareness of social and psychological issues related to illiteracy, the seminar will explore such subjects as cultural diversity in the classroom, local politics and educational policy-making, the philosophy of caring and service, and the history of poverty on the Eastern Shore.

In the second semester, the student may elect to continue tutoring their subjects under faculty supervision for additional credits toward their degree and, perhaps, build up a continuing relationship with their proteges.

During the second year of the project, the course will be repeated with a new group of students. At the end of the two-year period the effectiveness of the program will be assessed by evaluators both within and outside the University.

Both White and Whitford, noting the value of the program to the college students and the community, expressed the hope that at the end of the two-year program means will be found to make the literacy corps a permanent part of the University's academic program.

Last year White directed another of SSU's community outreach programs in which students spent a week prior to the start of classes helping to build homes for the underprivileged through the local Habitat for Humanity program.

Whitford also has been active in outreach programs. She supervised the Shore Future project in which SSU student volunteers tutored at-risk middle school students. She also directed the federally funded Shore Revitalization Project aimed at helping dislocated workers.

She currently is working on a project at the Woodson Middle School in Crisfield designed to encourage minority students to become teachers.
